29. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the Nirex discussion document "The Way Forward".

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No representations have been received on this document.

School Management

30. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the timetable for the implementation of the school management proposals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We hope to announce our conclusions following the consultation period before the end of the year and to introduce a Bill in the new year. Assuming enactment by October 1988, the first board constitutions would be issued for consultation in March 1989 and the boards would begin to operate at the commencement of the 1989-90 school year.

32. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has now received on his proposed reforms for the management of schools; and if he will make a statement.

33. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many responses he has received to his discussion document on Scottish education; and if he will make a statement.

58. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has how received on the proposals contained in his paper "School Management and the Role of Parents"; and if he will make a statement.

53. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of Friday 20 November on the consultative paper "School Management and the Role of Parents", if he will specify under what headings and categories he has catalogued the responses received to date, with specific reference to those submissions commenting on the ceiling proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responses have been divided into two categories; those requesting confidentiality and those available for public inspection. Copies of the latter are being placed on open file in the library of St. Andrew's house. I have arranged for further copies to be available in the House Library.

54. Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the responses so far to the school management consultation paper.

Mr. Rifkind: We have received some 7,600 responses. We are considering these carefully and hope to announce our conclusions shortly.

57. Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to complete his consideration of the representations he has received on the consultation paper "School Management and the Role of Parents", and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I hope to announce my conclusions before the turn of the year.

New Towns

34. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the future of Scotland's new towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The new towns continue to make a significant contribution to economic growth and employment opportunities in Scotland. The Government adhere to the decision, announced in 1984, that no Scottish new town development corporation should begin the wind-up process before 1 April 1990. It also remains our intention to reassess before that date the probable timing of wind-up of the five development corporations, taking account of developments since 1984 and the circumstances and prospects of each town.

Regional Aid

35. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to investigate alleged abuses in regional aid.

Mr. Rifkind: All projects in receipt of grant under regional aid schemes are closely monitored where abuse of the schemes is suspected. Cases are investigated thoroughly and reported to the appropriate authorities for consideration of prosecution.

Industrial Investment

36. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the current level of investment in industry in Scotland and its impact on the Scottish community, in particular in the Inverclyde area.

Mr. Lang: Recent CBI and Scottish business surveys report an improvement in investment intentions in Scottish manufacturing, and higher investment will enhance the competitiveness of Scottish industry. This can only benefit the Scottish community.

As regards Inverclyde district, regional selective assistance offers of £3·4 million were made over the period 1 January 1985 to 31 October 1987. These were associated with project costs of £183·7 million and some 960 new or safeguarded jobs.

Royal College of Nursing

37. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Royal College of Nursing (Scotland).

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I met representatives of the Scottish board of the Royal College of Nursing on 15 October last.

Public Sector House Sales

38. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what figures he has available on the sale of public sector houses in Scotland since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Over the period 1980 to June 1987 some 106,000 public sector sales have taken place; this includes sales of local authority, new town and Scottish Special Housing Association houses, both to sitting tenants and others. The yearly figures of sales are contained in the table:

	Number
1981	11,170
[1]1982	15,106
1983	18,315
1985	15,630
[1]1986	14,152
[1,2]1987	7,848

[1] These figures are based on incomplete returns.
[2] These figures relate to the period January-June.

Job Vacancies

39. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many job vacancies are registered at Scottish jobcentres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The number of vacancies notified and remaining unfilled on 2 October 1987 in Scottish jobcentres was 25,446 (including 3,421 community programme vacancies). It is estimated that only around one third of all vacancies are notified to jobcentres.

The continuing upward trend in the level of unfilled vacancies is encouraging. The latest figures show an increase of 4,000 over the corresponding figure last year.

Disabled People

40. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to meet the Glasgow Forum on disability to consider the full implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 in Scotland and its input into joint planning in terms of the National Health Service (Amendment Act) 1986.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have no plans at present to meet the Glasgow Forum on disability. As indicated to the hon. Member in my reply of 10 November, the timing of implementation of provisions in the Act not already commenced or, as in the case of section 13, proposed for commencement will depend on the availability of resources. Consultations on this will be held at the appropriate stage with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

On joint planning, I refer to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member on 24 July 1987. Any involvement by the forum in joint planning in the Glasgow area would be a matter for local determination.

Denmark (Ministerial Visit)

41. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Denmark by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Stirling (Mr. Forsyth).

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I visited Denmark between 23 and 25 November to study the system of school management and arrangements for parental involvement in education. I am most grateful to the Danish Government and to the authorities, organisations and schools which I visited and with whom I had discussions.

Parents in Denmark are extensively involved in all aspects of the running of the school system at municipality and school level. In particular, every publicly managed school providing education for children undergoing compulsory education is supervised by a school board whose members are elected by and from the parents and guardians of children involved in the schools; the school principal and representatives of the teachers, pupils and the municipality attend meetings of the school board and participate in discussion but cannot vote. The school board can discuss, make proposals and comment on all matters relating to the school. In many areas they are substantially involved in staffing appointments and have delegated powers to decide on the use of a substantial share of the budget allocated to the school. The statutory powers of school boards include drawing up school rolls and approving the distribution of work among teachers, the weekly timetable and the educational materials which the school intends to use.

The overriding purpose of the school board system is to further co-operation between the school and the homes of the pupils. The work of the boards appears to contribute substantially to securing a successful and responsive education service. Relationships between professional educators and parents appear to be greatly enhanced by the existence of formal mechanisms for involving parents closely with their schools.

Electricity Industry (Privatisation)

43. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the chairman of the South of Scotland Electricity Board to discuss privatisation of the electricity industry.

Mr. Lang: I met the chairman of the South of Scotland Electricity Board on 17 November to discuss electricity privatisation and other related matters. My right hon. and learned Friend expects to have full discussions with the chairmen of the South of Scotland Electricity Board and the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board before taking decisions on the structure of a privatised industry in Scotland.

Business Relocation

44. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many businesses have relocated from England to Scotland since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. Decisions to relocate are best determined within the constraints of companies' own commercial judgment.

Scottish Parliament

45. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations calling for the establishment of a Scottish Parliament he has received from (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland since 11 June.

Mr. Rifkind: In that period, I have received 40 letters in favour of some form of devolution, of which 38 were from Scotland and two from England.

Small Firms

46. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what figures he has available for the number of small firms operating in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Comprehensive information on small firms is not available. Information for the period 1980-85 for Scotland and the other regions of the United Kingdom on the stock of firms registered for value added tax was published in "British Business" on 31 July 1987, and information for the period 1980-83 on changes in the stock by size of turnover was published in "British Business" on 2 November 1984. Copies of these publications have been placed in the Library.

The Government have introduced a succession of measures to stimulate small business development, and these have gone a long way both towards lifting many of the administrative burdens faced by small companies and towards helping small companies to become more flexible and responsive to market pressures. In this context the small firms sector in Scotland has made an increasing contribution in recent years to employment and economic development.

Local Government

48. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total administrative costs, including wages and salaries, of local government in Scotland in 1986-87.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The best available estimate of the costs classified by Scottish local authorities as central administrative costs, including wages and salaries, in respect of relevant current expenditure in 1986-87 is £141·3 million.

Psychogeriatric Unit, Rutherglen

49. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the time scale for the provision of the proposed psychogeriatric unit at Rutherglen.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Provision of the proposed psychogeriatric unit will depend on the outcome of two strategic reviews which the Greater Glasgow health board is presently conducting on services for the elderly, and on psychiatric services (about which a consultative document has recently been issued).

Financial Services

50. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current level of employment in the financial sector in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The number of employees in employment in Scotland in division 8 of the standard industrial classification—which covers banking, finance, insurance, business services and leasing—totalled 165,000 in June 1987. This represents an increase of around 47,000 or 40 per cent. since 1977.

Current employment estimates for the financial services sector alone are not available from official sources. The 1984 census of employment, which is the latest available, indicates that there were around 72,000 employees employed in financial services in Scotland in September of that year.

The financial services sector makes a vital contribution to the Scottish economy both directly and indirectly, and it has been amongst the fastest growing employment sectors in recent years.

Educational Facilities (Strathclyde)

51. Mr. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will be meeting officials of Strathclyde regional council to discuss educational facilities.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Midlothian (Surgical Waiting Lists)

52. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what communication he has received from Lothian health board regarding waiting times of patients requiring surgery who reside in the parliamentary constituency of Midlothian.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Industrial Regeneration (Renfrew)

55. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, in the light of the announcement of 500 redundancies at FKI (Halifax), formerly Babcocks, at its Renfrew plant, he has any plans to visit Renfrew and meet the local council to discuss industrial regeneration in the area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to visit Renfrew to meet Renfrew district council.

I am confident that the proposed enterprise initiative for Renfrew, to which the district council and Strathclyde regional council will both be contributing, will help to create new and invigorated economic activity in the area, and improve the environment for those who live and work there.

Primary Health Care

56. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the White Paper on primary health care in the National Health Service, as it relates to Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have received 13 written representations since the White Paper "Promoting Better Health" was published on 25 November.

Forestry Grants

59. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the direct cost to his Department of forestry grants for 1986-87.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total amounts of grants paid to private woodland owners by the Forestry Commission in 1986-87, for new planting and restocking, were as follows:

Scotland	4,592,469
England	2,232,757
Wales	386,459

Glasgow District

61. Mr. McTaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the value of the capital allocation to Glasgow district in (a) 1978 and (b) 1987; and if he will express these figures as a percentage in real terms.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Capital allocations for housing are issued on two blocks, to cover expenditure on local authority stock and on the private sector. Glasgow district council's capital allocations in 1978-79 totalled £66·924 million. For 1987-88, the council has received allocations totalling £137·65 million, which represents 101·2 per cent. of the 1978-79 figure in real terms.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to whether the Data Protection Registrar has used his powers under section 36(5) of the Data Protection Act to report on how the use of personal data collected for the community charge affects his functions of supervising the workings of the Data Protection Act.

Mr. Lang: In his third annual report to Parliament in July 1987, made in accordance with section 36(5) of the Data Protection Act 1984, the Data Protection Registrar commented at page 4 on community charge registers.

Childhood Cancers

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to introduce case-control studies of childhood cancers in the areas around the Holy Loch, Hunterston and Chapelcross/Wigton Bay and Dounreay.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The study carried out by the information and statistics division of the Common Services Agency for the Scottish Health Service into the incidence of leukaemia in under 25 year olds throughout Scotland has been passed to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment for its expert advice on how best to proceed. I shall be considering further investigations, such as case-control studies, on the basis of their advice.

South of Scotland Electricity Board (Borrowing)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what rate of return he expects to receive from the South of Scotland Electricity Board on the outstanding borrowing from him over the next 10 years.

Mr. Lang: I am advised by the South of Scotland Electricity Board that at 30 November 1987 the average rate of interest on its outstanding borrowing was 11·8 per cent. The board's borrowings are expected to be repaid by instalments over periods ranging from one year to 21 years.

South of Scotland Electricity Board (Advertising)

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the amount spent by the South of Scotland Electricity Board on advertising in each year from 1983-84 to 1986-87 and projected spend in 1987-88 and 1988-89, showing in each case the sums spent on (a) television, (b) newspapers, (c) hoardings and billboards and (d) others.

Mr. Lang: This is a commercial matter for the board and I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Salmonid Farming

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the range and type of resources directed by his Department to the research into anti-predator devices and measures in the marine salmonid farming industry.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Part of the time of four scientists at the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland's marine laboratory is currently allocated to this work. Three years ago these resources were estimated to amount to three quarters of a man year and at present the effort is in the region of one man year.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the resources devoted by his Department to research programmes which examine the effects of predators on the transmission of diseases at marine salmonid farming sites.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is not at present undertaking any such research projects.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is in a position to estimate the financial loss incurred by the marine salmonid in each of the past five years farming due to bird and seal predation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The most recent estimate of damage by seals showed that in the 12 month period to July 1985 damage amounting to some £170,000 to £250,000 was caused. The estimate was prepared on the basis of returns made to a questionnaire issued in 1985 to the salmon industry. No corresponding estimate of financial loss due to bird predation is available.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline departmental responsibility, within his Department, for the provision of advice and research into the effects of predators in marine salmonid farms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The marine laboratory of the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is charged with the responsibility for providing advice on and research into the effects of predators in marine salmonid farms.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many licences under section 10(1)(c)(i) of the Conservation of Seals Act 1970 were granted to marine salmonid farmers in each of the past four years; and how many common and grey seals were killed under these licences for each of the past four years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

	Licences granted	Number reported killed under licence
1984
Common seals	2	4
Grey seals	—	—
Common seals	10	3
Common seals	8	10
Grey seals	7	3
1987
Common seals	17	3
Grey seals	[1]19	[2]—

[1] To date.
[2] Figures not yet available.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how large the salmon farming industry in Scotland (a) was three years ago and (b) is at present.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The industry has increased from 129 sites in 1984 (comprising 46 freshwater sites and 83 saltwater sites) with a total production of 3,912 tonnes, to 307 sites at present (comprising 108 freshwater sites and 199 seawater sites). The forecast production for 1987 is around 16,000 tonnes. Manpower in the industry was 515 full-time (128 part-time) in 1984 and 733 full-time (206 part-time) in 1986. Figures for 1987 are not yet available.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources his Department (a) provided three years ago and (b) provides at present by way of advice and training to those engaged in the salmon farming industry.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland's marine laboratory has in hand a programme of research aimed at the development of acoustic devices to scare seals from marine salmon farms. It is understood that the fish farming industry is undertaking on-site evaluation of the effectiveness of several prototype devices.

Common Seals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the approximate number of common seals on the west coast of Scotland and around the Western Isles.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland obtains advice from the Natural Environment Research Council as to estimates of seal populations.

The most recent estimates obtained from the council in respect of common seal populations in the Outer Hebrides and the Inner Hebrides and the west coast of Scotland were provided by surveys carried out by the Sea Mammal Research Institute in 1974 and 1980 respectively. These showed a minimum total population in these regions of some 5,800 animals comprising some 1,300 animals in the Outer Hebrides and some 4,500 animals in the Inner Hebrides and the west coast.

Children (Alleged Abduction)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why no criminal charges have been brought against the three men alleged to have abducted three children, Craig Park, Mark Lane and John Love, from their home in Bornbrae street, Larkhill on 17 September.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Solicitor-General for Scotland has already written to the hon. Member about this case, and has explained that the Crown's reasons for declining to prosecutre are confidential. The hon. Member may however be assured that the matter was carefully considered, and that the Solicitor-General for Scotland fully agreed with the procurator fiscal's decision against prosecution.

Forestry Commission (Regional Advisory Committee)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the names of all the Forestry Commission's regional advisory committee members, together with details of the relevant background experience of each.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

NORTHERN IRELAND

Child Welfare

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to seek to increase the minimum and maximum sentences available for those found guilty of sexually interfering with handicapped children while entrusted with their care.

Mr. Stanley: There are no mandatory minimum penalties for sexual offences against children in any part of the United Kingdom and there are no plans to introduce such penalties in Northern Ireland.

The maximum penalty for certain homosexual offences against children is life; for indecent assault it is 10 years, and for rape, it is life. It is proposed to increase the maximum sentence for attempted rape of a child and for indecent assault of a girl in a forthcoming Order in Council.

The penalties for other sexual offences which may involve children are being kept under close review.

Fair Employment

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he is to publish his White Paper outlining the Government's response to the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights report on fair employment.

Mr. Viggers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 12 November at column 308.

Anthony Hughes

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when and where a post mortem was held on Anthony Hughes, who died at Loughall police station in County Armagh; and what was the result of the post mortem.

The Attorney-General [holding answer 1 December 1987]: I have been asked to reply as the Lord Chancellor is responsible for the work of coroners in Northern Ireland.

A post mortem was held in Craigavon area hospital on 9 May 1987 and a full autopsy report will be available for the purposes of an inquest which is to be held in due course.

Under-fives

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to promote provision for under-fives throughout Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 December 1987]: In the personal social services field, services for the under-fives including social work support for families, childminders and day nurseries, are an integral part of the Government's overall preventive strategy on child care, whose development was identified as a specific objective for the next five years in the regional strategy published by the Department of Health and Social Services in August this year. A copy of this document is available in the Library.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Severe Weather Payments

62. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of arrangements for the payment of severe and cold weather payments to pensioners in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 27 October at columns 468-9. The relevant regulations were laid before the House on 26 November.

Eye Tests

Mr Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the National League of the Blind and Disabled regarding abolition of free eye tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what reply he is sending to the representations made to him by the general secretary of the National League of the Blind and Disabled in regard to his proposal to abolish free eye tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I understand that the league has writen to my right hon. Friend, but its letter has not yet been received.

AIDS

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what contingency plans his Department has in the case of an AIDS epidemic among heterosexuals in the United Kingdom within the next five years.

Mr. Newton: The low rates of HIV infection currently found amongst heterosexuals in the United Kingdom suggest that it is very unlikely that there will be epidemic spread of heterosexually acquired HIV in the next five years. The public education programme on AIDS prevention is designed to ensure this situation is maintained. All health authorities in England have prepared plans for dealing with HIV infection and AIDS, and the costs of providing AIDS-related services are kept under close review in the light of the latest information available about the spread of HIV infection.

Mrs. Susan Halligan

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when Mrs. Susan Halligan of 29 Worcester road, Birkenhead will receive the invalid care allowance for which she applied in September 1986.

Mr. Scott: I regret that the processing of Mrs. Halligan's claim has taken much longer than is usual. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the outcome of pregnancy following infertility treatment and in-vitro fertilisation, and on the extent to which these treatments may have contributed to the rise in the rates of multiple births.

Mr. Newton: The Department does not collect data on the outcome of pregnancy in relation to different infertility treatments. However, studies are being carried out at the national perinatal epidemiology unit, which is funded by the Department, and at the Medical Research Council which should shed light on the incidence of multiple pregnancies linked to these treatments. We expect both studies to be completed in about a year's time.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will detail for each year since 1979 the numbers of (a) pensioners and (b) other claimants who have drawn supplementary benefit for five or more years.

Mr. Portillo: The information is as follows:

	Supplementary pension claimants (thousands)	Supplementary allowance claimants (thousands)
November 1979	1,053	234
December 1980	1,054	251
December 1981	1,087	281
December 1982	1,090	308
December 1983	1,057	348
December 1984	1,041	409
February 1986	1,026	535

Source: Annual statistical inquiries.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people, shown by age and marital status, are in receipt of the long-term rate of supplementary benefit for the latest date and for equivalent dates in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member all the information that he requests. Such information as can be provided will not be available until the new year. I shall let the hon. Member have a further reply then.

Unemployed Benefit Recipients

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many previously unemployed benefit recipients are not required to be available for work at the latest date and for equivalent dates in each of the past 10 years; and how many previously unemployed men aged 60 and over are in receipt of the long-term rate of supplementary benefit at the latest date and for equivalent dates over the same period.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However the following table shows the number of men aged 60-64 who receive supplementary benefit. These are the latest available figures.

	Number
December 1981	19,000
December 1982	40,000
December 1982	114,000
December 1984	131,000
February 1986	136,000

Since May 1983 the long-term scale rate has been allowed in all cases of men over 60. Before that date it was used only for men not required to be available for work who had received benefit for over 12 months, or were over pension age.

Men over pension age have been excluded from the table.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when the industrial injuries advisory council's reports on halogenated aliphatic hydrocarbons and non-ionising radiation are to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Both reports were published yesterday. The report on non-ionising radiation recommends that no changes be made to the existing legislation. The report on halogenated aliphatic hydrocarbons and n-hexane recommends that the following conditions be added to the schedule of prescribed industrial diseases:

(i) Damage to the liver or kidneys due to exposure to carbon tetrachloride.
(ii) Damage to the liver or kidneys due to exposure to trichloromethane (chloroform).
(iii) Central nervous system dysfunction and associated gastrointestinal disorders due to exposure to chloromethane (methyl chloride).
(iv) Peripheral neuropathy due to exposure to n-hexane or methyl n-butyl ketone.

The Government accept the council's recommendations and regulations will be laid on 11 December to bring them into operation on 4 January 1988.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the current cost of answering (a) written and (b) an oral parliamentary question; and if he will list the total annual cost of answering parliamentary questions.

Mr. Wakeham: The cost of replying to parliamentary questions varies considerably, but the current average cost is estimated at £45 for written answers and £75 for oral answers. Records of the total annual cost of answering parliamentary questions are not kept.

DEFENCE

British Military and Naval Presence

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list every country and dependency where there is a permanent British military or naval presence, the annual costs to public funds of each such presence, and the proportion that represents in each case of the total cost of such a presence.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Countries and dependencies (outside the NATO area except Gibraltar) where there is a permanent British military or naval presence, and the annual cost to United Kingdom public funds of those forces, together with the proportion of the total cost of the presence in each case which this cost represents, are as follows:

	Estimated Cost (1987-88) £ million	Proportion of Total Cost per cent.
Hong Kong	55	25
British Indian Ocean Territory (Diego Garcia)	1	100
Falkland Islands (including South Georgia)	141	100
Gibraltar	79	100
Cyprus (includes SBA and UNFICYP forces)	112	81
Brunei	—	0

We do not maintain forces exclusively for operations in dependencies other than those listed, and costs are not separately identified. These details exclude loan service personnel stationed in a number of countries and dependencies throughout the world. All the costs shown include directly attributable expenditure on capital works and equipment and are running costs for materiel and manpower. The costs of operational headquarters, bases and general operational support have been attributed pro rata.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department takes to implement its equal opportunities employment policy; how many persons of ethnic minority origins are employed in his Department; what proportion that is of the total; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: An action plan has been developed to promote equal opportunities within the Ministry of Defence. Examples of actions taken or in hand are a trial to determine the demand for job-sharing and part-time working; women-only training courses; a survey of the ethnic origins of staff and applicants for employment; the placing of recruitment advertisements in the ethnic press; and initiatives to help people with disabilities. The voluntary survey of the ethnic origins of staff has not yet been completed. To date, of the 43,603 non-industrial staff who have so far responded, 834 or 2 per cent. were from ethnic minorities.

Courts Martial

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the offences for which British soldiers have been convicted by courts martial in each of the last two years, and the sentences that were imposed.

Mr. Freeman: Full details of the offences for which Army service men and service women have been convicted by courts martial are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available statistics, which are shown below for 1985 and 1986, group offences into eight categories. When an individual was convicted of offences from more than one category, he or she has been counted against the most serious category, the order of severity being that shown in the tables. Punishments awarded are also shown in order of severity, decreasing from left to right. When multiple punishments were awarded, the most serious has been counted.

Bullying

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serious individual cases of bullying have been referred to his Department in the last year; and what is the total number of such cases which have been centrally recorded in the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: 13 serious individual cases of bullying which have resulted in court martial action have been referred to my Department in the past year. 11 of these have been in the Army and two in the Royal Marines.

A number of other cases are still under investigation. The relative seriousness of these, and the disciplinary action appropriate, cannot be judged until such investigations are completed. It is not possible to give details of such cases over the past 10 years, as records of these cases have been held centrally only since January 1986.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last year complaints involving bullying have been so numerous or so recurrent in a unit that the matter has been referred to his Department.

Mr. Freeman: During the last year, against the background of allegations in late 1986 about initiation ceremonies in 3 Royal Green Jackets—later proved to be largely baseless—all cases of alleged bullying in the Army have been referred to my Department. To date there have been some 89 cases in all, some of them relating to alleged incidents before this period. Their being reported to MOD is not a function of any marked increase in such incidents, but rather a reflection of how seriously this whole question is being treated.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1984 no disciplinary action has been taken against soldiers who went absent without leave when on their return it was established that the absence was because of bullying.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the right hon. Member to my letter of 3 December. I regret that the information the right hon. Member seeks is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many courts martial there have been in each of the last five years; in how many of these the charge was related to some form of bullying; and in how many there was a guilty verdict.

Mr. Freeman: The numbers of courts martial held in the period 1982-1986 are as follows:

	Royal Navy	Army	Royal Air Force	Total
1982	49	1,148	239	1,436
1983	65	844	237	1,146
1984	73	853	190	1,116
1985	65	845	217	1,127
1986	60	644	144	848

Details are not recorded in a way which would permit the ready identification of those cases in which the charges related to some form of bullying since no offence under the service discipline Acts is defined as such. It is, however, an offence under section 36A of the Naval Discipline Act 1957 and sections 65 of the Army and Air Force Acts 1955 for an officer, warrant officer of non-commissioned officer to strike or otherwise ill-treat a person of inferior rank; and the numbers of courts martial convictions for offences under these sections in the period 1982-1986 are as follows:

	Royal Navy	Army	Royal Air Force	Total
1982	Nil	3	1	4
1983	Nil	17	1	18
1984	5	8	2	15
1985	Nil	15	3	18
1986	Nil	4	4	8

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library details of those allegations of bullying given to newspapers which he reports in his letter of 2 December to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South to have been found to be baseless; and what investigations were carried out to lead his Department to this conclusion.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. I shall do so shortly.

Lieutenant Colonel Macmillan

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will investigate allegations made in a letter passed to him by the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South that men under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Macmillan have been fined excessively for trivial offences; and how many applications to leave his unit have been made in recent months.

Mr. Freeman: The anonymous letter passed to me by the right hon. Member relates to summary disciplinary action taken by Lieutenant Colonel Macmillan as commanding officer of 4th Armoured Division Field Ambulance. In dealing summarily with disciplinary cases, a commanding officer has the widest possible evidence available to him, and it has long been our practice to regard matters of this sort as confidential between the CO and the individual soldiers concerned.

The punishments awarded in each of the cases mentioned in the letter were well within the commanding officer's powers and were correctly entered into unit disciplinary records — which are subject to regular inspection by higher military authority. None of the three cases of alleged excessive fining noted in the letter is as simple as the right hon. Member's correspondent has suggested. In the case of the fine imposed for "an untidy room", the NCO concerned was charged as a result of his room being found, on a six-monthly accommodation check, in an indescribably filthy and unhygenic condition: the fine imposed was the equivalent of 18 days' pay. In another of the cases cited, the charge was not only that the NCO concerned failed to stop on a bicycle when ordered, but that he was riding at night without lights, and behaving in a disorderly manner in front of foreign visitors to the unit: the soldier concerned was fined the equivalent of 19 days' pay. In the third case cited, the NCO concerned was a persistent offender in the late settlement of mess bills, and had been specifically reminded of the due date of the bill in question: he was fined the equivalent of six days' pay. Each of the soldiers concerned had the option of electing to be tried by court martial on the same charges, and none of them has made any complaint or appeal about the summary punishment awarded.

The letter alleges that there has been an undue number of NCOs or soldiers seeking premature transfer from the unit. This is simply not the case. Since the CO took command in January this year, two officers and 10 soldiers have applied for early release or premature posting, for a variety of reasons ranging from family circumstances, to offers of civilian employment, to their volunteering for the airborne or commando forces. The applications for PVR represent some 3·4 per cent. of the unit establishment. Some 70 other soldiers who were eligible to transfer under a trickle posting system have chosen to remain within the unit.

Queen's Dragoon Guards

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will investigate allegations made to him in a letter passed to him by the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South that initiation ceremonies in the Queen's Dragoon Guards for new junior officers involve nakedness and drinking cocktails including urine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: As the allegations made in the anonymous letter passed to me by the right hon. Gentleman give no specific dates of the alleged incidents or the names of those supposedly involved, it has not been possible to initiate a Special Investigation Branch inquiry, as would normally be the case.

Nevertheless, the allegations have caused considerable disquiet, both in my Department and in the regiment and its higher command chain. Very careful inquiries have been carried out within the regiment, under the supervision of the brigade commander, into all aspects of the behaviour alleged in the letter. All available officers of the regiment have been interviewed as part of this process, and I can state that no evidence whatsoever has been found which supports the allegations that newly joined officers of the Queen's Dragoon Guards are initiated by their soldiers in revolting and unseemly drinking rituals.

I have explained to the right hon. Member on previous occasions the difficulty of pursuing conclusively allegations that are unsupported by specific details. Our inquiries have established no accurate basis for the very harmful allegations in this particular letter, against a most distinguished regiment. However, if additional details were forthcoming I would of course be prepared to look further into the matter.

Ministry Police

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his precise responsibilities in relation to the Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Sainsbury: As set out in the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has overall responsibility for the force and, therefore, has to determine policy for its roles, management and administration — including provision of the money, manpower and equipment necessary for it to operate efficiently.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the procedure for lodging complaints against the Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence police are required to follow the same complaints procedures as other United Kingdom civilian police forces. A leaflet explaining the complaints procedure entitled "Complaints against the Police" is available from any police station. A complainant may either write to the chief constable MOD police, or a local police force chief constable, or visit any police station where details will be taken. Alternatively an aggrieved person may authorise someone else to complain on his behalf.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the Ministry of Defence police as to the circumstances in which a young woman outside Greenham Common air base had her fingers deliberately trapped and crushed by an American service man; why no charges were brought against the service man; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: No. I assume that the hon. Member is referring to an incident that occurred in the early hours of 13 November 1987. The individual concerned has lodged a complaint against the police in accordance with the usual procedure. The matter was immediately referred by the chief constable of the MOD police to the Police Complaints Authority in accordance with section 87 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as the nature of the injuries fall within the category for mandatory supervision.

An investigating officer, approved by the Police Complaints Authority, has been appointed and when the results of his investigation are known appropriate action will be taken. This may include further investigation in conjunction with the USAF authorities.

AWACS

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the seventh AWACS aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 December 1987]: The cost of the seventh AWACS aircraft cannot be disclosed for reasons of commercial confidentiality. However, the favourable movement of the sterling-dollar exchange rate since March has meant that the price is lower than that agreed for each of the first six.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total value of contracts that must be placed by Boeing before 18 December 1994 now that seven AWACS aircraft have been ordered.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 December 1987]: The total value of contracts is expected to be in excess of 1·5 billion dollars.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the cost penalties if Boeing fail to honour the agreed AWACS 130 per cent. offset arrangements by 18 December 1994.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 December 1987]: The offset agreement with Boeing is an integral part of the contract for the purchase of the AWACS system. Any breach of the agreement would therefore constitute a breach of the contract and, although there are no express damages identified in the contract, the Government would have recourse to English law in respect of perceived damages.

Howitzers

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 155 mm self-propelled howitzers are required by the Army.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 1 December 1987]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 1 December, at column 569, on howitzer quantities.

WALES

Housing Waiting Lists

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department will collate figures for housing waiting lists in Wales.

Mr. Grist: No. Waiting lists are not compiled by local authorities on any uniform basis. There would be no merit in collating the figures centrally, since this would not provide meaningful information.

Intensive Poultry Farming

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received over the past five years on the adverse environmental impact of the establishment of intensive poultry farming in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: No comprehensive records are kept, but since 1984 approximately 14 representations have been received about the environmental impact of poultry farming.

Welsh Language

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the present state of teaching of the Welsh language in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Encouraging progress has been made. Our proposals for including Welsh in the national curriculum are a further significant step forward.

Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has completed his consideration of the responses to the consultation exercises conducted by his Department on the question of Welsh language legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: After studying the responses I have concluded that both I and the Minister of State need to take further soundings on this sensitive issue. I propose early in the new year to meet representatives of several organisations to discuss the matter further. Additionally, I am setting up a working group with a membership spanning a very broad spectrum of Welsh life to be chaired by the Minister of State. This group will consider the more substantive comments submitted as part of the consultation exercise, seek any further views it feels necessary and advise me on the most constructive and appropriate action that I might take to foster the Welsh language.

NHS (Consultants)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision exists in his Department's budget for the current financial year for the employment of outside consultants in relation to his Department's responsibility for the National Health Service in Wales.

Mr. Grist: At the start of the financial year, £0·282 million was earmarked with hospital and community health services provision for consultancies for which there was an outstanding commitment to provide central funding. Since then a further £0·200 million has been made available for consultancies in respect of Gwynedd and Mid Glamorgan health authorities from funds released through slippage in the take-up (by authorities) of funds originally allocated for centrally financed service developments.

Integration Operations

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in the European Commission with regard to the integration operations proposals put forward by Gwynedd, Dyfed and Powys county councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Commission has not yet reached a decision on the integrated operations programme for Dyfed, Gwynedd and Powys. I have fully endorsed the submission and I am pressing for an early decision.

Community Hospital (Gwynedd)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether staff of his Department have had discussions during the past three months with members or staff of Gwynedd health authority about the practicability of scheduling at an early date, the construction of a new community hospital to serve Dwyfor and north Meirionnydd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No discussions have taken place.

Ysbym Madog

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date his Department received an inquiry from the Gwynedd health authority concerning the legal status of Ysbym Madog, Porthmadog; and on what date his Department replied to such an inquiry.

Mr. Grist: No inquiry has been received.

Health Authorities (Sale of Land)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued in relation to the sale of land or buildings by health authorities in Wales; and whether health authorities are allowed to retain the cash proceeds from such sales and to use them at their unfettered discretion.

Mr. Grist: Health authorities are required to conduct land transactions within the procedures set out in the National Health Service "Land Transactions Handbook" and the relevant Welsh health circulars. They are entitled to receive the proceeds from the sale of land or buildings no longer needed by the health service except in those cases where the property has become surplus because of a closure following a centrally funded scheme. In such cases the sale proceeds will not be kept by the district health authority, but will benefit the all-Wales provision. Health authorities may use the proceeds of sale for the provision of hospital and community health services for which they are responsible.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all those hospitals in Wales for which closure proposals have been submitted to him for decision, after the appropriate local consultation procedures, during the past four years; and if he will indicate for each one whether closure was approved or rejected or whether a decision is still pending.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Welded Rail

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of continuous welded rail he expects to authorise, as envisaged in British Rail's corporate plan, in the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail's expenditure on continuous welded rail is a management matter for which they do not require ministerial consent. The mileage of track on which British Rail expects to complete work in each year is as follows:

	Mileage
1988-89	268
1989-90	249
1990-91	241
1991-92	228

Railway Crossing, Criccieth

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what direct representations he has received from residents of the Criccieth area concerning the danger of the railway crossing at Criccieth; whether he has replied to these representations; if he has agreed to meet the county councils for the area to discuss this problem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Representations have been received from the Criccieth Maes Railways Crossing Action Group that the existing Automatic Open Crossing should be programmed for immediate conversion to an Automatic Half-Barrier installation. The Department have replied to the effect that British Railways have primary responsibility for deciding what alterations should be made and when the works should take place. We have had no request to meet the county councils for the area.

Motor Cycle Noise

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress with the implementation of the Motor Cycle Noise Act.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are preparing two sets of regulations on motor cycle noise. The first, under the Motor Cycle Noise Act, will introduce controls on the sale of motor cycle silencers and exhausts. The second, an amendment to the Construction and Use Regulations, will bring into effect the provisions of directive 87/56/EEC, which sets tighter noise limits for motorcycles first used on or after 1 October 1990.

We expect to circulate both sets of regulations for comment early in the new year.

A43 (Accidents)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many personal injury accidents have occurred at the junction of the A43 trunk road with the unclassified road from Charlton to Evenley since the dual carriageway was opened on 20 August; and what action he proposes to take to improve visibility and reduce further accident risks.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There have been two personal injury accidents. The junction is of a type common throughout the country. It is well signed and has good visibility. Our agents, Northamptonshire county council, have been instructed to monitor the situation and examine whether there is any scope for improvement.

Traffic (Lowestoft)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make public the findings of the Maunsell report into Lowestoft's traffic problems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are considering the Maunsell report following the consultant's study of traffic movement on A12 in Lowestoft. I shall make an announcement about the findings and our response as soon as possible.

Special Types General Order

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends further to amend the Special Types General Order.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. I have signed an amending order to modify the new rules set out in Statutory Instrument 1987 No. 1327. This extends the time for changing existing vehicles used for carrying abnormal indivisible loads. These will now be permitted until 1 October 1989 to operate with their existing axle arrangements. For those weighing up to 80 tonnes gross weight the maximum axle weight will be reduced to 13·5 tonnes. From 1 October 1989 the maximum axle weight for these vehicles will be further reduced to 12·5 tonnes and the new rules on axle arrangements will apply.

Railways Inspectorate (Chief Inspecting Officer Post)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why the recently advertised post of chief inspecting officer at the Railways Inspectorate has been set at one grade lower than that of the current holder of the post.

Mr. David Mitchell: When unified grading was introduced into the enlarged open structure of the Civil Service, the post of Chief Inspector of Railways was assigned to grade 4. Grade 4 posts are, however, usually responsible for the management of grade 5 officers. There are no such posts in the chief inspector's command. The present chief inspector retires next year and this represented an opportunity to consider the grading of his post. Since it does not involve the management of other senior staff, it was decided that it should formally be grade 5.

There is no intention, implied or otherwise, to diminish the post of the chief inspecting officer or the statutory responsibilities of the post. I am fully conscious of the need to appoint a candidate of the highest quality to carry out these important duties. The advertisement makes it clear, therefore, that a higher salary will be considered for a candidate with exceptional qualifications or experience.

PRIME MINISTER

Hillmorton

Q71. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to make an official visit to Hillmorton in Rugby.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Holy Loch

Q137. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to Holy Loch.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Council House Sales

Mr. Butler: To ask the Prime Minister how many council houses and flats have been sold to their tenants since May 1979 in the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: More than 1 million tenants have bought their own homes since May 1979.

Engagements

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 December.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 December.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 December.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 December.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Land Registry

Mr. Butler: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 30 November, what specific plans there are to cut the length of time it takes to process new titles in the Land Registry; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: In his response to the Adjournment debate on 30 November 1987, at columns 741-44 my hon. and learned Friend, the Solicitor-General, set out specific plans to meet the Land Registry's commitments and to contain, and eventually reduce, the backlog of outstanding casework, including new titles.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Attorney-General who is to be the successor to Mr. Roderic Bowen QC as Welsh Social Security Commissioner; and if he will be capable of chairing hearings undertaken in the Welsh language.

The Attorney-General: Oral hearings continue to be held in Cardiff on a regular basis to deal with appeals which arise in Wales. A commissioner, based in the London office, is available to conduct oral hearings in the Welsh language should the need arise. The Lord Chancellor has no plans at present to appoint a further social security commissioner to be based in Wales.

Family Law Reform Act 1987

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) 23 July, Official Report, column 291, how the Government have derived the figure of £3·5 million a year as the cost of implementing part II of the Family Law Reform Act 1987, and if he will give a breakdown of this figure.

The Attorney-General: The figure of £3·5 million is derived from the impact on the county courts and on the legal aid fund of the increased rights given to both unmarried parents by part II of the Act. The breakdown of costs is as follows:

	£ million
Court services and judiciary	0·4
Services of probation officers	0·6
Legal aid	2·5

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Books and Equipment

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what system he has for ensuring that the provision made by him in grants to local education authorities for books and equipment in schools is being allocated by schools and local education authorities for those purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Education support grant is allocated to authorities for specific purposes, including the provision of books and equipment for GCSE. Grant may be claimed only on expenditure which an authority's auditors are satisfied has been made for that purpose. However, it is for individual authorities and schools to decide on the priority to be given to books and equipment within expenditure supported by block grant.

Overseas Students

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the numbers of students registered at universities in the United Kingdom from countries outside the EEC, defined by country of origin, in each of the years since 1978.

Mr. Jackson: The required information for 1986 for countries with more than 250 students is shown in the table. Information for all countries could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In addition, there were 7,000 students from other non-EC countries. Information for earlier years has been published in "Statistics of Students from abroad in the United Kingdom", by the British Council, a copy of which is in the Library.

Adult Literacy

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has available to him regarding the standards of adult literacy in England and Wales.

Mr. Jackson: Few adults are unable to read or write at all, but there are a large number who have problems with reading, writing and spelling. In a report recently published by the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit, it is reported that 13 per cent. of 23-year-olds who were interviewed in the National Child Development Study survey in 1981, said they had some problems with reading, writing or numeracy. If this were typical of all adults, an estimated 5·5 million people in England and Wales could have difficulties with literacy and numeracy. The Government provide help through the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit which acts as a central focus to assist LEAs and voluntary organisations to establish new basic skills provision and develop existing provision. The grant to the unit for the current year is £2,170,000.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning adult literacy.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has not received any such representations during the present Session.

CERN

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the review of CERN has yet been completed; if a decision has yet been reached on the United Kingdom membership of CERN; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I understand that the CERN review group, chaired by Professor Abragam, has completed its work and that its report will be available before the CERN council meeting on 17 December. The report's recommendations will be taken into account in reaching any decision.

School Meals

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will seek to provide information as to how many children living in Lancashire are in receipt of free school meals; and what percentage of Lancashire school children this represents.

Mr. Dunn: The total number of free school meals taken in Lancashire on the day of the annual school meals census in October 1986 was 44,017, or 21 per cent. of full-time equivalent pupils registered at maintained schools.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Miss Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the total number of pupils on school rolls and the pupil-to-teacher ratio in primary schools in Cleveland for each year since 1979.

Mr. Dunn: The number of pupils on roll and the pupil-teacher ratio in maintained primary schools in Cleveland each year since 1979 were as follows:

January each year	Pupils[1]	Pupil-teacher ratio
1979	65,386	23·4
1980	62,770	23·1
1981	60,446	23·1
1982	57,321	22·4
1983	54,395	21·8
1984	53,505	22·1
1985	53,106	22·2
1986	53,270	22·3
1987	53,755	22·1

[1] Full-time equivalent pupils. Part-time pupils counted as 0·5.

"Educational Reform"

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many copies of the booklet "Educational Reform" have been printed; to whom they are to be distributed; and what is the total cost of the publication itemised by costs of (a) printing, (b) preparation at all stages, (c) distribution, including postage, and (d) other costs.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: 500,000 copies of the booklet have been printed. Individual copies have been sent to all headteachers and clerks of governing bodies in England; to all right hon. and hon. Members and to some noble Lords; to local education authorities, chief education officers, examining bodies, teacher unions, examining groups, employers' groups and others known to have an interest and who requested copies of the consultation documents. Further copies are available on request from my Department.

The cost is as follows:

(a) Printing	46,450
(b) Design	4,250
(c) Postage	45,560
(d) Other costs	Nil
Total	[1]96,260

DEFENCE

Foreign Service Allowance

Mr. Neil Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations took place with the Retired Officers Association over the replacement of foreign service allowance from 1 January 1988 with a cost of living allowance.

Mr. Sainsbury: Cost of living addition was agreed after extensive negotiations between the official and trade union sides of the national Whitley Council in 1985 and 1986. It was announced within my Department in a Defence Council instruction on 2 May 1986 and is being introduced progressively worldwide. Transitional arrangements were included in the agreement for staff whose allowances were reduced.

The Retired Officers Association is not a member of the Council of Civil Service Unions and does not have independent negotiating rights. However, like all civil servants, including non-union members, members of the ROA are subject to such nationally negotiated agreements. The new rates for staff in Germany result from a recent Treasury inspection. They were agreed following negotiations with local trade union and staff representatives. The local representative of the ROA was given the opportunity to present the association's views to the inspector.

Mr. Neil Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of how much retired officers filling service appointments as re-employed officers will on average lose in a year as a result of the replacement of tax-free foreign service allowance with cost of living allowance.

Mr. Sainsbury: Under Inland Revenue rules, overseas allowances can only be regarded as tax-free if they compensate for necessary and actual additional expenditure. One of the major features of the cost of living addition (COLA) provisions is to pay child provision only to officers with eligible dependent children whereas foreign service allowance included an element for a child in the basic rate, whether or not the officer had dependent children.

This change will result in any civil servant without children, including retired officers, receiving the basic rate of COLA without child provision. In Germany the new rate of COLA for this category of staff in the grade equivalent to RO3 is approximately £760 per annum less than the old FSA rate, due mainly to this change.

Mr. Neil Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average annual payment of foreign service allowance to (a) a young married officer with young children and (b) retired officers filling service appointments as re-employed officers who no longer have dependent children; and what will be the average annual payments of cost of living allowance for these examples after 1 January 1988.

Mr. Sainsbury: The old and new rates in Germany payable to a married civilian officer with two children compared to that for a married officer with no children, for the grade RO3 in which the majority of retired officers fall, are:

	Old £	New £
Band 4 Civilian Officers without dependent children	2,630	1,869
Band 4 Civilian Officers with 2 dependent children at post	3,014	4,212

Retired Officers (Re-employment)

Mr. Neil Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to preserve the pay and conditions of retired officers filling service appointments as re-employed officers, after the introduction of cost of living allowance on 1 January 1988.

Mr. Sainsbury: Foreign service allowance is being replaced by the cost of living addition (COLA) which came into effect on 9 January 1986. COLA is being introduced progressively worldwide as individual countries are inspected under the allowances procedure. The COLA agreement applies to all UK-based civilians serving overseas and it is not within the power of my Department to exempt any of our staff from the terms of this agreement.

Low-level Flying

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has anything to add to his replies to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 10 November, Official Report, column 157, and the hon. Member for Workington on 16 November, Official Report, column 451, on the number of RAF fast jets lost in low-level accidents in the United Kingdom and surrounding waters in 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information given in my answer to the hon. Member on 16 November is correct. The answer on 10 November to a question from the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) about the number of aircraft and airmen lost during Royal Air Force fast jet operations involving low-flying training in the United Kingdom and surrounding waters in 1985-87 omitted to mention one aircraft loss which occured in 1986, but had not at the time of the answer been identified in records as occurring during a low-flying excerise over the sea. No fatalities were involved.

TR-1 Reconnaissance Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have been held with the Lockheed company concerning the possible purchase of the TR-1 reconnaissance aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Holy Loch (Servicing)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received any request or notification from the United States authorities relating to the replenishment or servicing of United States Navy Tomahawk cruise-missile armed submarines at Holy Loch.

Mr. Sainsbury: Any discussions of this nature would be confidential between the two Governments.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the European fighter aircraft is expected to be procured as a one-for-one replacement for Royal Air Force Jaguar and Phantom aircraft: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) on 8 December at column 149.

Royal Ordnance Factories

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to respond to the report by the National Audit Office on the loss of public money involved in the sale of Royal Ordnance factories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I understand that the Committee of Public Accounts examined the accounting officer on 9 December on the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on the costs and benefits of the sale of Royal Ordnance plc. Once the Committee has reported to the House on its conclusions, the Government's response to those conclusions will be given, in the customary manner, by means of a Treasury minute.

Radioactive Contaminants

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many armed forces exercises involving radioactive contamination have taken place at Buchan since 1981;

(2) if he will make a statement about armed forces exercises involving radioactive contamination at Buchan.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not our policy to discuss the locations where exercises involving the use of radioactive contaminants are held.

NATIONAL FINANCE

VAT (United States Forces)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated loss to the Exchequer of exempting maintenance and equipment contracts for United States forces in Britain from value added tax; under what authority this is done; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The information on revenue forgone is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Relief from the United Kingdom duties and taxes is afforded to United States visiting forces under the authority of an exchange of notes between the governments of the United Kingdom and the United States of America which was made in 1952 and which supplements earlier agreements including the mutual defence assistance agreement of 1950.

Friendly Societies (Political Donations)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and which organisations lodging accounts with the Director of Friendly Societies show political donations.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that an answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why he does not include defence procurement expenditure in tables showing identifiable public expenditure by function in England, Northern Ireland, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Major: Defence procurement expenditure is deemed to have been incurred on behalf of the United Kingdom as a whole and it is, therefore, not appropriate to allocate it to an individual country in tables showing identifiable public expenditure by function and territory.

Television (Public Service Messages)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 1 December, Official Report, column 543, what information the Central Office of Information has as to the number of viewers reached by public service messages on BBC and independent television, respectively; what specific steps he is taking to achieve greater audience penetration amongst those who watch predominantly BBC channels; if any fee is payable to the BBC for this service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Central Office of Information receives regular reports from the BBC and independent television companies detailing the times at which public service messages were transmitted and the channels or companies which broadcast the material. However, this information does not include audience figures and it would need a disproportionate use of resources in the Central Office of Information to research individual audience figures for each public service message. In the 12 months to the end of September 1987, the independent television companies and the BBC reported details of more than 16,000 transmissions of Government-sponsored public service messages.

Monthly guidance is given to encourage the greater use of topical public service messages, but transmission must be at the discretion of the broadcasting organisations. No fee is payable to the BBC or ITV companies for the transmission of public service messages.

Housing Bill

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of reissuing the Housing Bill, excluding printing; and of that how much was the postage cost for distribution.

Mr. Brooke: The cost of re-issuing the Housing Bill (excluding printing) cannot be determined exactly without incurring disproportionate cost, but it is estimated to have been around £300, of which some £175 would have been for postage and carriage.

EC (Budget Council)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the European Community Budget Council meeting on 9 December.

Mr. Brooke: The Budget Council met in Brussels on 9 December. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council held further discussions on the establishment of a 1988 draft budget. I again made clear that any draft budget must respect the own resources ceiling. The Council adjourned without reaching agreement.

Job Creation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 26 November, Official Report, column 293, how many jobs in manufacturing industry in Scotland were created for each year since 1975.

Mr. Major [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Estimates of employees in employment in Scottish manufacturing industries, along with comparable estimates for the service sector and total employees in Scotland, are as follows:

Employees in employment in Scotland: thousands, mid-year
(Changes on a year earlier in brackets)

	Manufacturing	Services	Total
1975	645 (−38)	1,158 (+30)	2,076 (−8)
1976	615 (−30)	1,182 (+24)	2,071 (−5)
1977	622 (+7)	1,182 (—)	2,071 (—)
1978	611 (−11)	1,190 (+8)	2,067 (−4)
1979	604 (−7)	1,224 (+34)	2,102 (+35)
1980	564 (−40)	1,244 (+20)	2,082 (−20)
1981	510 (−54)	1,233 (−11)	2,002 (−80)
1982	477 (−33)	1,228 (−5)	1,950 (−52)
1983	444 (−33)	1,216 (−12)	1,899 (−51)
1984	434 (−10)	1,231 (+15)	1,901 (+2)
1985	430 (−4)	1,244 (+13)	1,904 (+3)
1986	410 (−20)	1,260 (+16)	1,888 (−16)
1987	398 (−12)	1,278 (+18)	1,890 (+2)
Changes between
1975-87	−247	+120	−186
1983-87	−46	+62	−9

Some of the decrease in the figures for manufacturing will be the result of the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by sub-contractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment. Employees in employmment in the service sector in Scotland increased between 1976 and 1987.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from voluntary and conservation bodies concerning proposals for the reform of eligibility criteria for the community programme.

Mr. Lee: I have received a number of representations from voluntary and conservation bodies about the community programme eligibility criteria.

Benefit Adjudication Officers

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many additional support staff for unemployment benefit adjudication officers have been appointed, following recommendations of the chief adjudication officer's annual report.

Mr. Lee: The chief adjudiction officer first recommended an increase in support staff for adjudication officers in his annual report for 1984-85. Since the period covered by that report, my Department has conducted an internal survey into the organisation of the adjudication service. In the two years since that survey some 90 additional clerical and secretarial staff have been introduced to support the work of adjudication officers.

Passive Smoking

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will introduce legislation to protect employees in their places of work against the consequences of passive smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government are awaiting the fourth report of the independent Scientific Committee on Smoking and Health, which is expected about the end of the year. I understand that the report will cover the health risks associated with passive smoking, on which the committee made an interim statement earlier this year. We shall then be able to consider any further action that may be needed on smoking in the workplace. We are continuing to encourage employers to limit the exposure of non-smokers to tobacco smoke at work on a voluntary basis, for example by workplace agreements to limit smoking to particular areas or to segregate smokers and non-smokers.

National Dock Labour Scheme

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the number of people employed in national dock labour scheme ports; and what information he has as to what proportion this constitutes of the total number employed in all ports.

Mr. Nicholls: The forthcoming report on manpower in the United Kingdom ports industry, soon to be published jointly by the British Ports Association and the National Association of Port Employers, will show that, of around 40,000 people employed in United Kingdom ports on 20 March 1987, about 28,000 (70 per cent.) worked in scheme ports.

Sex Discrimination Act 1975

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has concerning section 51 of the Sex Discrimination Act 1975.

Mr. Fowler: A consultation document has been published today. It explains the changes required in relation to section 51, sets out in detail the other legislation under consideration and seeks, by 29 February, views on the extent to and manner in which the legislation should be amended. Copies of the document have been placed in the Library.

Restart Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish up-to-date figures showing the number of unemployed people who have been issued with invitations to attend restart interviews since the beginning of the scheme, the total number of interviews conducted during the same period and a breakdown of the difference between these two totals, estimating (a) those who ceased to be unemployed prior to receiving the invitation, (b) those who left the register between the receipt of the invitation and the interview date and (c)

other reasons for non-attendance; and if he will also provide an estimate of how many of these people would be likely to leave the register if the normal outflow from the unemployment register continued at pre-restart levels.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Since the start of the restart programme, 3,286,000 people have been invited and 2,558,000 have attended an interview. It is not possible to break down the difference between these two totals in the manner requested. However, among those people invited for interview who do not in the event attend for interview are:

(a) people who cease to be unemployed shortly before or after receiving their invitation;
(b) people who are about to start work;
(c) people who cease claiming unemployment benefits for other reasons.

We do not know how many people ultimately find work or other opportunities as a result of a restart interview.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish up-to-date figures showing (a) the average duration of unemployment of those who have attended restart interviews and (b) the proportion of restart interviewees who remain on the unemployment register (i) one month, (ii) two months, (iii) three months and (iv) six months after a restart interview.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Most of those interviewed under the restart programme are invited to interview after six, 12 or 18 months unemployment. The information requested on the length of time spent unemployed after a restart interview is not available.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish up-to-date figures, showing the outcome of interviews conducted under the restart scheme, covering the period from the introduction of the scheme, in the same format used in the reply given on 6 November 1986, Official Report, columns 523-24, together with a breakdown of these figures to show outcomes for each three-month or similar time period.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 7 December 1987]: The number of people interviewed under the restart programme and the numbers referred to the various menu items, broken down into three-month periods since the national inception of restart, are shown in the table.

We do not know how many of those selected for interview are ultimately placed in a job or in a training scheme or programme.

Jobstart Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish up-to-date figures showing the total number of payments made under the jobstart scheme, together with a breakdown of the wages of jobs covered by the scheme in the same format used in the reply given on 18 April 1986, Official Report, columns 527-28; and if he will show the average duration of jobstart payments.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 7 November 1987]: Since the introduction of jobstart, 18,107 people have been accepted on to the allowance. The total sum paid out under jobstart up to 27 November 1987 amounts to £6·8 million. The most recent figures available as to the breakdown of wages of jobs covered by the scheme are as follows:

1 July 1986 to 25 September 1987

Wages (£ a week)	Number
0 to 39	642
40 to 49	1,101
50 to 59	2,521
60 to 69	4,104

Total	15,911

Information on the average duration of jobstart payments is not available.

YTS (Statistics)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons have had a benefit penalty applied to them by an adjudication officer for refusing to enter a YTS course or for leaving a YTS course early, for each month since December 1983.

Mr. Portillo: I have been asked to reply.

The numbers of people who have had their supplementary benefit reduced for refusing a youth training scheme place, or for leaving courses early, in each month since December 1983, are as follows.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Recidivism

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current rate of recidivism among former prisoners; and what was the rate for each of the previous four years.

Mr. John Patten: The readily available information relates to sentenced prisoners reconvicted within two years of discharge from a prison department establishment and is published annually in "Prison Statistics England and Wales" copies of which are in the Library. Table 8(a) of the latest issue (Cm. 210) gives information about those discharged in 1983 and earlier years.

Sheltered Housing (Fires)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fatal fires there were in local authority homes for the elderly or sheltered housing in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information readily available is given in the table. Fire statistics for 1986 will be available shortly.

[1] Information on location is based on brigades' descriptions of the premises involved. Figures for "sheltered housing" exclude premises described by brigades as old peoples' dwellings (flats, bungalows, etc) but not specifically as sheltered housing.
[2] Figures published annually in "Fire Statistics United Kingdom" (Table 32 of the volume for 1985).
[3] Fires readily identifiable from fire reports as occurring in local authority premises. It is possible that some of the other fatal fires above were also in local authority premises.

Home Defence Exercises

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of local authorities in the major home defence exercises planned for September-October 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have indicated to local authorities our belief that participation should be limited to the provision of guidance by county emergency planning officers on any local authority matters which may arise.

Police (Complaints)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints were lodged against police officers yearly, since 1979; and of them (a) how many complaints were withdrawn, (b) how many complaints were upheld, (c) how many complaints were rejected and (d) how many prosecutions were brought against police officers as a result of a complaint.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information about complaints made against the police and their outcome is contained in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary and of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. Further informaton can be found in the annual reports of the Police Complaints Board or, since 1985, the Police Complaints Authority. These reports are available in the Library.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report how many firearms, of what calibres and types (a) civilian held, (b) police owned, and (c) armed forces owned, which have been (i) stolen and (ii) recovered in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information on the number of burglaries and thefts recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been stolen, by principal weapon type and location of incident, is published in tables 3.12 and 3.13 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1986" (Cm 233) copies of which are in the Library. Information is not collected centrally on the numbers of weapons stolen in these incidents, on their ownership or on the number subsequently recovered. The information included for thefts and for burglaries from military establishments is thought to be incomplete because such offences are not necessarily reported to and recorded by the police. Comprehensive figures for thefts from the armed forces are not readily available.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has made any estimate of the number of lives which will be saved annually as a result of his recently announced measures for firearms control, and how many would arise (a) from the reduced use of firearms by the legal holders of such weapons and (b) from the reduced use of firearms in the commission of other criminal acts which end in murder or manslaughter.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not possible to estimate how many lives might be saved by the Government's proposals for new firearms controls. The Government believe, however, that the new measures will reduce the risk of firearms misuse, which the Hungerford shootings and other recent incidents have shown to be unacceptably high.

Murder and Manslaughter (Firearms)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons have been the victims of murder and manslaughter in cases where a firearm was used which was not known to have been legally held in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available;

(2) how many persons have been the victims of manslaughter or murder by persons legally holding firearms, in each of the last 10 years for which records are available; how many of these murders were committed by persons related to the victim; and if he will provide a breakdown of the type of firearms used in each year;

(3) how many persons have been the victims of manslaughter or murder by legally held firearms stolen from their owners in each of the last 10 years for which figures were available; in how many of these cases such deaths occurred when other crimes were being attempted or carried out; and what information he has as to the type of weapons used in each year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information on offences of homicide by shooting and on the type of firearm involved is published annually in tables 4.3 and 3.6 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" copies of which are in the Library; the latest issue (Cm. 233) gives figures for 1976-86. The available information on the relationship between victim and suspect for all homicides by shooting and on homicides by shooting in furtherance of theft or gain is given in the tables. Information on whether the firearms involved were legally held, illegally held or stolen is not available centrally; corresponding information for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Fatima Mohamed Gulaid

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations and hon. Members who have made representations to his Department concerning the proposed deportation of Mrs. Fatima Mohamed Gulaid.

Mr. Renton: No representations from organisations have been received about the proposal to remove Mrs. Fatima Mohamed Gulaid following refusal of leave to enter. Representations have been received from the hon. Member, from the hon. Members for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton), for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Heffer), for Liverpool, Garston (Mr. Loyden), for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) and for Liverpool, Broadgreen (Mr. Fields). On 11 November an early-day motion was tabled and signed by eight hon. Members, including the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside. We expect to reach a decision on the case shortly.

Winson Green Prison

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many female prison officers have been allocated to the male prisoners' wings at Winson Green prison under the fresh start programme;

(2) if the duties of the female prison officers at Winson Green prison, Birmingham, include supervision of slopping out by male prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Six additional female prison officers were allocated to Birmingham prison last month. Part of their duties involves working with male officers in male prisoners' wings, for example to lock and unlock prisoners. The arrangements take account of the need to preserve privacy and decency.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Stock Exchange (Deregulation)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has of the effects of deregulation upon the turnover of foreign investment on the stock exchange; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Such figures as are available about foreign investment on the stock exchange are contained in the autumn edition of its publication "Quality of Markets Quarterly".

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has of the effects of deregulation on the average commission rate on share dealings on the stock exchange; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The stock exchange, in the autumn 1987 edition of its report "Quality of Markets Quarterly", has given its most recent estimate about the trends in commissions since big bang, namely 27 October 1986.

Departmental Establishment (Wales)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was and is the total establishment number of the Department of Trade and Industry in Wales for each year since 1970.

Mr. Atkins: Staff-in-post figures for the Department of Trade and Industry in Wales for each year since 1976 were as follows:

	Number
1 April 1976	1,608
1 April 1977	2,262
1 April 1978	2,262
1 April 1979	2,395
1 April 1980	2,270
1 April 1981	2,194
1 April 1982	2,060
1 April 1983	1,979
1 April 1984	1,788
1 April 1985	1,770
1 April 1986	1,769
1 April 1987	1,727

Figures prior to 1976 are not available. The figures in the table do not represent a comparative series because of machinery of Government changes.

Estate Agents

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will introduce legislation to make the description of homes for sale given by estate agents in their publicity material subject to the provisions of the Trade Descriptions Act.

Mr. Maude: I have at present no plans to do so.

Textiles (Turkey)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what were the results of the European Community's recent negotiations with Turkey for renewal of a voluntary restraint arrangement for textiles; if he will publish the agreed import limits in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Auditors

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals he has for implementing the European Commission eighth company law directive on the regulation of auditors.

Mr. Maude: I have today placed in the Library of the House a note setting out the basis on which the Government intend to implement this directive. This follows detailed consultation. Legislation will be included in the next Companies Bill.

The main points are as follows: the directive governs the supervision of auditors engaged on the audit of the annual accounts of companies where such audit is required by company law. Our intention is that the overall responsibility for this supervision should be exercised by the Secretary of State, but the detailed implementation will be entrusted to recognised professional bodies. However, the legislation will be designed to enable him to transfer these responsibilities to a general auditing council or some other supervisory body, if, in due course, he considers it appropriate to do so. Under the proposed system, the ability to practise as an auditor will depend on the fulfilment of appropriate education and training requirements to be administered by recognised professional bodies according to standards approved by the Secretary of State, or on individual approval by the Secretary of State. In addition, practising auditors, including those individually approved by the Secretary of State, should be designated "registered auditors" and subject to detailed supervision by a body approved for that purpose by the Secretary of State. Any body seeking approval as a monitoring body should have to demonstrate the adequacy of its rules and procedures against broad criteria set out in the legislation.

We propose to keep statutory provisions on the edcuation and training requirements for the recognition of professional qualifications to the minimum necessary for compliance with the Directive. This will give the recognised bodies the maximum flexibility to develop new courses and make other adjustments in the light of changing circumstances.

In fulfilling the directive's requirement to safeguard the independence of auditors, we believe that the emphasis should be on strengthening professional guidance rather than statutory requirements. However, the Secretary of State will need to be satisfied that the guidance is adequate before approving a monitoring body. We also intend that companies other than small companies should have to disclose fees paid to their auditors for non-audit services.

We also propose to remove the existing statutory prohibition on corporate auditors.The basis on which incorporation should be allowed poses some questions and I welcome the recent announcement that representatives of the accounting profession are setting up a joint working party to consider them. We shall want to take account of their conclusions before putting forward detailed proposals. I do not believe, however, that the need to safeguard independence necessarily rules out outside ownership of shares. I hope, therefore, that the working group will be able to reach agreement on ways of safeguarding independence while allowing an appropriate degree of flexibility in the way incorporation is permitted.

Patent Office

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will undertake a feasibility study into relocating the Patent Office to Yorkshire and Humberside.

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make it his policy to transfer the Patent Office in London to Yorkshire and give consideration to finding a site in Harrogate.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My officials together with officials from the Welsh Office and the PSA are currently examining the feasibility of relocating the Patent Office to Cardiff or Newport. These locations already house large DTI establishments and locating the Patent Office close to them would yield significant operational and financial benefits. I, therefore, have no plans to look elsewhere at the moment.

Plymouth

Miss Fookes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects the European Commission to give its agreement to the continuation of the intermediate area status of the Plymouth travel-to-work area.

Mr. Atkins: The Commission's agreement to intermediate area status for Plymouth was for a three-year period from November 1984. I am pleased to confirm that, on the basis of a submission by my Department supporting the case made by the local councils, the Commission has no objection to Plymouth's intermediate area status being extended for a further four-year period.

THE ARTS

British Library (Hebrew Collection)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will issue a direction to the British Library Board under section 5 of the British Library Act 1972 to compile and publish a catalogue of its collection of Hebrew printed books.

Mr. Luce: It is for the British Library Board to determine the priorities for its cataloguing programme. The library hopes to publish early next year a second supplement to its original 19th century Hebrew catalogue.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he is satisfied with access for disabled people in wheelchairs to all museums and galleries for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Luce: I am satisfied that the museums and galleries for which I am responsible are fully aware of the needs of disabled people and are doing all they can to meet those needs. This includes improving access in existing buildings and planning for the needs of the disabled in new buildings.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he is satisfied that the extension to the National gallery and the Tate gallery of the north in Liverpool will provide adequate access for disabled people.

Mr. Luce: I am satisfied that the new extension to the National gallery has been designed to provide a full range of facilities, including adequate access, for disabled people, both visitors and staff. Similarly, I am satisfied that the needs of disabled people, including that of adequate access, have been given particular consideration in the planning and refurbishment of the Tate gallery building in Liverpool.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he is satisfied with the access for disabled people to the new Turner gallery at the Tate; and whether he has received any complaints from disabled people or organisations on this issue.

Mr. Luce: The needs of disabled people were taken into account when the Tate gallery drew up the design brief for the Turner gallery. The director and trustees of the Tate recognise, however, that further improvements need to be made, particularly within the building. They are taking steps to rectify the situation. I have not received any representations from disabled people or organisations on this matter.

ENERGY

Coal Mining

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he has any plans to repeal the restriction on deep coal mines which prevents them from employing more than 30 people;

(2) if he intends to abolish the royalty that must be paid to the National Coal Board on every ton of coal mined by private opencast pits;

(3) if he has any plans to remove the restrictions on marketing to which private coal mines are subject;

(4) if he has any plans to seek to reform legislation relating to the licensing of private coal mines;

(5) if he intends to facilitate worker buy-outs of local pits by National Coal Board employees.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Under existing legislation the British Coal Corporation is responsible for the issue of licences for private mining operations and is entitled to levy a royalty on coal produced under licence. There are no present plans for changes to that legislation, but the Government are considering the possibility of changing the statutory limits on both deep mined and opencast licensed production. The corporation is considering whether there is scope for increased flexibility and transparency within that legislation. The corporation does not require licensed coal to be delivered to it except by agreement with the licensee. Within existing legislation British Coal is prepared to consider proposals by former employees to establish worker co-operatives.

Power Stations

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether plans by the Central Electricity

Generating Board for new fossil fuel power stations at coastal sites in the United Kingdom include flue gas desulphurisation based on sea water scrubbing.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The sea water scrubbing process is at an early stage of development and there are no present plans to use it at proposed new fossil power stations.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy that the retrofitting of flue gas desulphurisation proposed for three coal-fired power stations and the programme to retrofit low nitrogen oxide burners at the 12 major stations operated by the Central Electricity Generating Board will be retained following the privatisation of the industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government will expect existing commitments entered into by the Central Electricity Generating Board to be fulfilled following privatisation of the industry.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the present preferred method for the transport of civil plutonium from Sellafield to Japan; and what safety tests have been conducted, or are planned, on both emergency planning and container packaging for this transport.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

I understand that the present preferred option for the proposed transport of reprocessed plutonium to Japan is shipment by air, although this is not expected to take place until 1992 at the earliest.

Emergency arrangements for all types of radioactive materials transport are required by national and international regulations, and are subject to periodic testing by exercises.

Design testing and development of a suitable package is in progress.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Redundancies

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many employees of the Commission or its predecessor have been made redundant on grounds of redundancy or financial exigency in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Beith: In the last 10 years one employee's appointment has been terminated on grounds of redundancy.

Refreshment Department

Mr. Madden: To ask the Lord Privy Seal what was the total profit made by the House of Commons Refreshment Department in the week preceding the Christmas recess in 1986.

Mr. Wakeham: The Refreshment Department does not produce weekly profit figures.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Agency Nurses

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present monthly additional cost from employing agency nurses rather than regular nurses in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West (Mr. Janner) on 9 November at columns 100-101. For the reasons explained in that reply it is not possible to provide the information requested.

Doctors' Lists

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) to what size the patient list is going to be increased in order to qualify for full basic practice allowance, as set out in the primary health care White Paper;

(2) on what measure of patient numbers the practice list leading to qualification for full basic practice allowance will be based; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if the proposal to increase the minimum list for qualification for full basic practice allowance applies to rural areas.

Mr. Newton: Changes in the criteria for entitlement to full basic practice allowance proposed in the White Paper "Promoting Better Health" will be the subject of negotiations with the British Medical Association's general medical services committee. We will be consulting the general medical services committee over the scope for introducing measures to assist family doctors who practise in rural areas.

AIDS

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what drugs are available from the National Health Service for those over 65 years of age suffering from HIV contracted through blood products.

Mr. Newton: People whose immune systems become impaired because of infection with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) may acquire opportunistic infections which are amenable to treatment and for which the full range of appropriate drugs are available through the National Health Service. Zidovudine (Retrovir) inhibits replication of the virus and is available for the management of patients with serious manifestations of HIV infection. The choice of drugs for an individual patient is a matter for the doctor concerned.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospitals have been closed as temporary closures in each of the last eight years; how many have re-opened subsequently; and how many have been disposed of.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total number of recipients of attendance allowance (a) at the lower rate and (b) at the higher rate at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is set out in the table.

Attendance allowance: Numbers of recipients at 31 March 1986

	Number
Higher rate	237,000
Lower rate	348,000

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the estimated net annual cost of providing (a) attendance allowance in respect of children below the age of two years who are otherwise eligible but at present are excluded by reason of their age, and (b) mobility allowance in respect of children below the age of five years under the same criteria.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 30 November 1987]: If the proportions of children who would qualify for attendance allowance below age two and for mobility allowance below age five were similar to the proportions of children currently eligible, the costs in a full year would be about £17 million and £8 million, respectively. These figures must, however, be treated with caution because they do not exclude the unquantifiable number of impaired infants who might be ineligible because their need for attention or inability to walk is no greater than that normally to be found in a child of that age.

Rent Taper

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the number of pensioner households which will lose entitlement to housing benefit as a result of the increase in the rent taper to 65 per cent.

Mr. Portillo: The estimated number of pensioner households losing all entitlement to rent allowances or rent rebates as a result of increasing the rent taper from 60 to 65 per cent. is 25,000. Some of these will retain entitlement to rate rebates. People receiving income support will be unaffected because by definition they continue to receive maximum help with rent.

Notes:

1. The source is the 1985 family expenditure survey, updated to 1988-89.
2. Further information on data sources can be found in the introduction to the revised technical annex, "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income-Related Benefits", which is in the Library. This does not identify housing benefit separately.

Housing Benefit Regulations

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) in what circumstances accommodation is considered to be particularly suitable for elderly, sick or disabled persons by virtue of (i) size and (ii) heating system for the purposes of schedule 1, paragraph 1*(c)*(ii) to the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987;

(2) in what circumstances accommodation is considered to be not particularly suitable for elderly, sick or disabled persons by virtue of (i) size and (ii) heating system for the purposes of schedule 1, paragraph 1*(c)*(ii) to the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987;

(3) by what criteria other than size or heating system accommodation will be assessed as particularly suitable for elderly, sick or disabled persons for the purposes of schedule 1, paragraph 1*(c)*(ii) to the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987.

Mr. Portillo: The Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987 provide that a charge for an alarm system may be met through housing benefit where the system is provided in accommodation which is occupied by and has been specifically designed or adapted for elderly, sick or disabled people or is otherwise particularly suitable for them. In deciding whether accommodation is particularly suitable, the regulations require authorities to consider the size, heating system and the other major features or facilities of the accommodation as a whole.

The question of whether accommodation is particularly suitable is a matter for local authorities to decide. The factors we would expect a local authority to take into account in reaching its decision include the number of bedrooms, the overall amount of floorspace, the number of rooms which are heated as well as the location of the accommodation, its proximity to health and social services facilities and its accessibility.

A one-bedroom ground floor property with heating in the bedroom and living room and which is close to shops, health and social services facilities is likely to be considered suitable for an elderly, sick or disabled person; whereas, for example, a property with several spare bedrooms, heating only in the living room, and which is at a distance from such facilities would be considered unsuitable.

NHS Superannuation Scheme

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have opted out of the National Health Service superannuation scheme as soon as they have finished their training and made their first job move, since 1983, or over any similar period for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: The specific information requested is not available. However, the total number of members who left the National Health Service superannuation scheme with a refund of contributions and therefore less than five years service since 1983 is as follows:

	Number
1983	52,287
1984	52,728
1985	53,933
1986	51,161

Medical Laboratory Scientific Officers

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to accord higher pay and status to medical laboratory scientific officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The pay and grading of National Health Service medical laboratory scientific officers is a matter for the professional and technical staffs 'B' Whitley council. I understand that an offer of a 5 per cent. increase in pay and allowances effective from 1 April 1987 was accepted on 16 November. Discussions are expected to begin shortly on proposals for a comprehensive review of the medical laboratory scientific officer grading structure.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider individual representations for medical laboratory scientific officers when he prepares his response to the forthcoming report of the current Whitley B committee.

Mr. Newton: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the planned discussions between the management and staff sides of the professional and technical staffs 'B' Whitley council on proposals for a revised grading structure for medical laboratory scientific officers. MLSOs will be represented in those discussions by the staff side of the Council, but it is open to individuals to make their views known through management channels.

Cervical Cancer (Dewsbury)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many women in the area covered by Dewsbury health authority have died from cervical cancer in the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what is this figure expressed per 1,000 women.

Mrs. Currie: The information is shown in the table.

Numbers of deaths and death rates per 1,000 women for malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri (ICD 180)[1] for usual residents of Dewsbury health authority.[2]

Waiting Lists (Teesside)

Miss Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are on hospital waiting lists in (a) South Tees health authority and (b) North Tees health authority.

Mr. Newton: The latest information available centrally is contained in the booklet "Hospital In-Patient Waiting List—England at 31 March 1987, National, Regional and District Summaries", copies of which have been placed in the Library. For more recent figures the hon. Member may wish to write to the chairmen of the district health authorities concerned.

Emergency Alarm Systems

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any proposals to provide assistance through income support with the installation and running costs of emergency alarm systems.

Mr. Portillo: The costs of the installation of emergency alarm systems are not met under the existing supplementary benefit scheme and we do not intend to make specific provision for this under income support or the social fund. Where a person's income support assessment includes an amount towards his housing costs (in particular, mortgage interest) help will be available for the running costs of an emergency alarm system. Help will be given only where the alarm system is provided in accommodation which is occupied by and is particularly suitable for elderly, sick or disabled people and the claimant has no choice but to meet the cost as part of their service charge.

Parliamentary Constituencies (Hampshire)

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report each of the parliamentary constituencies in Hampshire in ranking order according to the size of their current electorates, indicating the percentage variation on the average number of electors per constituency in England.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested has been taken from OPCS monitor EL87/1 and is as follows:

1987 electorate

Parliamentary constituency	Number	Percentage difference from English average[1]
Eastleigh	88,664	+27·4
East Hampshire	87,476	+25·7
Aldershot	81,791	+17·5
Portsmouth, North	81,350	+16·9
Romsey and Waterside	80,179	+15·2
Basingstoke	79,116	+13·7
Fareham	77,910	+12·0
Winchester	77,527	+11·4
Havant	77,412	+11·2
Portsmouth, South	76,814	+10·4
New Forest	75,780	+8·9
Southampton, Test	74,711	+7·4
Southampton, Itchen	73,412	+5·5
North West Hampshire	70,916	+1·9
Gosport	68,891	−1·0

[1] The average number of electors per constituency in England is 69,585.

Short-term Locums

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has made any estimate of the effect of the abatement rules on the availability of recently retired consultants for short-term locums in the summer months, and of the effect this has had on National Health Service waiting lists.

Mr. Newton: It is not possible to make any such estimate. The abatement rules which apply to consultants are those which apply to all National Health Service staff who retire from the service and take retirement benefits. The current abatement provisions in the major public sector occupational schemes are under review.

Medical Practitioners

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services why he has not answered the letter from the Secretary of the British Medical Association of November 1986 requesting a meeting with him on the subject of the superannuability of fees payable to medical practitioners who serve on district management teams; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have replied to the British Medical Association today, at the same time expressing my regret about the error which has occurred.

Abortion

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost to public funds of abortions carried out under the National Health Service for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: In 1986-87 the total cost of abortions carried out under the National Heath Service, including those performed under agency arrangements with the private sector, is estimated to be approximately £13 million.

Family Planning

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost to public funds for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available of supplying under the National Health Service, without charge, contraceptive devices and related substances.

Mr. Newton: The latest information available about the cost of National Health Service family planning services gives expenditure of £76 million in England in 1985-86. This covers the cost of contraceptive substances and appliances prescribed, contraceptive fees paid to general practitioners and appropriate health authority staffing and overheads costs.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide information for each of his Department's offices at Bradford and Keighley on total expenditure on supplementary single payments and number of payments granted for the periods (i) January 1985 to December 1985, (ii) January 1986 to December 1986, (iii) August 1985 to July 1986 and (iv) August 1986 to July 1987.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 2 December 1987]: Information about single payment expenditure and the number of payments made for each of the Department's offices in Bradford and Keighley is given in the tables.

Number of payments

	1984-85	1985-86	[1]1986-87	[1]1987-88

Notes:

[1] Figures for 1986-87 and 1987-88 are provisional and subject to amendment.

1. Information is given for the year April to April.
2. Figures for 1987-88 are given for the period 8 April 1987 to 28 July 1987.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the number of households receiving (a) certificated and (b) standard housing benefit containing non-dependants in respect of whom deductions from housing benefit are made; and if he will estimate the proportion, in each case, who are subject to either the higher or lower rate of non-dependant deduction at the latest available date.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 3 December 1987]: The estimated number of housing benefit recipients in Great Britain for which a deduction was made in respect of one or more non-dependants in autumn 1986 was as follows:

	Thousands
Certificated cases	340
Standard cases	370
TOTAL	710

The number of non-dependants in each category in certificated housing benefit households was as follows:

	Thousands
Higher rate deduction	210
Lower rate deduction	160
TOTAL	370

This total is higher than the corresponding figure quoted above because there is on average more than one non-dependant per household.

Information on the number of non-dependants in each category in households receiving standard housing benefit is not available.

Labour Force Survey

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report data from the latest labour force survey showing how many residents of the United Kingdom (a) were born in the Republic of Ireland and (b) are citizens of the Republic; and whether he will include separate figures for the south-east region and Greater London.

Mrs. Currie: It is estimated from the 1986 labour force survey that, in spring 1986, the numbers were as follows:

Area of residence	Persons born in Republic of Ireland '000	Citizens of the Republic of Ireland '000
United Kingdom	580	560
South East Region of England	290	250
Greater London	180	160

Blind People

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the most recent statistics on annual registrations as partially sighted by people in age ranges (a) 16 to 64 years and (b) and over 65 years, whose BD8 shows the cause of blindness to be (i) glaucoma, (ii) diabetic retinopathy and (iii) cataracts;

(2) what are the most recent statistics on annual registrations as blind by people in age ranges (a) 16 to 64 years and (b) and over 65 years, whose BD8 shows the cause of blindness to be (i) glaucoma, (ii) diabetic retinopathy and (iii) cataracts.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 7 December 1987]: The data are given in the table.

Annual registrations as blind and partially sighted by people aged 16 to 64 years and over 65 years: certain causes

16-64 years (1985-86)
Glaucoma	72	68
Diabetic retinopathy	152	128
Cataracts (including congenital)	95	128
Over 65 years (1980-81)
Glaucoma	1,209	834
Diabetic retinopathy	437	243
Cataracts (including congenital)	1,012	1,054

Note: Registrations arising from more than one of the causes listed have been counted under both, or all three, conditions.

Restart Interviews

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish up-to-date figures showing the total proportion and numbers of benefit disqualifications or reductions that are linked to restart interviews; how many of these were (a) because of failure to attend the interview without good cause, together with the number of reinstatements following a later interview, (b) on the grounds of non-availability for work and (c) because of the refusal of suitable offers of employment; how many of these decisions were subject to appeal; and what was the outcome of such appeals.

Mr. Lee [holding answer 7 December 1987]: I have been asked to reply.

Under long-standing legal rules people can lose benefit if they fail to attend an employment interview without good reason. Up to 28 September the total number of claimants disallowed under these rules for failing to attend restart interviews was 27,991. Information is not available on the number of these people who appealed against these dis-allowances nor on the number who had their benefit reinstated following a later interview.

Any refusal of benefit subsequent to a restart interview follows not from the interview itself but from the decision of an independent adjudication officer operating under long-standing legal rules adopted by successive Governments.

SCOTLAND

Firearms

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received since 1 July calling for amendment of the law of Scotland relating to the control of firearms.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: About 100, the majority commenting on the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department on 22 September of the Government's main conclusions following the Hungerford tragedy.

Health Boards

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will itemise, for each health board in Scotland, the donations received by the health board from voluntary organisations, patients, relatives or other benefactors for each month of 1987 to date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the pay settlement for National Health staff has cost each health board in Scotland in each year since 1982; and how much extra funding for this was made available by his Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 8 December 1987]: Table 1 shows the full cost of pay settlements for National Health staff for the years 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87. These figures are derived from broad estimates by health boards. I regret that figures for 1982-83 and 1983-84 are not available.

Boards' allocations have been increased year on year to allow for forecast inflation, including the cost of pay settlements. Financial allocations additional to this were made in 1984-85 and 1986-87 and these are shown in table 2. The amounts in table 2 are in addition to the allowances for forecast inflation already included in boards' allocations in those years.

Agricultural Development

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in the light of the failure to resolve EEC budget difficulties, he will indicate the likely date of the commencement of the Scottish islands agricultural development programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Spring 1988.

Mr. James Stobo

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the relevant experience of the newly appointed chairman of the Scottish Seed Potato Development Council, Mr. James Stobo, with particular reference to any direct or indirect experience of the production, processing or planting of seed potatoes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In accordance with the provisions of the Industrial Organisation and Development Act, 1947 the chairman of a development council established in the exercise of powers conferred by that Act is required to be one of the council's independent members, that is, he must have no financial or industrial interest which would be likely to affect him in the discharge of his functions as a member of the council. Mr. James Stobo satisfies this statutory requirement in that he has no financial or industrial interest in seed potato matters. By virtue of his wide-ranging knowledge and experience of agricultural promotion and marketing Mr. Stobo is well qualified for the post of chairman of the Scottish Seed Potato Development Council, the main function of which is to promote the production and marketing of Scottish seed potatoes.

Forestry Commission

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he is yet in a position to announce the outcome of the Forestry Commission's review of the composition and procedures of its regional advisory committees.

Mr. Rifkind: The Forestry Commission has now completed its review, and my right hon. Friends and I have agreed a number of changes designed to improve the effectiveness of the regional advisory committees in their role of conciliating over forestry proposals in respect of which there are unresolved objections from statutory authorities consulted by the Commission.

This review stemmed from the undertaking given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave) on 31 January 1985 in his response to the Countryside Commission's Report "A Better Future for the Uplands" (Official Report, columns 282-90), that the Forestry Commission would be seeking ways to achieve greater public accountability for the regional advisory committees' proceedings. The basis on which the Commission approached this task was to look for ways in which the proceedings of the committees might be better publicised when they are exercising their conciliation role in disputed forestry grant and felling applications, so that the public can have an opportunity to voice their opinion. The Commission subsequently extended the review to consider possible improvements to the composition of the committees with a view to achieving a better balance on them between forestry and other countryside interests.

In the course of the review, the Forestry Commission issued a consultation paper setting out its proposals which drew comments from over 50 organisations and individuals with interests in forestry, land use and the environment. The consultation paper, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House, also provided a helpful background summary of the Commission's present consultative procedures for forestry grant and felling permissions and the key role played in these by the regional advisory committees.

The Commission noted the concern which has been expressed by environmental bodies that the planning and environmental members on the committees cannot be expected to be in a position to cover the whole range of environmental interests—such as landscape, recreation and nature conservation—and that the numbers should be increased to accommodate members with expertise in those areas. The farming interest on the committees was also considered to be under-represented. In the past, this problem has to a certain extent been met by the appointment of forestry members with multi-disciplinary backgrounds, but this was clearly not a satisfactory answer in the longer term.

With the growing importance attached to the regional advisory committees' conciliatory role, coupled with the Commission's new environmenal duty introduced under the Wildlife and Countryside (Amendment) Act 1985, we have some sympathy with the Commission's conclusion, which has received fairly wide support from both forestry and environmental interests, that the membership of the committees should be raised from a maximum of nine to 12, and we are considering this matter further.

In the meantime, the regional advisory committee chairmen will be encouraged to invite to meetings considering disputed grant or felling cases any persons whom they think might be able to assist in achieving an agreed solution, particularly when a case involves an interest not represented on the committee. The Commission will prepare and maintain lists of persons who could be asked to serve in this capacity as the occasion arises.

As regards other aspects of the appointment of committee members, we agree that the Forestry Commissioners should give closer consideration to ensuring that appointees are suited by technical, professional and practical experience and knowledge to speak for the general interests they are appointed to represent. We also endorse the Commission's proposal that the service of Committee members should normally be restricted to two three-year terms, although exceptions might be made in special circumstances to retain the services of a particular member for an extended period. This proposal has merit in allowing a reasonable turnover of members. Further, we endorse the principle that new regional advisory committee chairmen should as far as possible be appointed from backgrounds which are unlikely to cause any real or apparent clash of interests when disputed cases come before their committees. It is also desirable that the chairmen should have a broad range of knowledge on relevant land use matters.

Turning to the main purpose of the review, which was to find ways of achieving greater public accountability in the proceedings of the regional advisory committees, the Forestry Commission proposed in its consultation paper that procedures should be introduced to give the public the opportunity to submit views to the committees when they were considering disputed planting and felling proposals. It was envisaged that this would be done through a system of advertising details of cases to be considered by the committees and inviting those wishing to comment to do so in writing; such comments would then be taken into account by the Committee in its discussions with the parties to the dispute.

The Commission received a wide variety of views on this proposal, ranging from those which felt that it would detract from the regional advisory committees' chances of successfully fulfilling their conciliation role to those which considered that, while it was a small step in the right direction, it did not go far enough. A number of environmental interests wish to see all forestry proposals presented for public comment, not just the small percentage referred to the committees.

We have considered these representations very carefully, but have concluded that the Commission's proposals strike broadly the right balance between wider public involvement and the risk of increased bureaucracy and administrative costs. However, the statutory authorities consulted are already encouraged to consider the views of voluntary bodies and others in commenting on forestry applications, and we have asked the commission to discuss with the local authority associations the effectiveness of those arrangements and any ways in which they might be improved and made more cost-effective.

Again, we have carefully considered calls for the meetings of the committees to discuss disputed cases to be open to the public, and for the record of such meetings, including the intended advice to the Foresty Commissioners, to be published. We accept the commission's view, however, that it would not be practical or conducive to the committees' conciliation role to throw open site discussions with the applicant and the objecting authority or authorities to anyone who wishes to attend. As was stated in the consultation paper, the committee chairmen will nevertheless have discretion to invite any person or non-statutory organisation who has submitted views to attend or be represented at the site meeting, if it is considered that this will assist in the conciliation process.

We also take the view that the publication of a record of committee meetings could inhibit full and frank discussion between the parties and hamper the prospects of a compromise solution being found. It would be the intention, however, to notify those who had submitted comments of the outcome of the case.

The procedure for public particiption proposed by the Commission is necessarily a limited one, but the Government is satisfied that it should broadly meet the need for public views to be taken into account by the regional advisory committees without detracting from their conciliation function. We have therefore asked the commision to introduce it in respect of all future cases.

The Government greatly appreciate the dedicated and constructive contribution that the members of the regional advisory committees make, not only in giving general advice to the forestry commission but in the part they play in the Commission's consultation procedures. We hope that the changes I have announced will assist them in their work and lead to a wider understanding and acceptance of their role.

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, during the past eight years, Ministers of his Department have held joint meetings with health authorities in Scotland, together with right hon. and hon. Members representing constituencies served by those health authorities; and whether he is currently prepared to consider such three-sided meetings if so requested by health authorities in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There has been one such formal meeting, although Ministers have from time to time had less formal discussions with constituency MPs when visiting health board facilities. Ministers meet regularly with health board chairmen to discuss a wide range of issues, and health boards in turn hold meetings with constituency MPs.

Bypasses

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current state of progress of the bypasses for (a) Auckinleck and Cumnock, (b) New Cumnock, (c) Maybole and (d) Girvan; how this compares with the planned progress; and what are the reasons for any alteration in plans or speed of planning or construction.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: These schemes are at various stages of preparation. As with all schemes, progress depends on the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures, the availability of funds and the priority of particular schemes within the context of competing claims from the entire trunk road network in Scotland. I would not expect any of the four schemes mentioned by the hon. Member to commence construction before the early 1990s.

School Management

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which political parties responded to the consultation paper "School Management and the Role of Parents".

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 3 December 1987]: We received submissions for the national organisations of the Scottish Conservative and Unionist party, the Scottish Labour party, the Liberal alliance, the Scottish National party and the Scottish Green party and from a number of local and constituency associations.

Social Work Services Group

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what innovative proposals, policy guidelines or ideas for dealing with delinquency have been published by the Social Work Services Group;

(2) what innovative proposals, policy guidelines or ideas for dealing with alcohol abuse have been published by the Social Work Services Group;

(3) what innovative proposals, policy guidelines or ideas for dealing with drug problems have been published by the Social Work Services Group;

(4) what has been the published contribution of the Social Work Services Group to policy development for the mentally handicapped;

(5) what has been the published contribution of the Social Work Services Group to policy development of community services for the mentally ill;

(6) what has been the published contribution of the Social Work Services Group to the development of policy initiatives for 16 to 21-year-old offenders;

(7) what has been the published contribution of the Social Work Services Group to the development of policy initiatives for the care of the elderly in the community.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [pursuant to his reply, 7 December 1987, c. 41]: Since 1979 there have been published or widely circulated to social work agencies, some 80 circulars or similar communications to local authorities, 12 practice guidance documents, 32 research reports, four reports of programme planning groups (jointly with the Scottish Home and Health Department), and a number of miscellaneous documents, including reports of seminar proceedings, bearing on topics mentioned by the hon. Member. The group's purpose in issuing material of this kind is to provide information and guidance to local authority social work departments which, since reorganisation in May 1975, have exercised responsibility for developing regional policies and service patterns, and to other social work agencies.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the latest available figures by commodity for the total amounts of food taken into European Economic Community intervention by the United Kingdom Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce; and if he will break these figures down by region.

Mr. Donald Thompson: At 30 September 1987 intervention stocks in the United Kingdom were:

	Cereals Tonnes	Beef Tonnes	Butter Tonnes	Skimmed milk powder Tonnes

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by commodity, town of location and amount in each store, the stocks currently held in European Economic Community intervention by the United Kingdom Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member of the answer given to the hon. Member for Birmingham Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis) on 19 November at column 663.

Free Food

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the final figures of the amounts of food distributed in the United Kingdom under the free food for the needy scheme, broken down by region and by commodity.

Mr. MacGregor: The information is as follows:

A. Products released from intervention stores; final figures (regional breakdown by location of store)

EEC Expenditure

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total EEC expenditure on (a) cereals, (b) dairy products and (c) sheepmeat in each of the past three years; and what is the projected outturn for the current financial year.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is set out in the table below.

Italy (Lamb and Sheep Exports)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report the details of consignments of lambs or sheep from the United Kingdom which were refused entry to Italy between 26 April and 31 December 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson: For a period following 3 May 1986 food imports into Italy were temporarily disrupted while the Italian authorities worked out a certification system following the Chernobyl incident. That apart and aside from routine checks on matters such as health and welfare certification — which can occasionally cause temporary delays — I have no evidence to suggest that the Italian authorities have refused entry to our sheep or lambs.

Battery Hens

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what provisions within the Welfare of Battery Hens Regulations 1987 are additional to those required to implement the European directive 86/113/EEC; and for what reason they were included in the regulations;

(2) what scientific research has been undertaken by his Department into the optimum size of battery hen cages to house one, two and three birds, respectively.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Member states are required to implement at least the minimum standards laid down in this directive. The Welfare of Battery Hens Regulations 1987 require more space than the directive's minimum of 450 sq cm per bird when there are only one, two or three birds in a cage. This is because it is recognised from work carried out in this country and abroad that birds in such small colony sizes are less able to share each others' space than when there are four, five or six birds in a cage. Work carried out by my Department suggests that mortality is reduced and egg production increased when small numbers of birds are given more space.

Dead Sheep

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he first issued instructions in 1986 to farmers in the restricted area of Cumbria on how to dispose of dead sheep.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Food Protection (Emergency Prohibitions) Order 1986 was issued on 20

June 1986. Under it movement of any sheep (either live or dead) off holdings in a designated area was forbidden except under a consent. Advice to farmers on disposal of dead sheep (on or off the holding) was given by my staff on a case-by-case basis.

Chickens

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the amount of (a) live chickens and (b) frozen chickens imported into the United Kingdom in 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Details of imports are not available in the form requested.

In 1986, 743,820 live chickens (other than day-old chicks) were imported into the United Kingdom. In the same period, a total of 70,418 tonnes of fresh or frozen chickens were imported.

Radiation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to the adequacy of the weather charts available to the National Radiological Protection Board for the period immediately after the Chernobyl accident and as to the National Radiological Protection Board's ability to build up a detailed picture of the areas with high rainfall and consequent fallout; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: I have been asked to reply.

The National Radiological Protection Board had access to weather data provided by the Meteorological Office, together with information on dose rates and activity concentrations in air, rain, grass, soil and foods supplied by a number of other bodies. This was sufficient to enable a detailed assessment of any potential risks to be completed quickly so that advice on remedial and protection action could be given to Government and the public. Advice about refraining from drinking undiluted, fresh rainwater for prolonged periods was given within a day of the radiation cloud reaching the United Kingdom.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration is given in deciding the allocation of housing investment programme moneys to an individual local authority as to that authority's housing rent arrears.

Mrs. Roe: Housing investment programme allocations to local authorities are based on an assessment of need. We are currently consulting the local authority associations about the details of the methodology for allocations for 1988-89.

Councillors

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of local authorities are not liable to pay rates.

Mr. Chope: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Residuary Bodies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the expenses and emoluments paid to each chair and every member of the residuary bodies for the five former metropolitan counties for the year 1986-87.

Mr. Chope: Information of salaries for the year 1986-87 is as follows:

	Salary on 1 April 1986 £ per annum	Salary from 1 July 1986 £ per annum
Chairmen
Greater Manchester; Merseyside; West Midlands	17,600	18,198
South Yorkshire; Tyne and Wear; West Yorkshire	16,000	16,544
Deputy Chairman
South Yorkshire	13,200	13,742
Members
All members	5,600	5,830

Notes:

(i) As a result of increased time commitment to residuary body work the salaries of five members of Merseyside residuary body were doubled, during the period 1 February to 31 July 1986;

(ii) One member of West Yorkshire residuary body received a daily attendance allowance as an alternative to an annual salary. This was increased on 13 May 1986 from £16·to £16·70;

(iii) Remuneration is subject to abatement, if applicable, in respect of public sector pension received.

Information on the total expenses paid to chairmen and members is contained in the residuary body annual reports and accounts for 1986-87 which were laid before Parliament on 25 November.

Estate Action

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the £4 million for Estate Action packages, published by his departmental news release No. 499 of 1 December, is for the expenditure of money provided by him in grant and how much in loan sanctions from existing resources of local councils.

Mrs. Roe: As indicated in the press release of 1 December, £217,624 (5·5 per cent.) of the approved expenditure announced that day will be eligible for estate action urban programme grant; the other HIP extra allocations totalling some £3·7 million (94·5 per cent.) are additional resources being made available by Estate Action to the local authorities.

Rate Support Grant (Bolton)

Mr. Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he will take to rectify the miscalculation in the future education and highways elements of grant-related expenditure in establishing Bolton's rate support grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will correct at the first supplementary report stage the errors so far discovered and acknowledged by his Department and any errors which may subsequently be confirmed in his calculation of the rate support grant settlement for 1988-89 for Bolton; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Information supplied to the Department by the Department of Education and Science and used in calculating grant-related expenditure assessments for the 1988-89 RSG settlement had not taken into account further education students undertaking courses as part of the MSC technical and vocational education initiative. GREs for all education authorities will be revised in the first supplementary report for 1988-89 to correct this. There has been no miscalculation of the highway maintenance component of Bolton's GRE.

Air Pollution

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will outline the position of Her Majesty's Government with regard to the proposal from Switzerland, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden and Austria, within the framework of the UNECE Geneva convention on long-range transboundary air pollution, to establish a protocol to achieve a 30 per cent. reduction in emissions of nitrogen oxides by 1995.

Mr. Moynihan: In common with the great majority of countries which are parties to the convention the United Kingdom Government do not consider the objective of a 30 per cent. reduction in nitrogen oxide (NOx) emissions by 1995, on a 1980 base, to be a feasible objective, given, for example, the lead times involved for the introduction of the new emission controls technology.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the discussions held between 16 and 18 November during the meeting of the working group on nitrogen oxides under the auspices of the UNECE Geneva convention on long-range transboundary air pollution, in view of the working group's mandate to draft a protocol which would result in effective reductions in emissions of nitrogen oxides by 1995.

Mr. Moynihan: The United Kingdom, together with representatives of 20 other parties to the convention, participated in the meeting to which the hon. Member refers.

The working group agreed on the structure of the draft protocol and on a number of articles, but has yet to reach agreement on the key articles concerning basic obligations and transfer of technology. I expect further progress to be made at the next meeting of the working group, scheduled for 16-19 February 1988.

There is no reference to 1995 in the mandate of the working group.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the anticipated annual emissions of nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons from petrol-engined motor vehicles in the United Kingdom for each of the years up to the end of the century, taking into consideration the limits agreed under the Luxembourg agreement and changes in the vehicle fleet.

Mr. Moynihan: Estimates of future nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbon emissions from petrol-engined vehicles depend on assumptions about growth in vehicle use, vehicle replacement rate and the full emission characteristics of vehicles built to new specifications. Uncertainties attach to each of these factors and estimates are revised as new evidence becomes available. Warren Spring Laboratory has made some initial predictions for the Department through to the year 2010 and these have been published in report LR 612 (AP)M. I shall arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will outline (a) the results yielded by daily measurements of precipitation composition from the primary network of nine rural sites during the most recent week for which figures are available, (b) the results yielded by the secondary network of collectors during the most recent week for which figures are available and (c) for each network the minimum period of delay between recordings being taken and results being available.

Mr. Moynihan: Results from the first year of operation (1986) of the primary and secondary acid deposition networks were published in September 1987 by Warren Spring Laboratory which undertakes the monitoring on behalf of the Department. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library. The report shows maps of the annual averages of acid deposition. Stringent quality control of the data is carried out in quarterly periods; validated data are generally available within one month of the end of each quarter. I am arranging for data for the most recent available week to be extracted and sent to the hon. Member.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the tonnages of both sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides emitted by each of the coal and oil-fired power stations operated by the Central Electricity Generating Board for each year between 1970 and the present day (b) the corresponding percentage sulphur content of the fuel consumed at each of these stations and (c) the source of the fuel.

Mr. Moynihan: I regret that this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made as to the effectiveness of the use of tall chimneys to dilute and disperse emissions of (a) sulphur dioxide and (b) nitrogen oxides, from fossil fuel power stations.

Mr. Moynihan: Evidence for the effectiveness of tall chimneys in achieving low ground level concentrations of sulphur dioxide is provided by the data published in the Department's annual digests of environmental protection and water statistics. These show that ground level concentrations have fallen in line with emissions from low level domestic, commercial and industrial sources but are much less influenced by power station emissions. The results are consistent with the parameters imposed on power station chimney design intended to give acceptable ground level concentrations of both pollutants.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the current estimates of acid deposition falling over Britain which originates from United Kingdom sources of air pollution; and if he will provide a breakdown of this information into sulphur and nitrogen oxides.

Mr. Moynihan: Sulphur and nitrogen budgets for the United Kingdom were presented by the United Kingdom review group on acid rain in its second report to the Department ("Acid Deposition in the United Kingdom 1981-85", pages 65-66). Copies have been placed in the Library.

Approximately 85 per cent. of sulphur deposition on the United Kingdom is estimated to come from United Kingdom sources, and the figures for nitrogen oxides is very similar.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his written answer, Official Report, 8 July, column 161, to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), whether he is now able to make a statement on the findings of the study by the Fellowship of Engineering into the environmental impact of various flue gas desulphurisation systems for use at coal-fired power stations.

Mr. Moynihan: The report of the Fellowship of Engineering's study on acidic emissions abatement processes will be presented to the Department on 15 December. I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House. One of its four volumes is devoted to coal combustion. The environmental impact of the various flue gas desulphurisation processes depends not only on the process but also on the circumstances of the particular power station. The report is a valuable source of part of the information needed to assess the impact of FGD at particular stations but it also has a wider value as a source document for specialists investigating the implications of possible future abatement options.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration has been given to the exploitation of indigenous reserves of low sulphur coal as a means of reducing emissions of sulphur dioxide from coal-fired power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The House of Commons Environment Committee considered this possibility in 1984 but concluded that there was little scope for using indigenous low-sulphur coal to reduce emissions from power stations.

The bulk of the United Kingdom's low-sulphur coal production comes from Scotland and from Wales. The former is almost entirely used already by the south of Scotland Electricity Board, and the latter by specialist markets. I understand that there is no scope for the economic expansion of this production.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment the chief inspector of pollution has made as to whether the prevention of emissions of sulphur dioxide from the chimneys of the major coal-fired power stations not included in the three-station programme of flue gas desulphurisation retrofitting is practicable with current abatement technology.

Mr. Moynihan: The chief inspector has advised that for new coal-fired power stations flue gas desulphurisation is practicable with current abatement technology. On the basis of this advice the Government, in September 1986, in addition to authorising the CEGB to retrofit 6,000 MW of existing generating capacity over the period 1988 to 1997, announced that future coal-fired power stations would be required to be fitted with FGD. There are no plans at present to extend the retrofitting programme to other existing stations, but the possibility is kept under review.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Rail Services

7. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of the British Railways Board about rail services in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: None.

Urban Development Corporation

10. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to seek to set up mini urban development corporations in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: I plan to introduce legislation to create a development corporation which would be responsible for developing a series of vacant and underused sites along the banks of the River Lagan as it flows through Belfast's inner city.

I do not foresee the need to create new development corporations for other areas of Belfast or elsewhere.

Maghaberry Prison

13. Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Maghaberry prison will be ready for full occupation.

Mr. Stanley: There are two prisons on the same site at Maghaberry, one for women and one for men. The women's prison has been fully operational since March 1986. It is anticipated that the whole of the male prison will be available for occupation from January 1988. A gradual build-up of the population in the male prison has already started and will continue over the course of next year.

Mutual Understanding

15. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to increase teaching in education for mutual understanding in schools.

Dr. Mawhinney: On 14 September I announced a new initiative in education for mutual understanding and allocated additional resources for this purpose. As part of this initiative there will be greater emphasis on EMU in the training of teachers and increased support from the Department's inspectorate. Funding for voluntary groups involved in inter schools' work will also be enhanced.

19. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met schoolchildren in Enniskillen to promote education for mutual understanding.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have not spoken directly to these children since the tragic events of Remembrance Sunday. In addressing local sixth formers at Fermanagh college of further education in September last year I took the opportunity of emphasising the importance of mutual understanding when launching "The General Lesson", a copy of which is in the Library.

Flood Damage

17. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding he will provide for the victims of the flooding at Strabane.

Mr. Needham: In my reply of 3 December 1987, at columns 638-69, I indicated to the hon. Member the help provided at that time. Last week I announced a further package of measures to help those in genuine need in both Omagh and Strabane, including the creation of 45 ACE posts to provide the much needed help to refit and redecorate damaged property. I would also encourage those who may be eligible for payments under the social security system to claim these entitlements immediately.

Schools (Parental Choice)

18. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to introduce greater parental choice of schools in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: I announced new arrangements on 7 April this year to abolish intake quotas to secondary schools which will give parents greater freedom of choice in the selection of secondary school for their children. The new arrangements are planned to take effect from September 1988.

Intergovernmental Conference

16. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has any plans to seek to change the scope and nature of the activities of the Intergovernmental Conference set up by the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I have no such plans at present. My hon. Friend is aware that the agreement itself provides for a review of the working of the conference next November.

Queen's University

20. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy, when fixing the block grant for Queen's University, Belfast, to stipulate that open competitions be held for academic posts and that all heads of department be required to spend a minimum number of days per week on university business; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. Appointments to academic posts at Queen's University, Belfast and the conditions of service of staff are entirely matters for the university authorities.

Security

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cross-border security in the period since Sunday 8 November.

28. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation in Northern Ireland.

22. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

33. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the security position in Northern Ireland.

38. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on improving cross-border security since 8 November.

40. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I refer my hon. Friends and the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery).

Election Candidates (Declaration)

23. Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to introduce a declaration of non-violence to be undertaken by all local government election candidates.

Mr. Needham: The Government's discussion paper "Elected Representatives and the Democratic Process in Northern Ireland" sought views by 30 November on such a proposal. We are now considering the way forward in the light of the responses received.

Housing Executive

24. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent the new budget for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive takes account of the difficulties faced by the executive in making adequate provision for the elderly, the disabled, and the homeless and in maintaining and improving existing housing stock.

Mr. Needham: Housing needs and conditions in Northern Ireland are assessed annually by the Housing Executive and the results of its reviews are considered fully when the public expenditure allocations for Northern Ireland are decided. While it has not proved possible to provide all of the funds sought by the Housing Executive for 1988-89, in recognition of the difficulties faced by the NIHE, the resources allocated are, in terms of expenditure per capita, significantly above other regions of the United Kingdom. It will be for the executive to propose, in the first instance, how these resources should be used in the provision of the various services which it supplies to tenants and applicants.

Postgraduate Teacher Training Awards

25. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to change the eligibility criteria for postgraduate teacher training awards for Northern Ireland students studying in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have no such plans for the immediate future, but I shall continue to review the position each year.

Education Reform Bill

26. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to seek to extend the provisions of the Education Reform Bill to Northern Ireland.

36. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations he has had on the implications of the Education Reform Bill for policy on secondary and higher education in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The provisions of the Education Reform Bill will not generally extend to Northern Ireland, apart from those relating to certain university matters. I shall be issuing a consultative paper early in the new year inviting comments on how best measures corresponding to those in the Bill can be implemented in Northern Ireland. Thereafter, separate Northern Ireland legislation will be brought forward.

ACE Scheme

27. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the level of funding for the ACE scheme in the financial year 1987-88; and if he will make a statement on future levels of funding.

Mr. Viggers: A total of £28·84 million. An additional £10 million has been allocated to increase provision for the ACE programme in 1988-89.

Youth Training Programme

29. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the operation of the youth training programme in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: The youth training programme has provided a two-year training package for 16 and 17-year-olds since 1982. During that time there have been 75,000 entrants. At the end of October this year there were 14,000 young people in training.

Equal Opportunities

30. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Government are to publish their reply to the report on fair employment of the Standing Advisory Committee on Human Rights.

Mr. Viggers: We shall announce our plans for legislation on religious equality of opportunity as soon as possible in the new year. Our detailed proposals will take full account of the recommendations of the Standing Advisory Commission's report.

31. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he accepts the recommendation of the Standing Advisory Committee on Human Rights in its report on fair employment, that the Government establish the goal of reducing the differential between male Catholic and male Protestant unemployment from two and a half times to one and a half times over the next five years.

Mr. Viggers: The Government's goal is to effect a substantial reduction in the disparity in employment opportunity between the two communities, through the immediate adoption by all employers of the sound employment practices outlined in our "Guide to Effective Practice."

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many copies of the document "Religious Equality of Opportunity in Employment: Guide to Effective Practice" have been distributed.

Mr. Viggers: Approximately 29,700 copies of the "Guide to Effective Practice" have been distributed to date.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he is yet in a positin to say what steps he proposes to take to implement the recommendations of the Standing Advisory Committee on Human Rights report on equality of opportunity to use the Government's purchasing power to promote equal opportunities, and to eradicate religious discrimination, in employment.

Mr. Viggers: The recommendations made by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights are being carefully studied and they will be taken fully into account in framing our new legislative proposals. Details will be announced as soon as possible in the new year.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether it is his intention to legislate by means of a Bill, rather than by Order in Council, on the recommendation of the Standing Advisory Committee on Human Rights' report on fair employment.

Mr. Viggers: We intend to introduce new fair employment legislation at the earliest opportunity. My right hon. Friend and I have already made it clear that we shall take the recommendations of the Standing Advisory Commission fully into account in the new provisions. We have noted the representations that such legislation should be by Bill.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

32. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry).

Terrorism

34. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he is satisfied with progress in the fight against terrorism.

Mr. Tom King: Since 23 November a major security operation has been mounted by the Irish security forces, supported in Northern Ireland by the RUC and the Army, which has resulted in a number of important arrests and some finds of explosives and munitions.

Since I last answered questions in the House on 12 November, two civilians have died in sectarian attacks. The security forces have continued their determined and courageous work. So far this year 431 people have been charged with serious offences, including 27 with murder, while 247 weapons, approximately 18,000 rounds of ammunition and nearly 13,000 lb of explosives have been recovered.

In addition, the Garda Siochana has recovered up to the end of October 123 weapons, 10,000 rounds of ammunition and some 4,000 lb of explosives.

Recent events north and south of the border have emphasised most clearly the vital need for both Governments to co-operate closely in the defeat of terrorism throughout the island of Ireland.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation following the Enniskillen bombing.

Mr. Tom King: Since 23 November a major security operation has been mounted by the Irish security forces, supported in Northern Ireland by the RUC and the Army, which has resulted in a number of important arrests and some finds of explosives and munitions.

That does not include a product of the recent search, which I understand will be announced this afternoon. It included some 50 weapons and four bunkers which are believed to have been for storage of possible shipments.

Recent events north and south of the border have emphasised most clearly the vital need for both Governments to co-operate closely in the defeat of terrorism throughout the island of Ireland.

Labour Statistics

35. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of unemployed in each local office area in each of the last three years.

Mr. Viggers: The information is as follows:

Local office area (Jobmarket area)	Number of unemployed claimants[1]
	October 1985	October 1986	October 1987
Antrim	3,802	3,775	3,455

Northern Ireland	121,822	130,635	124,701

[1] There was a change in the compilation of the unemployment statistics in March 1986, which provided a more accurate and consistent measure of the numbers claiming benefits. This change consisted of compiling the statistics 3 weeks, rather than 1 week, after the specified count date each month. It resulted in the count being lower by an estimated average of 2,100 per month in Northern Ireland.

Financial Policy

37. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that all Government-approved increases, particularly regional rates, public housing rents and public housing heating charges, will not exceed the recognised inflationary factor.

Mr. Stanley: No. The Government recognise the significance of these costs for many households but the policy with regard to increases in charges must also have regard to overall public expenditure and fiscal considerations.

Extradition

39. Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the proposed changes in arrangements for extradition between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the extradition agreement between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Mid-Ulster (Rev. William McCrea).

Integrated Rural Development Plan

41. Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to implement the integrated rural development plan for Northern Ireland, prepared and adopted by the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: I am satisfied that the continued operation of existing administrative and financial arrangements, including the assistance available from the European Community, provide the appropriate means for tackling the social and economic problems in rural areas in Northern Ireland.

RUC Mountain Rescue Team

42. Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the RUC mountain rescue team is maintained.

Mr. Stanley: This is a matter for the operational judgment of the Chief Constable.

Child Welfare

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government intend to take to ensure that those disposed sexually to interfere with handicapped children are not appointed to positions in connection with children's welfare or education.

Mr. Needham: Since 1983 the Department of Health and Social Services has operated a pre-employment consultancy service which enables health and social services boards and voluntary child care organisations to check the criminal background of shortlisted applicants for posts giving access to children in certain child care settings, chiefly children's homes and day-care facilities. The service does not generally extend to posts giving access to children in facilities specifically for the mentally or physically handicapped. However, an interdepartmental working party, representative of the Department of Health and Social Services, the Department of Education and the Northern Ireland Officer, is currently drawing up proposals for a broader vetting system for the statutory sector, covering a wider range of posts, including those giving access to mentally or physically handicapped children. At a later stage consideration will be given to extending the system to the voluntary sector.

Dentistry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dental officers employed by each health and social services board in Northern Ireland are (a) full and (b) part-time; what full-time equivalents these numbers represent; whether their duties are similar; whether any board has any plans to increase the numbers of such officers; what change there has been in their numbers during the last three years; and what were the principal reasons for any such changes.

Mr. Needham: The table sets out the number of dental officers employed by each health and social services board in each of the past three years. The duties of these officers are similar. There are no plans to increase the number of these officers and any alterations in numbers over the past three years has been due to posts becoming vacant and subsequently being filled.

Matrimonial and Family Proceedings (NI) Order

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account Her Majesty's Government took of the various views expressed by interested bodies in submissions on the draft Matrimonial and Family Proceedings (NI) Order.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 3 December to the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor).

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to increase the hill livestock compensatory allowance payable to farmers, in view of the drop in beef cattle numbers.

Mr. Viggers: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on 9 December 1987 the arrangements which will apply in the United Kingdom to the 1988 hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme. I have nothing further to add.

Written Answers to Questions

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Plastic Bullets

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases in the first half of 1987 involving persons injured by plastic bullets in Northern Ireland have been considered by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland; and what action was taken in each case.

The Attorney-General: From 1 January 1987 to 30 June 1987, the Director of Public Prosecutions (Northern Ireland) considered 10 cases involving persons injured by plastic bullets in Northern Ireland. No prosecutions were directed in eight of those 10 cases and in the remaining two cases a final direction awaits the outcome of other proceedings.

Mr. Wallace and Captain Holroyd

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Attorney-General what investigations have been carried out since February 1987 into the allegations of Captain (retired) Fred Holroyd and Mr. Colin Wallace; and whether he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The prosecuting authorities have not requested any such investigations.

BBC (Injunction)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Attorney-General if he will apply to the High Court for an amendment of the injunction against the BBC granted on 4 December so that a fair and accurate report of proceedings in Parliament or a court sitting in public shall not be constituted a breach of the injunction.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to what my right hon. Friend the Lord Privy Seal said on 9 December at column 458.

ENERGY

British Coal

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how much he expects to authorise to be spent on new track, above and below ground, by British Coal, under the Coal Industry Act 1987, in the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

(2) how much he expects to authorise to be spent on coal-face cutting equipment by British Coal, under the Coal Industry Act 1987, in the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government do not make specific allocations within their overall investment approval to the British Coal Corporation. Responsibility for specific investment decisions is a matter for the corporation.

WALES

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales to what extent employment has declined in the tobacco manufacturing industry in Wales since 1977.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Statistics of Trade Act 1947 prohibits disclosure of statistical information that could be related to an individual concern, or statistics from which such information can be deduced.

ENVIRONMENT

Sewage Works (Discharge Consents)

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Norwich, South of 1 December, which sewage works in the Anglian water authority failed their discharge consent conditions in 1986; and on how many occasions.

Mr. Moynihan: The report submitted earlier in the year by Anglian water authority showed that around 300 of the authority's sewage treatment works were deemed to have failed to meet their discharge contents because more than 5 per cent. of samples taken exceeded the consent conditions. In well over half of these cases, however, the consent conditions were in the process of being reviewed as part of a general review of consents started in 1985 for works whose discharges were considered to have no appreciable effect on the receiving waters. Full details of discharges from all non-compliant works are in the public register maintained by the water authority, but I will write to the hon. Member listing the works in question.

The water authority is working towards bringing all its sewage treatment works into compliance by 1990.

Regional Water Authorities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the expenses and emoluments paid to the chairs and members of regional water authorities for the years 1985-86 and 1986-87, distinguishing between executive and non-executive board members, and including any performance bonuses for such years paid to such members after the conclusion of the financial year.

Mr. Moynihan: Information about board members' expenses and emoluments for 1985-86 and 1986-87 is included in the water authorities' 1986-87 annual reports and accounts. These were presented to Parliament on 15 July 1987.

In addition, performance bonuses were awarded for the first time for 1986-87; only chairmen and executive members of authorities which met or exceeded agreed performance aims were eligible for payment. The bonuses were calculated as a percentage of members' renumeration using the following rates:

Water Authority	Per cent.
Anglian	6·5
Northumbrian	15·0
North West	7·5
Severn-Trent	7·5
Southern	12·5

Water Authority	Per cent.
South West	5·0
Thames	[1]
Wessex	7·5
Yorkshire	11·5

Water Research Centre

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to offer the Water Research Centre for sale as a separate concern.

Mr. Moynihan: No. The Water Research Centre is a private company limited by guarantee. Its management and members are considering whether restructuring is required to secure a continuing service to the water industry when the utilities in England and Wales are privatised.

Storm Damage

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) of 2 December, Official Report, column 626, how soon after 31 January 1988 he will be able to meet the claims for special assistance from local authorities for financial help to meet damage from the storm on 15 October.

Mr. Howard: The Department will deal with claims as quickly as possible. We would expect grant normally to be paid within a few weeks of receipt of the claim, subject to the resolution with the authority of any queries on it. In appropriate cases, payment could be prior to the deadline for receipt of claims which has now been extended to 1 March 1988.

Council House Sales

Mr. Quentin Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the table giving information on sales of dwellings by each local authority in England, referred to in the answer given to the hon. Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley) on 24 July, Official Report, column 730.

Mrs. Roe: I have today placed in the Library the latest version of table 2 giving information reported by each local authority in England on the progress on council house sales up to the end of June 1987.

"Paying for Local Government"

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reproduce figures F1 to F5 of Cmnd. 9714 "Paying For Local Government", by region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The sample size used in these exemplifications would be insufficient to give reliable results for all regions.

Rating Reform

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his reply of 26 November, Official Report, column 316, he will provide estimates of poll tax losers and gainers by household types on a gross, before rebate, basis.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 10 December 1987]: At the request of the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham), we are giving priority to rolling forward the community charge computer model to take account of 1986-87 family expenditure survey data. The new information requested by the hon. Member will require a considerable amount of effort to produce. We will provide it after the task of updating the model has been completed.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his reply of 19 November, Official Report, columns 671-672. he will set out the assumptions used on poll tax rebates to arrive at the net figure.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The assumptions were those in paragraph 3.46 of the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd 9714).

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cigarette Imports

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes there have been in levels of imports of cheap cigarettes since the last Budget.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not possible to identify separately cheap cigarettes in the overseas trade statistics. Total United Kingdom imports for the seven months April to October 1987 amounted to 5,099·6 million cigarettes of a value of £32·5 million. For the previous seven months, September 1986 to March 1987, total United Kingdom imports were recorded as 9,926·7 million cigarettes of a value of £59·6 million.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give for each year since 1968 the number of prosecutions following the illegal use of firearms registered under the 1968 Act.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The readily available information, which relates to prosecutions for offences under the Firearms Act 1968, is given in the table. This information relates only to the principal offence and excludes persons also found guilty of a more serious offence. Comparable data for the years prior to 1979 is not available.

Defendants proceeded against for offences under the Firearms Act 1968—England and Wales

	Number
1979	7,140
1980	7,130
1981	6,980
1982	5,430
1983	4,850
1984	4,160
1985	3,870
1986	3,160

Housing Defects

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if potential purchasers of his Department's houses are notified before they buy of the potential implications for compensation for latent damage under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: In respect of any Home Office housing designated under the Housing Defects Act, which was consolidated in the Housing Act 1985, arrangements are made to notify prospective purchasers that grant aid under the provisions of the Act will not be available, since the defects are known and accounted for in the valuation. The Act specified that after 26 April 1984 purchasers would no longer be eligible for financial assistance.

Remand and Bail Statistics

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average number of days spent on remand by those remanded in custody for terrorist-type offences and (b) the number of bail applications refused, respectively, in 1986 and the first half of 1987, with regard to cases now completed in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: The only information which is readily available relates to prisoners convicted of terrorist-type offences who are now in prison custody in category A and does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

In 1986, the average number of days spent on remand was 329 and the number of bail applications refused was 21. No cases have been completed of such prisoners who were first received in custody between 1 January and 30 June 1987.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give separately how many prisoners in British gaols give as their place of domicile (i) the Republic of Ireland and (ii) Northern Ireland; and, separately, how many of these prisoners were serving sentences for terrorist-type offences as at 30 June.

Mr. John Patten: The information which is readily available centrally relates to prisoners' place of birth and to those terrorist-type prisoners who are held in category A. On 30 June 1987, about 700 inmates of prison department establishments in England and Wales were recorded as born in the Republic of Ireland and about 400 in Northern Ireland. Of those, 13 born in the Republic of Ireland and 32 born in Northern Ireland had been convicted of terrorist-type offences and were held in category A.

Common Format Passport

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a specimen copy of the common format passport.

Mr. Renton: Prototypes of the new British passport in the European Community common format were placed in the Library in July 1984, together with a background note giving more information about it. I am arranging for these to be supplemented by the latest, but not yet final, version of the new passport which incorporates all the Community languages and contains additional safeguards against forgery, together with an updated version of the background note.

Mr. Ian Cutler

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the organisations and hon. Members who have made representations to him concerning Mr. Ian Cutler and complaints against the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Aside from the hon. Member, we have received letters about this case from the right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn), my right hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, South and Maldon (Mr. Wakeham), my hon. Friend the Member for City of Chester (Mr. Morrison), and the hon. Members for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes), for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. McKelvey) and for Leyton (Mr. Cohen). No representations on Mr. Cutler's behalf have been received from any organisation.

Mr. Cutler's complaints are being investigated by an officer of the Metropolitan police complaints investigation bureau under the supervision of the Police Complaints Authority.

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of policemen and women have received official firearms training;

(2) how many police officers are currently undergoing firearms training.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information in the form requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, at 31 December 1986, there were 8,395 authorised firearms officers, some 7 per cent. of the total police strength in England and Wales.

PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Wallace and Captain Holroyd

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Prime Minister (1) on what dates she has received letters from Mr. Colin Wallace or from his solicitor, Thomas Eggar and Son;

(2) on what dates she has received letters from Captain [retired] Fred Holroyd.

The Prime Minister: It is not my usual practice to give information on correspondence from third parties.

Asset Sales

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Prime Minister what is her estimate for asset sales less purchases of land and buildings for all Departments for each year from 1987-88 until 1991.

The Prime Minister: It is not possible to identify fully the sale of assets, other than those from privatisation proceeds and sales of land and buildings, within the public expenditure totals.

Net proceeds from privatisation are given in the Autumn Statement 1987.

Figures for sales of land and buildings by Department up to 1989-90 were given in a reply to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) by my right hon. Friend the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 27 January, at columns 229-30. On the same basis, purchases of land and buildings are estimated at £530 million in 1988-89 and 1989-90. Revised estimates, including figures for 1990-91, will not be available until the 1988 public expenditure White Paper is published.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Age-related Testing

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what procedures will be used to ensure that age-related testing takes account of missed schooling due to hospitalisation or other factors relating to a child's physical disability.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Education Reform Bill provides that the national curriculum requirements, including assessment arrangements, may be modified in respect of a pupil with a statement of special educational needs under the 1981 Act, or in other cases specified in the orders prescribing those requirements for foundation subjects. In addition, where, as can happen now, following a period of missed schooling, a pupil is being taught among a younger age group, the Bill will enable the pupil to be assessed against the attainment targets for that age group. The task group on assessment and testing, and the individual subject working groups, will be advising my right hon. Friend on what account might be taken of the needs of pupils in these circumstances, bearing in mind that the assessment arrangements are intended to identify what stage a pupil has reached and what further help may be needed.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Schemes (Newcastle)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all the managing agents offering places in the Newcastle-upon-Tyne city area under (a) the youth training scheme, (b) the job training scheme and (c) the community programme, together with the number of places offered by each agent in each scheme.

Engineering Industry Training Board

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his policy towards engineering training in the light of information paper No. 82 issued by the EITB concerning options for its future direction, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Nicholls: I am concerned that the skill base of the engineering industry should enable the exploitation of new technologies and new markets.

I support the engineering industry training board's efforts to devise arrangements which will both be effective and command the general support of the engineering industry.

Closed Shop

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received since June of the current year regarding the closed shop.

Mr. Nicholls: Some 60 representations received by my Department since June have made some reference to the closed shop. These include parliamentary questions and correspondence with Members of Parliament, outside bodies and the general public.

Factory Inspectors

Miss Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will express the number of visits made by factory inspectors in the north-east in 1986-87 as a proportion of the total number of factories in the area.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible without disproportionate cost to separate the number of visits made to factories from those made to other premises where the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 is enforced by HSE's factory inspectorate.

Miss Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory inspectors were in post in each of the five years in the north-east region; and how many of the anticipated increase in the number of factory inspectors will be located in the north-east region.

Mr. Nicholas: The number of factory inspectors in the Health and Safety Executive's north-east area over the past five years is as follows:

1 April	Numbers
1984	31
1985	31
1986	30
1987 (April)	31
1987 (November)	27

The Health and Safety Commission and Executive plan to increase the number of inspectors in the factory inspectorate by about 35 above present levels during 1988-89. Decisions on when the additional inspectors will be located have not yet been taken.

Restart Scheme

Miss Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number of restart interviews which have taken place in Cleveland since the commencement of the restart scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: Since the national introduction of the restart programme in July 1986, 46,427 restart interviews have taken place in Cleveland up to the end of September.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish tables showing the number of notified vacancies per registered unemployed person in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) England, (d) the United Kingdom and (e) each of the English regions for June 1979, June 1980, June 1981, June 1982, June 1983, June 1984, June 1985, June 1986, June 1987 and November 1987.

Mr. Lee: Following is the available information. The table shows the number of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres, and the number of unemployed claimants, in each of the requested areas, for June of each year since 1980. Vacancy figures for June 1979 are not available on a comparable basis, while figures for November 1987, will not be available until 17 December 1987. All the figures are seasonally adjusted, and the unemployment figures allow for changes in coverage.

It is not valid to compare ratios of notified vacancies to unemployment, since roughly only about a third of vacancies in the economy are reported to jobcentres, and this proportion will tend to vary over time and between regions.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Thorne: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest level of the retail prices index.

Mr. Fowler: The November monthly figure for the retail prices index shows that there has been a welcome fall in the annual rate of inflation to 4·1 per cent. It has, however, been discovered that from February 1986 to October 1987 a computer programme error affected the monthly index. As a result, the annual inflation rate will have been understated by one tenth of 1 per cent. in most months during that period.

Each month 130,000 prices, covering many categories of expenditure, are collected and analysed in a complex set of calculations. Following a decision in March 1983 the index has since February 1986 been calculated by computerised methods. Monitoring of the system has revealed that during the programming work in 1985 a mistake was made in the detailed calculations for certain items.

From February 1986 until January 1987 there was a regular understatement of about 0·06 per cent. in the price change in each month relative to the base month, which was January 1986. From February 1987, as the faulty programme was applied to a wider range of items, the understatement relative to January 1987 was about 0·09 per cent.

The programming fault has now been rectified, and the annual inflation rate of 4·1 per cent. for November is correct. The figure for the November level of the index is also correct at 103·4. It has not, however, been possible in the time available to calculate the figures for the many detailed components. These will be published in the course of next week.

The RPI will have been understated, albeit by a numerically small margin, for up to 21 months. I wish, however, to make it plain now that special extra payments will be made to national insurance retirement and supplementary pensioners and severely disabled people, and that the Exchequer will not benefit from the effects on social security expenditure. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services will make an announcement on this as soon as possible.

We believe that the computerised calculation system is now wholly correct. In view of the RPI's importance, however, I am asking the head of the Government statistical service to carry out a review of it.

TRANSPORT

National Bus Company

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those subsidiaries of the National Bus Company which have been sold off at less than their 1986 book values; by how much the price paid for those companies fell short of the book values; and whether he will give the reasons for the difference.

Mr. David Mitchell: Information on sale prices of National Bus Company subsidiaries is confidential while sales are in progress. A report will be made to the House in due course on the aggregate proceeds of sale.

Railways (Scottish Region)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if when he next meets the chairman of British Rail he will raise with him the closure of the signal and telecommunication design drawing office, Scottish region; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the employment implications for the area affected by the closure of British Rail's signals and telecommunications design drawing office, Scottish region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that the British Railways Board has been reviewing its signal and telecommunications engineering activities. This review and any employment implications are management matters for the board.

Motor Cyclists (Accidents)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents to motor cyclists have been caused by motor car drivers for each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Government's road accident statistics do not apportion blame. Statistics of injury accidents involving a car and a motor cycle — which represent 55 per cent. of all accidents involving a motor cycle — do, however, distinguish the main types of manoeuvre being undertaken. Information on cases in which the car turned right into the path of the motor cycle is as follows:

Year	Number of car-motor cycle injury accidents	Number of such accidents in which car turned right into the path of the motor cycle
			Percentage
1984	35,447	14,422	41
1985	31,893	12,937	41
1986	30,106	12,407	41

Speeding

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to prevent motor cycles and motor cars being equipped to break the speeding restrictions.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no plans to do so.

The performance capability of modern cars and motor cycles sold here tends to reflect consumer preferences and driving conditions generally throughout Europe. It cannot be tailored to speed limits in the United Kingdom.

Preston (Traffic)

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he is now able to release the consultant's report into the traffic to the south of Preston in Lancashire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. It is not our practice to publish reports of traffic studies because they are necessarily broad-brush, and publication would inevitably lead to blight. I will comment further when replying to my hon. Friend's recent letter about the proposed Blackburn southern bypass.

Public Transport (Government Assistance)

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of all Government assistance to (a) British Rail's Network South-East and (b) London Regional Transport in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. David Mitchell: In 1986-87, NSE received £195 million in PSO grant, and LRT £295 million, a subsidy of 2·43p and 4·48p per passenger mile respectively. This compares with last year's subsidy of £489 million to the provincial sector (including ScotRail) and the PTEs—a subsidy of 15·9p per passenger mile.

Libel (London Regional Transport)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue a direction to the chairman of London Regional Transport that no London Regional Transport moneys be spent pursuing any action against the London Evening Standard for libel.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. I have no powers to give LRT such a specific direction.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Company Taxation

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total tax revenue raised in the last financial year from companies under the small companies rate (a) on profits below £100,000 and (b) on profits between £100,000 and £500,000; and, in the latter case, what was the average rate.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The corporation tax revenue raised under the small companies' rate in 1985-86 (the latest year for which adequate detailed data are available) is estimated at £¾ billion on taxable profits below £100,000 and £¼ billion on taxable profits between £100,000 and £500,000. The average rate for the latter group is 35 per cent.

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of (a) increasing the inheritance tax business property relief to 100 per cent. and (b) extending the relief to holdings in excess of 10 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: (a) The cost of increasing the inheritance tax business relief to 100 per cent. is estimated at £20 million in the full year.

(b) The cost of extending the present 50 per cent. relief to unquoted company shareholdings in excess of 10 per cent. is estimated at £1 million in the full year.

VAT Refunds

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discretion retailers in the United Kingdom have in offering value added tax refund facilities for foreign visitors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: In common with all other member states of the European Community, the United Kingdom provides a retail export scheme which allows retailers to offer value added tax refunds to foreign visitors. Individual retailers may choose whether or not to operate the scheme.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the last financial year the value added tax refunded to (a) each county council, (b) each district council, (c) the British Broadcasting Corporation, (d) Independent Television News Ltd., (e) each co-operative wholesale society, and (f) each co-operative retail society under section 20 of the Value Added Tax Act 1983.

Mr. Lilley: Information relating to specific taxpayers is confidential. However some £1·2 billion was repaid under section 20 of the Value Added Tax Act 1983 to local government bodies, including 475 county and district councils. Neither wholesale nor retail co-operative societies are eligible for repayments under section 20.

Order Papers (Printing)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measurements he has made of the efficiency of the printing service, since the introduction of computer typesetting for producing House of Commons Order Papers by Her Majesty's Stationery Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Since production of the Order Papers began at the new parliamentary press in October, copies of these papers have been delivered to the Vote Office in the early part of each morning. A printed version was not available on only one occasion before the House sat and then arrangements were made to provide the House with copies in an alternative form.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office together with House officials is continually monitoring the effectiveness of the computer typesetting of the Order Papers.

Tobacco Taxation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of revenue from tobacco taxation is derived (a) from areas where unemployment exceeds 13 per cent. and (b) from areas where unemployment is less than 8 per cent.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that information is not available in the form requested.

BP Shares

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to extend the final date of the Bank of England buy-back offer for BP shares.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 7 December 1987 at column 71.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who will be responsible for financing the second and third instalments of BP shares bought back by the Bank of England.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 9 November at column 65.

Asset Sales

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each three years from 1988-89 his proposed asset sales.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No decisions have yet been taken about the timing of individual privatisations over the next three years. Decisions on timing of other asset sales are not held centrally.

Corrugated Board Manufacturers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to other European Economic Community Governments about problems facing corrugated board manufacturers in the United Kingdom concerning alleged under payment of customs duties; and what information he has as to whether similar manufacturers in Germany, Holland, France and Italy are being treated in the same way.

Mr. Lilley: The circumstances involving alleged underpayments of anti-dumping duty on kraftliner paper imported from the United States of America by corrugated board manufacturers have been discussed at Community meetings in Brussels. I understand that investigations have been carried out in the other member states mentioned and a number of irregularities reported.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Lawson: The ECOFIN Council met in Brussels on 7 December. I represented the United Kingdom. The Council discussed the Commission's annual economic report for 1987-88. The report was agreed as amended by the Commission in the light of discussion with member states.

The chairman of the Economic Policy Committee gave an interim report on the committee's economic evaluation of the Commission's proposals for the abolition of fiscal frontiers. It was agreed that the committee should produce a full report, which is expected in March 1988.

The Council discussed the draft 18th VAT directive, but no agreement was reached. The Council agreed to continue work on a draft directive dealing with the prospctus to be published when transferable securities are offered to the public.

Income Tax

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a note explaining the circumstances in which distributions by companies other than in the form of cash or shares are subject to income tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: The Taxes Act provides that, in addition to dividends and certain issues of shares and securities, any other distribution out of the assets of the company in respect of shares in the company falls within schedule F of the income tax code. The company has to account for advance corporation tax on the value of the distribution, and the sum of that value plus the advance corporation tax is income of the shareholder.

The recipient is entitled to a tax credit equal to the advance corporation tax, and this covers his basic rate income tax liability. A distribution is treated as provided out of the assets of a company if the cost falls on the company. If the cost falls on a direct 90 per cent. subsidiary of the company, a distribution is treated as made by the subsidiary. The legislation provides that "in respect of shares" covers anything done in pursuance of a right granted or offer made in respect of a share.

The Taxes Act also contains a supplementary rule that can apply where a company transfers assets to, or takes over, liabilities of a member or members. If the market value of the benefit received by the member exceeds the consideration that he pays, the company is treated as making a distribution equal to the difference. There are also special rules covering the provision of benefits or facilities to members of a close company.

Company Taxation

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions the Inland Revenue have subjected distributions by companies other than in the form of cash or shares, as taxable under section 233 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: This information is not available centrally.

Share Options

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of share option schemes approved in each of the tax years since the inception of the legislation.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: The figures are as follows:

Number of schemes approved

	FA 1980 SAYE schemes		FA 1984 schemes
	In year	Cumulative total	In year	Cumulative total
1980-81	22	22

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the aggregate number and price of options granted in each of the tax years since the inception of the scheme.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Estimates for each year are as follows:

	FA 1980 SAYE schemes		FA 1984 schemes
	Number of optants Thousands	Cost of taking up options £ million	Number of optants Thousands	Cost of taking up options £ million

1986-87	270	500	45	900

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give, for each tax year since the inception of the share option scheme, for each of the schemes granted (a) the number of shares which were the subject of options and (b) the aggregate price payable for these options for (i) all companies, (ii) companies which are quoted and (iii) companies which are unquoted.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Estimates for each year are as follows:

	FA 1980 SAYE schemes		FA 1984 schemes

[1] Figures not readily available.

An analysis by company type is not available.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give, for the current tax year (a) the number and value of options that have been exercised and (b) the current market value of unexercised options in quoted companies.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Figures for 1987-88 are not yet available. Estimates for the previous year relating to share option schemes approved under the legislation shown are as follows:

Finance Act	Number of optants exercising options in 1986-87 ('000)	Number of shares: options exercised in 1986-87 (million)	Value of shares obtained through the exercise of options in 1986-87 (£ million)

The value of unexercised options over shares in quoted companies is not readily available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Labelling

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement regarding the Government's guidelines on voluntary nutrition labelling.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government's guidelines for a voluntary system of nutrition labelling were issued on 24 July 1987. They were introduced as a result of interest in nutrition labelling, both on the part of consumers and the food industry. They aim to encourage a standard approach to nutrition labelling which is clearly important for consumer information and choice. I hope that the relevant trade organisations will commend the guidelines to their members so that maximum uptake by the industry is achieved.

Edinburgh (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Edinburgh to meet representatives of the farming industry in Scotland.

Mr. MacGregor: On my recent visit to Edinburgh I had useful discussions with people involved in the farming industry in Scotland on a wide range of matters affecting the industry.

Refrigerants

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is taking measures to encourage research into alternative refrigerants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We are responsible only for those refrigerants that come into direct contact with food. I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to chlorofluorocarbons and the only member of that class used in direct contact with food is dichlorodifluoromethane (R12). It is used only for a very small amount of frozen foods and its use is decreasing since acceptable alternative direct contact refrigerant systems are available. Therefore, I see no need to embark on a programme of research to identify new agents.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting on 10 December in Brussels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Council of Agriculture Ministers met in Brussels on 10 December. Among the matters discussed was a proposal for certain areas of the Netherlands, France and Greece to be recognised as officially free from classical swine fever. I agreed to this only after careful study of the evidence on the disease status of the areas concerned, and after seeking and receiving firm and specific assurances from each of the three countries that they are applying rigorous controls to ensure that this status will be maintained, and that they would take effective and immediate action in the event of any outbreak.

The Council formally adopted the regulation on distribution of free food from intervention stocks. I am now considering its implications in close consultation with the main charitable organisations. The Council agreed on the allocation between member states of the GATT quota for frozen beef, and on quotas for high quality beef and buffalo meat, for 1988. These quotas can therefore be opened promptly, to the benefit of the trade. A new system of classification for rice was also agreed.

Bees Officers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of bees officers employed by his Department each year from 1981.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The information is as follows:

Bees officers employed in England 1981-87

	Number
1981	66
1982	68
1983	65
1984	64
1985	68
1986	64
1987	61

Income Support

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of claimants aged 60 years or over who will become eligible for income support as a result of the increase in the capital limit to £3,000.

Mr. Scott: The capital limit for income support is to be increased from £3,000 to £6,000. It is estimated that 10,000 people aged over 60 will receive income support as a result of this increase.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the number of claimants of income support who will be entitled to (i) the pensioner premium, (ii) the higher pensioner premium and (iii) the severe disability premium.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

	Number
(i) Pensioner premium	1,120,000
(ii) Higher pensioner premium	595,000
(iii) Severe disability premium	7,000

Community Care

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services under which part of his terms of reference Sir Roy Griffiths will incorporate consideration of funding provision for emergency alarm systems in dispersed housing in his review of community care.

Mr. Portillo: Sir Roy's terms of reference include reviewing the way in which public funds are used to support community care policy. Any use of public funds which relates to community care could therefore be considered within his terms of reference.

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will ensure that those pensioners who last received their pensions by payable order on a date prior to 7 December can receive their £10 Christmas bonus before 18 December.

Mr. Scott: The Christmas bonus will be sent to all pensioners paid in arrears by payable order before Christmas, and the great majority of pensioners will have received it by 18 December.

Additional Pensions

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to encourage individuals to build up additional pensions.

Mr. Portillo: From 1 July 1988 it will be possible to contract-out of the state earnings-related pension scheme through a personal pension from a scheme approved by the Occupational Pensions Board. Personal pensions will attract minimum contributions paid by the Department. These will be made up of a partial rebate of national insurance contributions and, until April 1993, a special incentive payment. In most cases the payments by the Department will include tax relief of the employee's share of the minimum contribution. People taking out a personal pension before 6 April 1989 will be able to backdate membership to 6 April 1987 and claim an extra year's minimum contributions, including the incentive.

Medical Laboratory Scientific Officers

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average level of qualifications of medical laboratory scientific officers working in the public health laboratory service.

Mr. Newton: This information is not recorded. Registration in the basic medical laboratory scientific officer grade is on the basis of a Higher National Certificate or equivalent qualification plus prescribed in-service training. Further qualifications and experience may well be required for appointment to more senior medical laboratory scientific officer posts.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the pay scale of medical laboratory scientific officers working in the public health laboratory service.

Mr. Newton: The current pay scales for medical laboratory scientific officers working in the public health laboratory service are as follows:

Grade title	Salary scales (effective from 1 April 1987)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of medical laboratory scientific officers entering the public health laboratory service leave after (a) one year, (b) two years, (c) five years and, (d) 10 years.

Mr. Newton: This information is not recorded on a routine basis. The public health laboratory service estimates that 15 per cent. of medical laboratory scientific officers have left the service in the last year.

Agency Nurses

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, by region and for each year since 1983, the numbers of agency nurses employed for National Health Service work, including the latest available figures.

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows:

Births

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the stillbirth, neonatal and postneonatal mortality rates for singleton babies with birthweights under 1,000 grammes, 1,000 to 2,499 grammes, 2,500 grammes and over, and those with unstated birthweights, who were born in England and Wales in 1985 and in 1986 (a) by caesarean section, (b) by instrumental delivery, including forceps, ventouse and breech extraction and (c) by spontaneous delivery, including abnormal presentation of the head and breech spontaneous delivery.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not available. The registration of births (live and still) does not identify the mode of delivery.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the numbers of babies born, the numbers admitted to special care baby units and their average length of stay for (i) singleton and (ii) multiple deliveries in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Currie: The available information is given in the table. Figures for singleton and multiple deliveries are not available separately. Information for Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the stillbirth and neonatal mortality rates for babies born in 1986 in England and Wales to women who delivered at home and (a) had booked to deliver at home, (b) had booked to deliver in hospital or (c) had made no arrangements for their delivery;

(2) if he will give the stillbirth and neonatal mortality rates for babies born in 1986 in England and Wales to women who were originally booked to deliver at home and who (a) delivered at home as planned, (b) delivered in hospital following a change of booking during pregnancy, (c) delivered in hospital following a decision taken during labour or (d) delivered elsewhere.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not available. Information for Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Neasden Hospital

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to collect centrally information relating to the date when nurses and medicine staff were transferred against their wishes from their homes at Neasden hospital; how many units of residence remain empty; what are the numbers that have been occupied by homeless families on a short-term tenancy by arrangement with the London borough of Brent; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may like to consult the chairman of Brent health authority.

AIDS

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about funding for the London Lighthouse project and hospices and community care facilities for AIDS patients.

Mr. Newton: For the financial year 1987-88, the Government have approved payments of £500,000 for capital and £100,000 revenue costs for London Lighthouse, £150,000 for capital and £50,000 revenue costs to the Mildmay Mission hospital and £88,000 for capital costs to the Newcastle community support centre. The Department is currently considering applications for further funding from London Lighthouse and the Mildmay Mission hospital. The Government attach great importance to the role that the voluntary sector has to play in collaborating with the statutory authorities in providing support including respite care for people with AIDS.

Regional Health Authorities (Expenditure)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest estimated outturn of expenditure by regional health authorities in England on hospital and community health services for 1986-87.

Mr. Newton: Following are the provisional figures for 1986-87:

Total expenditure on hospital and community health services[1]

Region	£ million
Northern	717·3
Yorkshire	818·1
Trent	992·0
East Anglian	422·0
North West Thames	844·3
North East Thames	1,052·0
South East Thames	933·6
South West Thames	704·2
Wessex	620·2
Oxford	467·3
South Western	718·4
West Midlands	1,165·0
Mersey	591·3
North Western	988·0
Total	11,033·7

[1] Includes revenue and capital expenditure on hospital, community health, ambulance, blood transfusion and other services.
Source: Annual financial accounts of regional and district health authorities (as yet unaudited).

Voluntary Carers

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to make further funds available for voluntary carers groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: In 1987-88 we are providing funds from our section 64 grant scheme totalling £171,000 for national voluntary organisations directly concerned with carers. Decisions on funding levels for 1988-89 have not yet been taken.

Health Authorities (Consultations)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what information he has as to any cases where procedures governing consultations between district health authorities and community health councils have not been adhered to;

(2) what are the procedures governing consultations between district health authorities and community health councils.

Mrs. Currie: We encourage consultation between district health authorities and community health councils on a variety of topics. Formal consultation is required when a closure or change of use of a hospital building is proposed. We are not aware of cases where procedures governing consultations between district health authorities and community health councils have not been followed. If the hon. Member is aware of any such instances, I will be happy to look into them.

Pensioners (Spending Power)

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, if he will publish in the Official Report the information relating to net weekly spending power of pensioners at a range of levels of gross income provided to the hon. Member for Kensington by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 20 November.

Mr. Portillo: The information requested is shown in the tables. These show the net weekly spending power of a single pensioner and a pensioner couple paying (a) rent of £15 and rates of £7 per week and (b) rent of £30 and rates of £10 per week, under the current scheme at November 1985 benefit levels and November 1986 benefit levels, and under the reformed scheme to be implemented in April 1988 at the 1985 illustrative rates of benefit.

Notes for tables 1 to 4:

1. The November 1985 retirement pensions, housing benefit needs allowances and supplementary pension scale rates have been used for tables 1 and 2, and the July 1986 levels for tables 3 and 4.

2. The 1985-86 age allowances and tax rates have been used for tables 1 and 2, and the 1986-87 allowances and rates for tables 3 and 4.

3. Supplementary pension and housing benefit supplement have been calculated on the basis that the single pensioner is aged at least 65 but under 80, and in the case of the pensioner couple, at least one is aged 65 and both are under 80. The long-term supplementary benefit scale rates for November 1985 are £37·50 for a single pensioner, and £60·00 for a pensioner couple: the July 1986 rates are £37·90 and £60·75 respectively. For the purposes of calculating te total supplementary pension entitlement in these tables it is assumed that the assessment includes £1·40 for water rates (the figure used in the technical annex to the White Paper ("Reform of Social Security") and also in all cases the average additional requirement for pensioners: this, net of the available scale margin, is £2·42 for November 1985 and £2·81 for July 1986.

4. Income is assumed to unearned and without disregard throughout and capital is assumed to be below £3,000.
5. The minimum rent or rate rebate is 50p per week (noted as "nil¹" in the tables where this rule has been applied).

Notes to Tables 5 and 6:

1. Retirement pensions are at November 1985 basic rates. However, the first line in each part of the tables shows the gross income of a pensioner whose retirement pension has been topped up to the income support level.
2. Housing benefit levels and tapers and income support rates are at November 1985 levels as set out in the technical annex to the White Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691). The pensioners are assumed in all cases to be aged under 80: under the reformed schemes, pensioners over 80 would have a higher disposable income (in most of the shown cases, £1·80 higher for a single person and £1·76 for a couple on the basis of the illustrative assumptions).
3. Tax allowances and rates are those in force for 1985-86.
4. Income is assumed to be unearned and without disregard throughout and capital is assumed to be below £3,000.
5. The 20 per cent. minimum contribution to domestic rates has been applied, but the effect of compensation for this element is not shown.
6. The minimum rent rebate or rate rebate payable is 50p per week (noted as "nil*" in the tables where this rule has been applied).
7. Under income support, unlike supplementary benefit, separate help with water rates will not be available; this should be borne in mind when comparing the disposable incomes under the old and the new schemes. The tables also take no account of transitional protection for those receiving supplementary benefit at the changeover.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he has any plans to make changes in the Treasury contribution to the national insurance fund;

(2) what is the proposed Treasury contribution in cash and as a proportion of total income to the national insurance fund for 1987-88 and for each financial year until 1991.

Mr. Scott: The Treasury supplement which in the current year is 7 per cent. of gross contributions, yields about £2·1 billion and represents nearly 8 per cent. of the national insurance fund's income. It will be 5 per cent. of gross contributions in 1988-89. Estimates of what this will yield in 1988-89 will be given in the Government Actuary's report on the national insurance contributions rerating orders, which will be published when the orders are laid before Parliament in the new year. Decisions on the size of the supplement after 1988-89 have not yet been taken.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the investment income of the national insurance fund for each year since 1979; and what is his estimate for each year to 1990.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Investment income of the National Insurance Fund

	£ million
1979-80	541·6
1980-81	607·5
1981-82	587·6
1982-83	496·3
1983-84	489·7
1984-85	520·5
1985-86	541·0
1986-87	610·3
1987-88	625·0

Figures for years up to 1986-87 have been derived from the annual accounts of the national insurance fund. the figure for 1987-88 is an estimate based on current trends. Estimates of investment income in 1988-89 will be given in the Government Actuary's report on the national insurance contributions rerating orders which will be published when the orders are laid before Parliament in the new year. Estimates of the fund's investment income are not available for years after 1988-89.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those items of expenditure for the national insurance fund which existed in 1979 and which have ceased to exist or been reduced since that date.

Mr. Portillo: The following items of expenditure from the National Insurance Fund have ceased to exist:

Earnings-related supplement to short-term benefits.
Child dependency addition to short-term benefits.
Injury benefit.
Death grant.
Maternity grant.

Supplementary Benefits

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the number of supplementary benefits claimants (a) on the long-term rate and (b) on the long-term rate and receiving £6·50 a week or more in additional requirement payments.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 26 November 1987]: The information is as follows:

(a) 2,530,000 claimants
(b) 214,000 claimants
Source: Annual Statistical Inquiry, February 1986.

Cancer (Children)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the outcome of consultations with professional bodies on the report by the United Kingdom children's cancer study group.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The report of the United Kingdom children's cancer study group is receiving careful consideration in consultation with a number of interested groups. The Department's Standing Medical Advisory Committee is expected to give its views at its next meeting in late January.

Dental Reference Officers

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of dental reference officers for the United Kingdom for the last five years.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The number of dental officers in the dental reference service in England, at 31 December was:

	General Service	Specialist Orthodontic Officers
	(whole time equivalent)	in post
1982	21·2	2·0
1983	19·4	3·0
1984	21·7	3·0
1986	22·2	2·5

On the basis of available statistics, the whole-time equivalent number of general service officers in 1987 is projected to be in the region of 25 and there were 2·5 specialist orthodontic officers in post over the full year.

Staff numbers in the reference services in other parts of the United Kingdom are matters for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Radiotherapy

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet completed his review of the guidelines recommending centralisation of radiotherapy services; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The Department's internal review of its guidance to health authorities on the organisation of radiotherapy services is nearing completion. An announcement will be made as soon as conclusions have been reached.

DEFENCE

Tornado Aircraft (Operations Costs)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the additional cost, over and above normal operating costs of Tornado squadrons in the United Kingdom and West Germany, of deploying and operating nine Royal Air Force Tornado aircraft at Goose Bay, Canada, from February to November 1987, including the costs of transporting crews to and from Canada.

Mr. Freeman: The additional cost of deploying Tornado aircraft to Goose Bay from February to November 1987, over and above normal operating costs, is estimated at £7,457,000.

Exercises

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the low-flying avoidance area over the Isle of Man was temporarily suspended to permit low-level overflight by Royal Air Force Hercules transport aircraft participating in exercise Purple Warrior.

Mr. Freeman: No.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list Royal Air Force participation in Red Flag exercises in the United States of America since 1977, giving the number and type of Royal Air Force aircraft involved and dates of the exercises on each occasion.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Royal Air Force participation in Red Flag exercises

[1] Precise central records not available for the period before 1984 although details given are thought to be broadly accurate.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list Royal Air Force participation in Green Flag exercises in the United States of America since 1977, giving the number and type of Royal Air Force aircraft involved and dates of the exercise on each occasion.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

RAF Participation in Green Flag Exercises

Date	Aircraft Involved
1985
4 March—15 March	9 Tornado
18 March—29 March	8 Tornado
1986
1 March—15 March	9 Tornado
15 March—28 March	9 Tornado

1987
2 March—13 March	9 Tornado
11 March—28 March	9 Tornado
28 March—15 April	9 Tornado

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list Royal Air Force participation in Blue Flag exercises in the United States of America since 1977, giving the number and type of Royal Air Force aircraft involved and dates of the exercise on each occasion.

Mr. Freeman: There has been no RAF participation in Blue Flag exercises in the United States of America.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government will support any proposal that representatives of the Soviet Union be invited to monitor any future British nuclear tests at the Nevada test site.

Mr. Sainsbury: If such a proposal were to be made on a Government-to-Government basis we would give it full consideration taking account of the requirements of national security. I would also remind the hon. Gentleman of my reply to his earlier question which I answered on 1 December at column 568.

Range Safety

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the final report of the range safety review working group.

Mr. Freeman: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mould Radio System

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in installing the Mould radio system.

Mr. Sainsbury: Progress on the Mould system is satisfactory.

Jaguar Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which aircraft is expected to replace the Jaguar in the ground attack role.

Mr. Sainsbury: Current planning is that the European fighter aircraft (EFA) will replace Jaguar in the ground attack role.

Low-flying Aircraft

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force police, expressed as full-time equivalent staff, are currently assigned to investigation of complaints about low-flying aircraft; and what changes have taken place in these staffing levels since 1977.

Mr. Freeman: Fourteen RAF police plus one RAF provost branch officer are currently assigned to the investigation of complaints about low-flying aircraft. Detailed information is not available for the period prior to 1982, since when there has effectively been no change in these staffing levels.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy on 9 November, Official Report, columns 36-37, whether a low-level flight by several aircraft in formation is counted as one sortie in the figures given for overall numbers of low-level flights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No. Each aircraft in a formation would book into the United Kingdom low-flying system separately.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy on 9 November, Official Report, column 38, if, in the light of recent accidents in the United States involving low-level flying by United States Air Force B-52s and KC-135s, he will institute a policy of maintaining records of low-level flights over Britain by these types of aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No. We see no need to maintain the sorts of records the hon. Member mentions for these aircraft. KC 135 aircraft do not fly at low level in the United Kingdom. There are no B-52 aircraft based in the United Kingdom, and, although they visit fairly regularly, any low flying would be infrequent.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many confirmed breaches of low-flying regulations in each year since 1974 were caused by aircraft diverging from planned route, height or speed due to weather conditions;

(2) how many confirmed breaches of low-flying regulations in each year since 1974 were caused by technical failure or malfunction other than to navigation systems;

(3) how many confirmed breaches of low-flying regulations in each year since 1974 were caused by aircraft diverging from planned route, height or speed for tactical or training reasons;

(4) how many complaints about low-flying in each year since 1974 have upon investigation, been found to have involved breaches of low-flying regulations;

(5) how many confirmed breaches of low-flying regulations in each year since 1974 were caused by navigation system failure or malfunction.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested cannot be provided without disproportionate effort.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level sorties were flown over the United Kingdom in the period 1 January to 31 October.

Mr. Freeman: Between 1 January and 31 October 1987 125,335 such sorties were flown over the United Kingdom.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints were received about low flying over the United Kingdom in the period 1 January to 31 October.

Mr. Freeman: Between 1 January and 31 October 1987 the Ministry of Defence received 4,794 complaints about military low flying.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum height specified in the United Kingdom military low-flying handbook for overflight of the residential area of Balivanich, Benbecula.

Mr. Freeman: There is none because the residential area of Balivanich lies within the controlled airspace of Benbecula airport.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level flights were carried out over the Western Isles in each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The Western Isles are part of a low-flying administrative area which also includes all of Scotland north of a line between the Forth and Clyde. Information on low-level flights for the Western Isles above is therefore not available.

Chief of Defence Equipment Collaboration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why the post of chief of defence equipment collaboration is being allowed to lapse at the end of the current year; and what policy changes will follow from the abandonment of the post.

Mr. Younger: As announced to the House on 19 December 1984, at columns 205-6, Sir David Perry was appointed chief of defence equipment collaboration so that he could give himself full time to promoting international collaboration in weapons procurement. Thanks to Sir David, international collaboration has now become an essential and critical part of our procurement strategy, and we have decided that its further pursuit can best be managed as part of our regular procurement work in the Ministry of Defence. It will therefore become part of the responsibilities of the Procurement Executive headed by the chief of defence procurment. No policy changes are involved in this adjustment; the United Kingdom remains fully committed to collaboration with allied nations in weapons procurement.

Sir David Perry will retire on 31 December 1987, and I should like to pay tribute to his long career of public service, and to the distinction with which he discharged the duties of his final appointment.

TR Reconnaissance Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have been held with the Lockheed company concerning the possible purchase of the TR-1 reconnaissance aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Departmental Library Services

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current reorganisation of library services in his Department.

Mr. Freeman: As part of its move towards greater efficiency and more economic use of staff and book stock, the Ministry of Defence's central London libraries will be merged on one site which is presently being prepared at 3-5 Great Scotland Yard. The complex move is scheduled to take place in the autumn of 1988. At the same time the library is currently planning a modernisation of its system to allow for the introduction of more computerisation in this area.

Stand-off Weapon

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions have been made on research and development of a British nuclear warhead to fit the NATO modular stand-off weapon.

Mr. Sainsbury: None.

Harrier Aircraft (Training Detachment)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purposes of, and lessons learned from, the three-day training detachment of five Royal Air Force Harrier aircraft at RAF Stornoway in May.

Mr. Freeman: Because of the temporary non-availability of normal mainland stations, these aircraft were detached to RAF Stornoway to enable them to carry out routine training. This was accomplished satisfactorily.

St. Kilda (Radar Installation)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the additional NIDIR tracking radar being installed on St. Kilda is expected to become operational.

Mr. Freeman: The additional NIDIR tracking radar will be relocated from South Uist to St. Kilda in 1988 and is expected to become operational by autumn 1988.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the two new Plessey Watchman radars being installed on St. Kilda are expected to become operational.

Mr. Freeman: The two Plessey Watchman radars are expected to become operational on St. Kilda during the autumn of 1988.

Military Aircraft (Stornoway)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what purpose military aircraft deployed to Royal Air Force Stornoway conduct run and break manoeuvres over built-up areas immediately prior to landing.

Mr. Freeman: Military aircraft landing at RAF Stornoway do not normally overfly the main built-up area in the vicinity and follow standard RAF flying procedures in the interests of safety and fuel economy.

Dispersal

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department's dispersal programme to Glasgow has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: The dispersal programme, announced in 1979, committed us to transfer 1,400 jobs to Glasgow. Some 1,330 jobs have already been established there, of which 1,000 have been filled by local recruitment. It has now been proposed that the final tranche of 70 jobs should come fom the Directorate of Contracts (Stores and Logistics) in London and Leeds and move to Glasgow by the autumn of 1988. A significant degree of compensation for the loss of the contracts work in Leeds will be provided by the transfer of 35 jobs from London to the nearby Harrogate area.

Army (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the manpower strength of the British Army in Northern Ireland giving details of the number of operatives for (a) the Ulster Defence Regiment, (b) Regular British Army and (c) British Territorial Army on 30 June.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The figures requested are as follows:

	Number
Ulster Defence Regiment	6,504
Regular Army	9,365
Territorial Army	3,784

The figures for the Ulster Defence Regiment include both full-time and part-time soldiers. Soldiers of the Territorial Army are not used in support of the RUC in counter-territorial operations.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment are currently estimated to be Catholics; what proportion this represents of the regiment's manpower; and what proportion of the recruitment to the regiment in 1985 was from the Catholic community.

Mr. Ian Stewart: About 3 per cent. of members of the Ulster Defence Regiment have declared their religion as Roman Catholic. Just over 4 per cent. of those accepted for service during 1985 declared their religion as Roman Catholic.

Army Medical Boards

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what persons must sit on an Army medical board; and whether the subject of an Army medical board must be present at the hearing.

Mr. Freeman: The composition of an Army medical board is dependent upon the type of board convened of which there are four: a Ministry of Defence (Army) medical board, a full medical board, a two-member board or a joint service medical board. The regulations require such medical boards to examine the subject.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rights of appeal Army service men and women have in respect of Army medical board recommendations.

Mr. Freeman: A member of the Army who wishes to appeal against the recommendation of an Army medical board may submit a redress of complaint, through the chain of command, under section 181 of the Army Act 1955.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rights Army service men and women have to inspect information disclosed about them to an Army medical board or an Army medical appeals board.

Mr. Freeman: Information disclosed to a medical board is classified as medical-in-confidence and consequently neither service men nor women have a right of inspection.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time an Army medical board takes to report its findings.

Mr. Freeman: This depends upon the type of board and the nature of the case. Findings are usually reported within two to four weeks,

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time an Army medical inquiry board takes to report its findings.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to give the average time taken to report the findings of a board of inquiry as it is dependent upon the case and the number of witnesses involved.

Army Personnel (Downgrading)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what medical criteria may be used to recommend the downgrading of Army service men and women.

Mr. Freeman: Medical assessments of service men and women are made in accordance with the regulations contained in the appropriate service publications.

Army Officers (Restraint)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance is issued by his Department on the circumstances which would necessitate the forcible restraint of an Army officer when travelling to hospital.

Mr. Freeman: Guidelines are contained in the publication "Regulations for the Army Medical Service." These take account of the possible reaction of the patient to travel and the type of transport to be used.

Army Medical Reports

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the status of non-adverse medical reports as used by the Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: All medical reports, like any other medical document, are medical-in-confidence.

Services (Medical Records)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances an individual service man or woman's legal representatives are entitled to see an individual service man or woman's medical records.

Mr. Freeman: For reasons of medical confidentiality the practice is only to release medical documents on a doctor-to-doctor basis. However, when a legal representative, acting with his or her client's consent, establishes a clear legal need to see that client's medical documents, for example in connection with litigation, consideration would be given to disclosing the documents to that representative's medical adviser.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the circumstances in which civilian doctors are allowed to inspect an individual Army service man or woman's medical records held by the Army.

Mr. Freeman: A service man or woman's service medical documents will normally be made available to a civilian doctor only for the purposes of treatment and with the written authority of the individual concerned.

Services (Medical Treatment)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Army service men and women being medically treated have the right of second opinion by a doctor, military or civilian, of their own choice.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. This is, however, at the patient's own expense unless referral has been made by the doctor treating the patient.

Correspondence

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what dates, since 1975, letters have been received by his Department from Mr. Colin Wallace or from his solicitor, Thomas Eggar and Son;

(2) on what dates, since 1975, letters have been received by his Department from Captain [retired] Fred Holroyd.

Mr. Freeman: We do not comment on general inquiries about correspondence between third parties and the MOD.

Rosyth Dockyard (Whole Body Scanning)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Rosyth dockyard workers have undergone whole body scanning (a) in each year since 1981 and (b) since April 1987.

Mr. Sainsbury: Whole body scanning is voluntary and has been made available for all who wished to have it. Since 1981 and up to 6 April 1987, the number of Rosyth dockyard workers who have undergone whole body scanning each year is:

1983	3
1984	21
1985	25
1986	26
1987[1]	6
Total	81

[1] Up to 6 April 1987.

Since 6 April 1987 all matters concerning the health and safety at work of employees have been the primary responsibility of the commercial managers.

Zimbabwe and Mozambique

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list the numbers of British service personnel seconded to Zimbabwe and Mozambique, respectively, for training purposes in each of the past five years to date; and what number are expected to serve in each of these two countries in 1988.

Mr. Freeman: The total number of British service personnel seconded to Zimbabwe for training purposes in each of the past five years is as follows:

	Number
1984	58
1985	59
1986	62

The number expected to serve in Zimbabwe in 1988 is 45.

No British service personnel have been seconded to Mozambique for training purposes over the past five years, and no such secondments are planned for the future. However, at the request of the Government of Mozambique, and with the agreement of the Zimbabwean Government, the British military advisory and training team in Zimbabwe is providing a limited programme of training to members of the Mozambican army.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current annual costs of the British military training missions in Zimbabwe and Mozambique, respectively; from what sources they are met; and what are the projections of costs and funding for these missions in 1988.

Mr. Freeman: There is no British military training mission in Mozambique. The total cost of the British military advisory and training team in Zimbabwe was about £3·3 million in 1987-88, and is expected to be about £3·6 million in 1988-89. The bulk of these costs are met by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's United Kingdom military training assistance scheme, although an element of support costs is provided by the Government of Zimbabwe.

Type 42 Destroyer

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to replace the type 42 destroyer in service with the Royal Navy; and whether he will make a statement on the type of vessel and time scale of such a replacement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The type 42 will still be in service into the next century. No decisions have yet been taken on a replacement.

Ammunition and Explosives (Accidents)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many deaths and injuries of military personnel due to ammunition and explosives accidents occurred in each year since 1975; and how many deaths and injuries of civilians due to British military ammunition and explosives accidents occurred in each year since 1975.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer, 4 December 1987]: This information is not held centrally.

SCOTLAND

Rating Reform

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has given to the Data Protection Registrar's representations about the poll tax register.

Mr. Lang: The comments made by the Data Protection Registrar on the draft Community Charges (Registration) (Scotland) Regulations, are, like all other comments made on the draft Regulations, currently under consideration. I will be responding to the points made by the registrar shortly.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he will take to make sure that information from the Community Charge Registrar will not be disclosed for public inspection, or supplied, other than for purposes directly connected to the specific operation of the new charge.

Mr. Lang: The provisions for inspection of the community charges register are set out in section 20 of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987. The information to be made available for public inspection consists essentially of the names and addresses of those registered as liable for the community charges, which is a matter of legitimate public interest.

Civil Defence

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish guidance on the financial, staffing and resource implications of the Scottish Home and Health Department's circular "Emergency Planning in the National Health Service: Health Service Civil Defence Planning."

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. Specific funds have been made available since 1982 to health boards to assist with the costs of civil defence planning. Boards will be able to use these funds to take forward the planning tasks outlined in the circular.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the Scottish Home and Health Department's circular "Emergency Planning in the National Health Service: Health Service Civil Defence Planning" issued on 6 July.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to draw up a staged programme of implementation of the civil defence duties of health boards as set out in the Scottish Home and Health Department's circular SHHD/DGM (1987) 41.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Yes; and it will be issued in due course.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many health boards have followed the recommendations of his Department in appointing an emergency planning officer.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: All health boards have appointed an emergency planning officer.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why an assessment of the likely effects of the nuclear winter was not included among the civil defence plan-making duties of the health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are a number of areas within the broad parameters of the planning guidance issued to the Health Service which may require further study and guidance. Consideration is being given to identifying these and to the best way to take them forward.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why assessment and guidance on the likely effect of deep psychological trauma on the public and medical personnel were not included in the civil defence plan-making duties of the health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This is one of several areas requiring further study.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with representatives of the medical professions on the moral and ethical problems associated with the policy of triage after nuclear attack; and when he will issue guidelines on the implementation of triage after nuclear attack.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such discussions have been held. Since the circumstances of any accident, whether as a result of a nuclear attack or a civil emergency, vary unpredictably, it is not feasible to issue guidance on the medical criteria used to decide priorities for treatment.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he anticipates that detailed guidance relating to armed forces casualties, and to host nation arrangements, as referred to in paragraph 4.4 of the Scottish Home and Health Department's circular SHHD/DGM (1987) 41 "Emergency Planning in the National Health Service: Civil Defence Planning" will become available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The review of joint civil and military medical planning requirements is complex, and a firm date cannot yet be given for its completion. Guidance to the Health Service will be issued as soon as possible after the completion of the review.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much civil defence grant was paid to each health board in each of the last five years; and what proportion these sums constituted of the total emergency planning budget of each health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Funds allocated to health boards and the Common Services Agency specifically for civil defence planning purposes in each of the last five years are set out in the table. Information on the total emergency planning budgets of health boards is not held centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Child Welfare

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will increase the monitoring of teachers in special care schools so as to ensure that children at such schools are not sexually interfered with;

(2) what facilities are at present available to him for monitoring potential dangers to handicapped children from teachers disposed to abuse them in any way.

Dr. Mawhinney: Responsibility for ensuring that children at school are not subject to abuse rests with the managers of schools, principals and teachers. My Department, however, maintains a system for recording misconduct cases among teachers, enabling it to initiate appropriate action; new appointments are also checked against this record.

The Department is empowered to withdraw recognition from a teacher on grounds of misconduct and to direct that the teacher's employment be terminated. There is also a requirement for schools to be open to inspection by inspectors and other officers of my Department.

There are no plans to increase monitoring of teachers in post. However, an interdepartmental working party is currently drawing up proposals for a system that would enable employers to check the criminal background of persons being appointed to posts involving substantial contact with children.

Waste Paper

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent his Department uses recycled paper or provides paper for recycling.

Mr. Stanley: The information is not available in the form requested. However in the year 1986-87 some 25,000 bags of waste paper were sent for recycling.

Dentistry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the districts in each health and social services board in Northern Ireland; how many district dental officers are employed by each of these boards; if the duties of district dental officers are similar in each board area; whether any of the boards plan to increase the number of such officers; how the numbers have changed in the last three years; and what were or are the reasons for any such changes or proposed changes.

Mr. Needham: There are no districts and no district dental officers in the health and social services boards in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many senior dental surgery assistants there are employed by each health and social services board in Northern Ireland; whether their duties are similar in each board area; what increases there have been in the number of such officers in the last three years; whether any of them has any plans to increase the numbers of such officers; and what are the principal reasons for such changes or proposed changes.

Mr. Needham: The table sets out the number of senior dental surgery assistants employed by each health and social services board in each of the last three years. The duties of these officers are similar in each board area except for a few officers who are employed in the dental school in the Eastern board area. There are no plans to increase the numbers of these officers.

Increases over the past three years were the result of filling existing vacant posts.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many chief dental officers there are in the employment of each health and social services board in Northern Ireland; whether their duties are similar in each board area; whether there are any plans to increase the number of such officers; what increases have taken place in the last three years and what are the principal reasons for any such change.

Mr. Needham: There is one chief administrative dental officer employed by each health and social services board and their duties are similar. There are no plans to increase the number and there have been no increases in the last three years.

Western Health Board

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what increase of staff there has been in the number of officials employed by the Western health and social services board over the last three years and the present year, or financial year, to date; what grades have been increased in number and by how many in each grade; what has been the annual cost of such increases in staff; and what were the precise reasons for each increase.

Mr. Needham: The detailed information required could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The information which is readily available is given in the table.

Mental Hospitals

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to how many patients in mental hospitals in Northern Ireland who have a visual impairment also suffer from an additional handicap; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: This information is not collected centrally.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the figures for the first half of 1987 of the number of persons proceeded against for scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many persons pleaded guilty to the principal offence; and how many persons in such contested cases were found not guilty of the principal offence.

Mr. Stanley: During the first six months of 1987, a total of 390 persons were tried for indictable scheduled offences by a judge sitting without a jury, 352 pleaded guilty and 38 pleaded not guilty. 18 of the latter were found not guilty.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were charged with scheduled offences in Northern Ireland in the first six months of 1987.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 21 October at columns 756-60.

Royal Ulster Constabulary Station, Cadogan Park

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what pre-contract arrangements have been made for the proposed Royal Ulster Constabulary station at Cadogan park; and what information he has as to whether structural steel is being fabricated for this purpose.

Mr. Stanley: The construction and repair of buildings for the Royal Ulster Constabulary is the responsibility of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. The authority has informed me that no pre-contract arrangements have been made for the proposed Royal Ulster Constabulary station at Cadogan park. It would not be in the public interest to disclose details of materials to be used.

Royal Ulster Constabulary Station, Ballynafeigh

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when it is hoped to complete the building of the Royal Ulster Constabulary station at Ballynafeigh.

Mr. Stanley: The construction and repair of buildings for the Royal Ulster Constabulary is the responsibility of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. The authority has informed me that it hopes to begin work on the new police station at Ballynafeigh during 1988. It is not possible to give a forecast for completion.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve are currently estimated to be Catholics; what proportion this represents of the manpower of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, separately; and what proportion of recruitment to the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve in the latest calendar year was from the Catholic community.

Mr. Stanley: The religious denomination of members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and its reserve are not recorded at present. Nevertheless, I understand that about 10 per cent. of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and full-time reserve are Roman Catholic and that around 10 per cent. of those recruited to the Royal Ulster Constabulary and around 12 per cent. to the full-time reserve in 1986 were Roman Catholic. The Royal Ulster Constabulary will continue its efforts to attract suitably qualified recruits from all parts of the community.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, currently hold private firearms certificates.

Mr. Stanley: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lay Assessors

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East on 18 November, what consideration he has given to the possibility of having lay assessors; and whether he plans to give any further consideration to such proposals.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 27 November 1987]: The Government agreed with the conclusion reached by Sir George Baker in his review of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 that the appointment of lay assessors to sit with the judge in Diplock courts would not be an improvement on the present mode of trial. There are no plans to give the subject further consideration.

Flood Damage (Assistance)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give a breakdown of the funds allocated by his Department to the victims of the recent floods in the Province between (a) the Housing Executive, (b) the Department of Health and Social Security, (c) voluntary organisations and (d) local residents.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 10 December 1987]: All funds expended by statutory bodies and given to voluntary bodies from Government are intended to help local residents. Final figures are not yet available, but the Housing Executive estimates that it will spend approximately £250,000 in repair work to its properties; the DHSS has paid £273,000 to approximately 600 claimants under the social security system; £13,000 has been set aside to reimburse voluntary organisations for costs already incurred and a further £5,500 will be made available to them; £56,753 of EC money has been distributed by the voluntary sector directly to households; funds have been provided by the Department of Economic Development for 45 Action for Community Employment posts to be taken up by voluntary bodies and the local councils; and other costs are still to be incurred in providing help.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Anglo-American Relations

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the United States Government the implications for Anglo-American relations of attempts made by American corporations and individuals to undermine the financial standing of United Kingdom companies or their European partners.

Mr. Eggar: We regularly discuss international economic, financial and trade matters with the Americans. I would be happy to consider any detailed matters which my hon. Friend wishes to raise.

Ethiopia

Mr. Julian Amery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call upon the Ethiopian Government, and the resistance movements against which they are fighting, to negotiate a ceasefire so that aid provided by Her Majesty's Government should reach the victims of the famine as soon as possible.

Mrs. Chalker: The Twelve issued a statement on 13 November condemning attacks by rebel groups on food aid convoys and urging that no obstacle be put in the way of the transportation of food aid. With our European partners we have repeatedly urged progress towards a peaceful solution of the internal conflicts in Ethiopia. A ceasefire based on humanitarian considerations would relieve much suffering and assist relief efforts.

Parliamentary Business

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) ministerial statements, (b) private notice questions, (c) debates on Government motions, (d) debates on Opposition motions, (e) debates on Adjournment (half-hour), (f) debates on Adjournment (other than half hour), (g) debates on statutory instruments and (h) other debates which took place in each of the last six parliamentary Sessions, required the attendance in the House of Ministers or officials in his Department.

Mr. Eggar: Information is not readily available in the precise form requested, which could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However the following details have been drawn from departmental statistics from both the diplomatic and aid wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office:

	Statements	PNQs	[1] Debates	[1] Adjournment Debates	Statutory Instruments
Session: 1981-82[2]	16	1	19	4	7
Session: 1982-83[2]	6	1	8	10	11
Session: 1983-84	26	14	17	25	4
Session: 1984-85	5	3	16	19	16
Session: 1985-86	14	11	17	14	3
Session: 1986-87	2	0	5	11	2

[1] Departmental records do not distinguish between debates on Government, Opposition or other motions, nor Adjournment debates whether half hour or others.
[2] Detailed records for the ODA were not kept prior to 1983 and have been compiled from available data.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Bills his Department initiated in each of the last six parliamentary Sessions; if he will name them; and how many became Acts of Parliament.

Mr. Eggar: The following Bills were initiated and became Acts of Parliament:

Session 1986-87
Territorial Sea Act
Diplomatic and Consular Premises (Control) Act
Irish Sailors and Soldiers Land Trust Act

Session 1985-86
British Council and Commonwealth Institute (Superannuation) Act
European Communities (Spanish and Portuguese) Accession Act
European Communities (Amendment) Act
Commonwealth Development Corporation Act
Crown Agents (Amendment) Act
Australia Act

Session 1984-85
Hong Kong Act
Brunei and Maldives Act

Session 1981-82
Canada Act
Taking of Hostages Act

Members of the European Parliament

Mr. Cabora: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what payments are made to European Members of Parliament for (a) salary, (b) office, research and secretarial allowances, (c) daily allowance for attending meetings on parliamentary business and (d) allowance per mile for travel on parliamentary business, expressed in (i) £ sterling and (ii) European currency units.

Mrs. Chalker: The salary of United Kingdom Members of the European Parliament is £18,500. The figures supplied by the European Parliament for allowances paid to MEPs are as follows:

Travel allowance:
0·56 ecu (40p) per kilometre for the first 400 kilometres.
0·28 ecu (20p) per kilometre thereafter.
Daily subsistence away from home on parliamentary business: 148 ecu (£106).
Office allowance (including travel within home country on parliamentary business): 2,129 ecu (£1,530) per month.
Research and Secretarial allowance: 3,446 ecu (£2,480) per month, paid directly to employee against a contract.

Tibet

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications of the current situation in Tibet for United Kingdom interests.

Mr. Eggar: We continue to monitor the situation in Tibet. We do not believe that at present it has direct implications for United Kingdom interests.

EEC (Majority Voting)

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for Her Majesty's Government's relations with the EEC of the trend in the number of important decisions reached by majority voting.

Mrs. Chalker: The use of majority voting, as provided for in the European Community treaty and in the amendments to it contained in the Single European Act, will lead to swifter decision making. We support this development because it will speed up progress towards the completion of the single large market, a long-standing objective of the United Kingdom.

Falkland Islands (Conservation)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 7, if he will give details of the various conservation requirements at the times fisheries licences were awarded for the Falkland Islands conservation zone.

Mr. Eggar: The conservation requirements of the fishery, which are determined by the Falkland Islands Government's scientific advisers, the renewable resources assessment group at Imperial college, are the regulation of fishing effort and the preservation of fish stocks to ensure the continued viability of the fishery.

Mozambique (Air Malawi Incident)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has protested to the Government of Mozambique about the recent shooting down of an Air Malawi civil airliner by the Mozambique armed forces and about the consequent deaths of British passengers aboard the aeroplane; and what action he intends to take about this matter.

Mrs. Chalker: We have expressed concern about this tragic incident on a number of occasions, most recently during my visit to southern Africa. The Mozambican authorities have expressed their profound regret both to Her Majesty's Government and to the bereaved families. We have formally reserved the right to claim compensation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Inner Cities Unit

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what basis he estimates a 1:1·6 public-private sector leverage ratio for his Department's inner cities unit.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My estimate of a 1:1·6 public-private sector leverage ratio for our inner cities initiative set out in my answer of 24 November at columns 151-52 relates to those projects supported by our inner city task forces which also include a financial contribution from the private sector. In these cases we estimate that every £1 from our inner cities initiative has attracted £1·60 from the private sector.

I regret that my previous answer of 24 November 1987 did not make it clear that that estimate was not an estimate of the public-private sector ratio over the inner cities initiatives as a whole.

Inner City Task Force

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, for each inner city task force, he will list (a) the recipients of grants to the voluntary sector, (b) the size of the grant (c) the purpose of the grant.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The voluntary sector recipients of task force grants, and the size and purpose of these grants, are as follows:

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will consider publishing an annual report and annual accounts for each inner city task force.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. The inner cities initiative is aimed at improving the targetting of the money channelled through all existing Government programmes, and receives only a modest top-up budget. I announced the setting up of the initiative to the House in February 1986, and made a statement on its expansion in April of this year. I shall continue to report progress and developments to the House as suitable occasions arise.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, for each inner city task force that has established a development fund, he will list (a) the size and (b) the source of private sector contributions; and whether these contributions are in the form of grants or loans.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The size, source and form of private sector contributions (including advice and administration) to task force development funds is currently as follows:

Task force	Source	Size	Form of contribution
North Peckham	Lloyds Bank	£100,000	Loans fund with repayments returning to the fund, for loans at preferential rates of interest. Full time secondee to administer fund from January 1988.
Manchester/Moss Side	Barclays Bank	£50,000	Loans fund with repayments returning to the fund, for loans at preferential rates of interest.
Bristol/St. Paul's	National Westminster Bank	. . .	Concessionary offers on finance and administrative charges. Staff secondment to assist management of fund.
Wolverhampton	Co-operative Bank	. . .	Loans available to grant recipients at preferential rates of interest, plus free banking for one year.
Middlesbrough	Barclays Bank	£50,000	Loans fund with repayments returning to the fund, for loans at preferential rates of interest. Staffing and administrative support.
Handsworth	National Westminster Bank	. . .	Services of business development manager to administer development fund.
Leeds/Chapeltown	Yorkshire Bank	. . .	Accountant's services to administer fund. Loans/overdrafts at lower rate for applicants referred through the fund.
North Kensington	Midland Bank	. . .	Still under consideration.

The support of the banks for the task force development funds marks a very significant contribution to tackling the problems of the inner cities, and in particular the need by small business there for loan finance which would not otherwise be available. Discussions are continuing with other banks, in respect of other task force areas.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement for each inner city task force on the level of co-operation with the relevant local authority.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We regard the co-operation and support of the local authority as helpful to the success of the work of our inner-city task forces. I am glad to say that co-operation is generally either good or improving. Where this is not the case we are nevertheless determined to press ahead vigorously with the work of the task forces to achieve our policy objectives and thereby benefit the communities concerned.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list, for each inner city task force, the recipients, size and purpose of grants or loans from their development fund.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The task force development funds are administered by local enterprise agencies and not directly by the task forces. Individual applications are assessed by the agency concerned and the clearing bank supporting the relevant fund. The full details of every grant that the hon. Member requests could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a table for each inner city task force area, drawn from 1981 census figures, showing the total population broken down by the usual census categories for age, social class, employment, housing, tenure, socio-economic group, together with a statement of any estimates of change since 1981 made by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The information is not available in the form requested. I will give the hon. Member a full reply as soon as possible.

FIMBRA

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next expects that the FIMBRA organisation, established under the Financial Services Act, will be formally incorporated by the Securities and Investments Board, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The Financial Services Act provides that the Securities and Investments Board may not recognise a self-regulating organisation without the consent of the Secretary of State. The Act also requires the Secretary of State to refuse his consent if he considers, after receiving and considering a report on the matter from the Director General of Fair Trading, that the rules of the organisation have, or are intended or likely to have to any significant extent, the effect of restricting, distorting or preventing competition or, if they have or are intended or likely to have that effect to any significant extent, then the effect is no greater than is necessary for the protection of investors.

My right hon. and noble Friend has considered the rules submitted by FIMBRA to the board, and has received and considered a report on them by the Director General of Fair Trading. He has concluded that on the basis of the information presently available to him he does not consider that the rules have or are intended or likely to have, to any significant extent the effect described above. He has therefore today given his consent to the board for the recognition of FIMBRA.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many applications for membership have been made to the FIMBRA organisation, established under the Financial Services Act; how many have been approved; how many have been rejected; and how many are still being processed.

Mr. Maude: That is a matter for FIMBRA.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he intends to extend the final date for application to join the FIMBRA organisation, established under the Financial Services Act; and what provision he will make for firms which have been unable to apply before the current final date for application through circumstances beyond their control.

Mr. Maude: I have today made an order specifying 27 February 1988 as the day appointed for the purposes of paragraph 1(1) of schedule 15 to the Financial Services Act. This has the effect that any person who has applied for membership of a recognised self-regulating organisation or for authorisation by the Securities and Investments Board by that date, and whose application has not been determined before the date on which section 3 of the Act comes into force, will until such time as his application is determined be treated as though authorised by the board. A person who applies for membership of a recognised self-regulating organisation after this date will receive authorisation only when he is admitted to membership of the authorisation. I have no powers under the Act to provide additional transitional provisions for late applicants, but the Department will be continuing its campaign to alert all involved in good time to the requirement to be authorised.

Financial Services Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the operation of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Maude: I have today made an order bringing into force sections 26 to 30 of the Financial Services Act on 1 January 1988. These provisions empower the Securities and Investments Board to receive and consider applications for direct authorisation. The order also commences certain related provisions concerned with fees (section 112), the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act (section 189 and schedule 14) and the penalties for making untrue or misleading statements in connection with an application.

The order also brings into force paragraphs 25(2) and (3) of schedule 1 on 18 January 1988. This will enable the board to issue certificates to the effect that a periodical publication is of the kind specified in paragraph 25(1) of the schedule, and hence outside the scope of the Act.

The order also brings into force most of paragraph 1 of schedule 15 from 27 February 1988. This paragraph makes certain transitional provisions. In particular, by virtue of sub-paragraph (5), any licence issued under section 3 of the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act which is in effect on 27 February shall, unless revoked under section 6 of that Act, continue in force until the day on which section 3 of the Financial Services Act comes into force.

I refer my hon. Friend also to the other replies I am making to him today.

Unfair Trade Unit

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action the unfair trade unit has taken concerning the reported requirement of the Japanese Government that the typeface used to mark vehicle identification numbers remains unchanged for all cars imported into Japan of a particular model.

Mr. Alan Clark: The European Commission is negotiating with the relevant Japanese authorities for the removal of non-tariff barriers to the export of cars to Japan. I understand that vehicle identification numbers have not been raised with my Department during discussion of such barriers with the United Kingdom industry.

British Telecom

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has had any discussions with, or representations from, the Director General of OFTEL about any reference to the Monopolies and Merger Commission in respect of British Telecom.

Mr. Maude: The Director General of Telecommunications has told my right hon. and noble Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what he has also publicly indicated — that he is considering licence modifications with BT. The Director General has publicly stated that he may need to make a licence modification reference to MMC.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what he estimates to be the cost of the loyalty bonus for British Telecom shareholders; and whether he now has a figure for the numbers who received it.

Mr. Butcher: Arrangements are in hand to transfer bonus shares of a market value on 30 November 1987 of nearly £90 million to almost 920,000 British Telecom shareholders on the United Kingdom register.

Due to different administrative arrangements, the numbers of qualifying shareholders in Japan and North America are not likely to be known until late January.

Post Office (Sale)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he expects to raise any money from the sale of any part of the Post Office in any of the next three financial years.

Mr. Butcher: It is our policy to transfer activities from the public to the private sector wherever this is practicable and makes commercial sense, but we have no firm plans at present for the sale of any part of the Post Office.

Scientific Research and Development

Mr. Gould: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he now expects to publish the survey of scientific research and development within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I expect to publish in January 1988 the results of the survey of expenditure and employment on research and development performed in industry in the United Kingdom during 1986.

Customs Duties (Standing Committee)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what criteria he used in deciding how many officials from his Department attended the Sixth Standing Committee on Statutory Instruments &c. on Wednesday 2 December on the Customs Duties (ECSC) (No. 2) (Amendment No. 11) Order 1987.

Mr. Alan Clark: The officials present represented the divisions concerned with the subject matter covered by the instrument.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the percentage increase in the number of unemployed people in the United Kingdom since May 1979, using the same method of calculation as in May 1979.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not available. It is not possible to give a reliable estimate of unemployment now on the method used in 1979.

Small Businesses

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what controls affecting small businesses he proposes to abolish within the next 12 months.

Mr. Cope: The White Papers on deregulation contained proposals on a number of industrial relations and other issues, but it is too early to say whether legislation to implement them will be brought forward within the specified period.

Voluntary Part-time Work

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to support the adoption of the EEC draft directive on voluntary part-time work.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) on Monday 7 December, at column 31.

Jobs (Castleford)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many job vacancies were registered with jobcentres in the Castleford travel-to-work area in November.

Mr. Lee: The information is not available. The number of vacancies notified to jobcentres between 7 November 1987 and 4 December 1987 will be available on 14 January 1988.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is taking to improve job prospects in the Castleford travel-to-work area.

Mr. Lee: All my Department's employment, training and enterprise measures are available in the Castleford and Pontefract travel-to-work area. Unemployment has fallen by 1,146 in the area in the last year.

Job Release Scheme

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people he estimates will have retired under the job release scheme in 1987.

Mr. Lee: From January to November 1987 inclusive, 10,155 people have retired under the job release scheme.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received regarding the proposed ending of the job release scheme in January 1988.

Mr. Lee: My hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) and the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) have both raised questions on this subject. I refer the hon. Member to my replies on 4 November, at column 726, and on 2 December, at column 601. To date, 24 hon. Members have written with representations from their constituents.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the total expenditure under the technical and vocational education initiative for each year since its inception; and if he will make a statement on its future funding.

Mr. Cope: Expenditure to date on the pilot project phase is as follows:

	£ million
1983-84	7
1984-85	26
1985-86	39
1986-87	[1]70

In total, some £250 million will have been made available for pilot projects between 1983 and the end of the pilot phase in 1992.

In the 1986 White Paper "Working Together — Education and Training" the Government announced the extension of TVEI into a national scheme available to all local authorities in Great Britain from the autumn this year. Funding for the extension amounts to some £900 million over the next 10 years.

Benefits

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements currently exist for establishing whether claimants to unemployment benefits are available for work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: We introduced in October last year a new procedure to ensure that claimants to unemployment benefits are available for work. The procedure, which followed criticisms by the Public Accounts Committee of the effectiveness of the previous arrangements, consists of a questionnaire to all new claimants about the work they are looking for and the steps they are taking to find it.

The questionnaire has clearly enabled a better assessment to be made by the independent adjudicating authorities of claimants' entitlement to benefit. However, experience has also shown some changes to be desirable. First, it is clear that the existing questionnaire needs to seek more information in certain respects, such as on the qualifications and experience of claimants for the jobs they are seeking. Second, the current procedure does not pay sufficient regard to the fact that the circumstances of claimants can change considerably over time.

Accordingly, I am introducing two changes to existing procedures. The first is a revised questionnaire for use as from 1 February next year when a claim is first made. The new form seeks more information on such subjects as the claimant's qualifications and experience and on the type of work which is being sought. A copy of the revised questionnaire has been placed in the Library. It will be supplemented as soon after 1 February as possible by providing new claimants to benefit in areas of buoyant labour demand with information on occupations in which there are jobs immediately available.

The second change is to issue a questionnaire from the end of April next year to all those claimants being invited to a restart interview. This will seek information about qualifications, training and recent job-seeking efforts in order that the restart interviewer can identify more accurately the most appropriate help that can be offered. The questionnaire will also seek information about any restrictions which claimants are placing on the jobs they will take so that a check can be made that they continue to be available for work. The new procedure will be introduced in a small number of offices as from 1 February next year in order to gain practical experience of its use prior to its national introduction at the end of April. A copy of the questionnaire for use in the initial offices has been placed in the Library.

Neither of these measures affects the law on availability for work which was last re-enacted in the Social Security Act, 1975. They are intended solely to ensure that the law is administered effectively.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Rate Support Grant (Bolton)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will recalculate the education component of the 1988-89 rate support grant settlement for Bolton to take account of errors discovered and acknowledged by his Department; what steps he has taken to ensure that further errors have not been made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My Department provides the information on pupil and student numbers which is used in calculating the education component of each authority's grant-related expenditure assessment. This year for the first time students attending TVEI courses at local authority colleges were separately classified, but were inadvertently omitted from the student number count supplied to the Department of the Environment. As is usual, all the student data were sent to authorities for checking in August, but the error did not come to light until November, after the completion of calculations for the settlement. I have asked for procedures to be reviewed within my Department. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment said in reply to my hon. Friend on 10 December, at column 261, the error will be corrected in a supplementary report for 1988-89.

Education Reform

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the cost of producing, printing and distributing his Department's booklet "Education Reform: The Government's Proposals for Schools".

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 10 December, at column 222.

Maintained Sector

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the numbers of children of compulsory school age entering the maintained sector from the private sector of education over the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected centrally.

Nursery Education

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received regarding the making of nursery education a statutory obligation for local authorities.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations.

Capitation Allowance

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list, by local education authority, the schools where the capitation allowance is exceeded by parental donation.

Mr. Dunn: The latest available information is contained in paragraph 7(ix) and paragraphs 39-41 of the 1986 annual report by Her Majesty's inspectorate and is based on school visits. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House. The Department does not hold detailed systematic information for individual schools across LEAs.

National Curriculum

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he plans to publish the interim report of the science working group in relation to the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am publishing the interim report of the national curriculum science working group today. I am grateful to the chairman and members of the working group for their report, which is a substantial and imaginative document. I believe it provides a sound basis for the group's further work on attainment targets and programmes of study for science. Copies of the report and of my response will be lodged in the Libraries of both Houses.

A-level and O-level Examinations

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many boys and girls passed one or more A-level subjects for each year from 1970; and how many pupils gained one or more O-levels from 1970 both in absolute terms and as a percentage of the age group in state secondary schools.

Mr. Dunn: The information is shown in the table.

Subject Teaching

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the subjects taught in (a) state schools and (b) independent schools for the most recent period for which information is available.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information is not available in precisely the form in which the hon. Member asks. But examinations attempted by fifth formers in secondary schools give an indication of the breadth and balance of the curriculum pursued by individual pupils. The following figures show the examinations attempted within the areas of the proposed national curriculum foundation subjects, for pupils at maintained and independent schools:

Universities (Contracts)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to ensure that universities do not enter into major contracts with foreign high technology companies without first alerting British-owned companies; what information he has on such contracts under consideration by British universities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend is advised on major contracts for the supply of computer or communications equipment to British universities by the Computer Board for Universities and Research Councils. The board normally recommends a process of open competitive tender whereby interested British and foreign companies are invited to bid against an operational requirement and a fixed cash limit. Exceptionally, single tender action involving a British or a foreign supplier is allowed where there are strong grounds for ensuring technical compatibility with existing equipment or for establishing a lead site to demonstrate a novel type of application that only one supplier can support. In cases where a British or a foreign company offers a study contract including a capital gift of high technology equipment to a university, it is a matter for the university to decide whether or not to accept the contract, taking into account the recurrent costs associated with the gift of the equipment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on any assessments made as to the extent of the availability of illegal drugs in Her Majesty's prisons, and the action taken to prevent their importation and use.

Mr. John Patten: The following information relates to prison department establishments in England and Wales. Responsibility for establishments in Scotland and Northern Ireland rests with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland.

The best evidence available by which to assess the scale and nature of the smuggling, trafficking and misuse of drugs in establishments is the number of finds of substances or implements. In 1986, there were some 2,300 reports of such finds, the great majority of which were of cannabis or of implements for smoking cannabis. In the first 10 months of this year, 1,126 reports were received, of which the great majority again concerned finds of cannabis and related implements.

Measures to prevent and detect illicit drugs are kept continuously under review. Regular and special searches are conducted, including the use of dogs specially trained in drug detection work. The number of trained dogs has been increased. Dogs have been trained to detect heroin and cocaine as well as cannabis. The police investigate cases where there is reason to believe that a visitor intends to smuggle drugs into an establishment. Staff training on drugs has been improved. A new training package aimed specifically at the problems and needs of the prison service was issued to all establishments in 1985. In September 1987 further guidance and instructions were issued to all establishments, a major theme of which was the prevention of smuggling by visitors and by inmates returning from home leave. The abolition of the privilege whereby unconvicted prisoners can have food and drink sent in for them will remove a significant avenue into certain prisons for drugs.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on current advice and treatment provided for prisoners either charged with offences relating to drugs or found to be dependent on narcotics.

Mr. John Patten: The possibility of a history of drugs misuse is one of the factors medical officers inquire into during the course of their examination of inmates being received into prison custody. Where indicated medical help in withdrawing is offered, its nature and extent are determined by the medical officer's clinical assessment of the individual case. Additionally at a number of establishments personal support continuing after withdrawal is provided by members of staff or drug counselling agencies from the community.

Guidelines prepared in discussion between the prison department and probation service for the introduction at all establishments of a more co-ordinated response to drug misusers were issued on 25 September. These describe the responsibility of the governor to ensure the development of a coherent system and the complementary roles of medical and probation officers in the provision of care and support. The use of suitable drug counselling agencies from the community is encouraged. The particular advice offered an inmate prior to discharge will depend upon individual circumstances but progressively as the system is introduced will include the issue of a brief advisory card with which all establishments have been supplied. I am arranging for a copy of the guidelines and card to be placed in the Library.

Police Officers (Dismissals)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers have been dismissed from each constabulary over the last five years in each year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following table shows numbers of officers punished in disciplinary proceedings by dismissal from their force.

Police Officers (Staff Wastage)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage wastage as a proportion of the total number of officers employed by each constabulary for each of the last five years in each constabulary.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The available information is as follows. Separate information on each force outside the Metropolitan police could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The number of police officers employed is calculated on the mean average of actual strength at the beginning and end of each year.

Year	Average police strength	Wastage (including transfers and secondments)	Percentage of wastage over average police strength
Police forces in England and Wales (excluding Metropolitan police)

Lorry Ban (London)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what degree of effort goes into the enforcement of the lorry ban in the former Greater London council area; and whether that effort has diminished or increased since the Greater London council's abolition.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Greater London (Restriction of Goods Vehicles) Traffic Order 1985 came into force on 31 January 1986. Its enforcement is a matter for the commissioner, and has to take its place with other demands on police resources. I understand that effective enforcement is hindered by the large number of roads excluded from the ban and the legally inadequate state of the signing.

The commissioner informs me that enforcement has neither increased nor diminished since the abolition of the Greater London council.

Gartree Prison (Escapes)

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an inquiry into the circumstances of the escape of two prisoners from Her Majesty's prison Gartree on 10 December; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have asked the deputy director-general of the prison service, Mr. G. H. Lakes CB, MC, to conduct an immediate investigation into the circumstances and I will inform the House of his findings as soon as possible.

Brixton Prison

Mr. Holland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the rule 43 prisoners presently being held on F wing, Brixton prison, are there for medical reasons;

(2) how many rule 43 prisoners are currently being held on F wing, Brixton prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: On 7 December, 62 rule 43 prisoners were held on landing 4 of F wing, part of which has recently been taken into use for such prisoners. In addition, there were 15 prisoners elsewhere in F wing who were on rule 43 before being moved there for medical reasons.

Mr. Holland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the planned use of F wing, Brixton prison, in (a) the short term and (b) the long term.

Mr. John Patten: The use of prison accommodation is constantly under review, but there are no firm plans at present for further changes in the use of F wing at Brixton.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Holland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people currently being held on remand in police cells (a) nationally and (b) in London, require psychiatric assessment of treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: On the night of 6/7 December—the most recent date for which information is available—51 remand prisoners awaiting state of health or psychiatric reports were held in police cells in England and Wales. All were awaiting transfer to Brixton prison. Thirty-five were held in London and 16 elsewhere. Information on prisoners requiring psychiatric treatment is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Firearms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to whether the local police had been advised or were aware prior to the recent shooting of a court bailiff and a solicitor's clerk at Wolverhampton that the occupier of the house from which he was being evicted was in possession of a shotgun and —or had threatened violence against anyone attempting to dispossess him prior to the date on which the shootings took place.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands police that his officers were not consulted before this eviction took place; and that they were not asked to attend it. They were therefore unaware of any threat of violence. It was established, after the tragedy, that the occupier had been lawfully in possession of a shotgun.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the bodies which he consulted before publishing the White Paper on firearms.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following organisations were consulted and a number of others volunteered their views:

Arms and Armour Society
Association of Chief Police Officers
Association of County Councils
Association of District Councils
Association of Metropolitan Authorities
British Deer Society
British Medical Association
British Shooting Sports Council and Constituent Bodies
Council for the Protection of Rural England
County Landowners' Association
Countryside Commission
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
Forestry Commission
Historical Breech Loading and Small Arms Association
Imperial War Museum
National Farmers' Union
Nature Conservancy Council
Red Deer Commission
Royal Armouries
Scottish Shooting Council
Scottish Sports Council
Shooters' Rights Association
Shooting Sportspersons' Liaison Committee
Sports Council
Sports Council for Wales
Welsh Shooting Council

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Kent as to why the firearms referred to therein were destroyed;

(2) if, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Kent as to the year in which the anti-terrorist operation referred to therein took place; and at what location;

(3) if, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Kent as to the date on which the weapons referred to therein were destroyed;

(4) if, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Kent as to the cost to the police authority of the weapons referred to therein;

(5) if, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Kent as to whether all members of the police authority were informed of the purchase by the Kent police of the weapons referred to therein.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As I stated in my reply to the hon. Member on 8 December, at column 133, the firearms referred to were acquired for a specific anti-terrorist operation. This was conducted in 1978 at Leeds castle, Maidstone, Kent.

As part of the nationally agreed policy not to dispose of surplus firearms on the open market or to sell them off to firearms dealers, the weapons were destroyed on 7 February 1983. The chief constable was entitled to act on his own authority in this matter. The financial records for the period in question have not been retained.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information he has for England and Wales, and for each year from 1976 to 1986, from the number of rifles, shotguns and pistols recovered by the police from armed criminals, as to how many firearms had been acquired by the criminal from sources other than loss by or theft from licensed firearms and shotgun certificate holders; and what those sources were for each category of firearm;

(2) what information he has for England and Wales, and for each year from 1976 to 1986 inclusive, as to how many rifles, pistols and shotguns lost by or stolen from licensed firearms certificate holders or shotgun certificate holders were subsequently used in any type of violence against the person, particularly homicide, serious injury and armed robbery;

(3) what information he has, for England and Wales, and for each year from 1976 to 1986 inclusive, by type of offence and type of firearm, rifle, pistol or shotgun, as to how many firearm offences were committed by licensed firearms certificate holders or shotgun certificate holders which resulted in death or injury to a person other than the holder.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I would refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to questions from my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 30 November and from the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Cryer) on 7 December, at columns 3-4.

Mr. Frank Turner

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, the complaint against the Kent police by Mr. Frank Turner referred to therein was first made.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the chief constable of Kent that the complaint made by Mr. Turner was lodged on 27 August 1986.

Police (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the latest available figures for uniformed police officers in the West Yorkshire metropolitan police force; and what is the current establishment figure.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 30 November 1987 the strength of the West Yorkshire police was 5,209. The authorised police establishment is 5,204, and there is approval for 17 supernumerary police posts.

Immigration Rules

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will lay before the House the statement of changes to the immigration rules announced on 16 November, Official Report, column 788; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I am laying before Parliament today for publication tomorrow a statement of changes in the immigration rules to introduce the changes which I announced on 16 November. The effect of these changes will be to provide for (1) leave to enter or remain for up to four years to be granted to persons of independent means, sole representatives, writers and artists; (2) leave to remain for up to four years to be granted to business men and self-employed persons; (3) leave to enter for up to two years to be granted to au pairs; and (4) a reduction to six months in the maximum period of a visit.

As I indicated to the House on 16 November, people in the categories affected by the changes will no longer need to apply for merely routine extensions of leave in order to remain for the maximum allowed in that category. The effect of the changes will be to reduce unnecessary bureaucracy, improve the overall level of the service which the Department offers to the genuine applicant and enable efforts to be concentrated more effectively and speedily on those cases where important decisions have to be made. These changes will become effective on 1 February 1988. I hope that the House will before then have an opportunity to consider these changes.

Police, Fire and Civil Defence Authorities

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached a decision on the applications from the joint police and fire and civil defence authorities for redetermination of their expenditure levels for 1988-89; what maximum precepts he proposes to set in consequence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: All six joint police authorities and six of the seven joint fire and civil defence authorities sought redetermination of the expenditure levels I announced on 24 July and I am today notifying them of my decisions. On police, I have decided not to increase the expenditure levels for South Yorkshire, Northumbria and West Yorkshire, but have redetermined the expenditure levels for the other forces as follows:

	£ million
Merseyside	68·906
Greater Manchester	95·221

On fire and civil defence, I have decided not to increase the expenditure levels for London, Merseyside, Tyne and Wear and West Midlands. The expenditure levels for the other authorities have been redetermined as follows:

	£ million
South Yorkshire	22·514
West Yorkshire	37·558

My proposals for the maximum precept levels for these authorities for 1988-89 are as follows:

	Police
Greater Manchester	15·38
Merseyside	19·30
Northumbria	13·92
South Yorkshire	15·59
West Midlands	14·11
West Yorkshire	15·72

	Fire and Civil Defence
Greater Manchester	10·82
Merseyside	8·22
South Yorkshire	11·21
Tyne and Wear	11·04
West Midlands	7·48
West Yorkshire	13·41
London	8·15

Formal notification of the proposed maximum precepts has been sent to the authorities today. I have asked the authorities to let me know by 15 January whether they accept the maximum precepts.

Civil Defence

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, further to his answer of 30 October, he will give a functional and geographical breakdown of United Kingdom programmed civil defence expenditure in 1987-88.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 4 December 1987]: Information is not available in the form requested, but programmed expenditure for United Kingdom Departments in 1987-88 is as follows:

Department	£ million
Cabinet Office	0·35
Central Office of Information	0·05
Department of Energy	0·25
Department of the Environment	2·20
Department of Health and Social Security	2·00
Department of Trade and Industry	0·10
Department of Transport	4·90
Welsh Office	0·40
Home Office	69·20
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	20·80
Department of Employment	0·10
Scottish Home and Health Department	7·95
Northern Ireland Office	2·00
Total	110·30

Revisions in some Departments' assessments of their programmed civil defence expenditure account for the difference between the total and the figure given on 30 October in reply to the hon. Member.

ENERGY

Scottish Coalfield

2. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the anticipated production outturn for the Scottish coalfield in 1987.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Production in the Scottish coalfield over the 12 months to September 1987 was approximately 6 million tonnes. I do not expect the figure for the calendar year 1987 to be greatly different.

North Sea Oil

12. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are his latest estimates of the projected output of oil from the North sea over the next five years; and how these figures compare with the projected level of demand for oil in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: On current estimates of future production and demand the United Kingdom is likely to remain self-sufficient in oil well into the 1990s.

Energy Efficiency

13. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps the Government are taking to encourage energy efficiency in domestic households.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department's Energy Efficiency Office is working closely with the insulation, heating, and fuel industries to encourage householders and landlords to invest in cost-effective measures to reduce fuel bills.

28. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has to influence developers and the building professions to improve energy efficiency in rehabilitation work.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Energy Efficiency Office is spending £0.5 million this year on research and development and through the demonstration scheme to promote the energy efficient renovation of buildings. Future programmes are subject to the outcome of the EEO review.

41. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has to provide advice to householders on energy efficiency.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer today to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands).

British Coal

14. Mr. Michael Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next proposes to meet the chairman of British Coal.

Mr. Parkinson: I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

22. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to meet the chairman of British Coal; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Parkinson: I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

25. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to meet the deputy chairman of British Coal to discuss the sale of British Coal housing.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend and I have regular meetings with the deputy chairman of British Coal to discuss a wide variety of issues concerning the coal industry.

26. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal; and what was discussed.

Mr. Parkinson: I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

44. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next proposes to have discussions with the chairman of British Coal regarding the financial structure of the industry.

Mr. Parkinson: I have regular meetings with the chairman of British Coal to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Refuse Combustion

15. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his Department's research into refuse combustion as a source of power generation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Municipal and industrial refuse, surplus straw and forestry wastes are major potential sources of energy. My Department is undertaking a substantial programme of R and D aimed at overcoming the difficulties of handling and burning these materials. In the current financial year over £700,000 is expected to be spent on the work.

Renewable Energy

16. Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the level of his Department's research into renewable forms of energy.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I regularly receive representations about the Department's involvement in research into renewable forms of energy.

Fast Breeder Nuclear Technology

17. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress towards commercial viability of fast breeder nuclear technology.

Mr. Parkinson: Electricity utilities from France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Britain have recently agreed to work together towards a common conceptual fast reactor design. The aim is to produce an improved design of demonstration reactor.

Coal Industry (Productivity)

18. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what changes have occurred in the productivity per manshift in the coal industry since 1979.

23. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what improvements have occurred in output per man shift in the coal industry since 1979.

Mr. Michael Spicer: For the week ending 5 December, average deep mined revenue output per man shift was 4·07 tonnes, a new weekly record level of productivity. This represents an increase of over 80 per cent. on the average of 2·24 tonnes for 1978-79.

CEGB (Projects)

19. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has received any application from the Central Electricity Generating Board for authorisation for any new projects on the lines of the Dinorwig plant in North Wales.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have not received any applications for projects of this type.

Electricity Council

20. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many staff are currently employed by the Electricity Council.

Mr. Parkinson: As at 30 September 1987 the Electricity Council employed 1,252 staff.

59. Mr. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the Electricity Council; and what matters they discussed.

Mr. Parkinson: I meet Sir Philip Jones regularly to discuss a range of topics.

Colliery Closures

21. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent information he has received from the chairman of British Coal on the number of proposed colliery closures.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand from the chairman of the British Coal Corporation that at present there are five collieries proposed for closure.

Heating Fuel

24. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to which fuel is currently the most popular form of domestic heating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: Gas is the most popular fuel for domestic heating. Competition and consumer choice determine the market share of each fuel.

Electricity (Production Costs)

27. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the cost, in terms of pence per kilowatt hour, of the electricity output of (a) new coal-fired power stations, (b) new nuclear power stations, (c) new combined heat and power stations, and (d) the Severn barrage.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The latest analysis of comparative generating costs showed that the average lifetime costs per KWh adjusted to April 1987 prices was 2·82p/KWh for Hinkley Point B and 3·03 p/KWh for the first stage of the coal-fired station at Drax. The Severn Tidal Power Group indicated in a study published in July 1986 that the cost of electricity produced from a barrage would be 3·45 p/KWh, adjusted to April 1987 prices. It is not possible to estimate the cost of electricity output from CHP stations because of the wide variation in design options.

Energy Savings (Industry)

29. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has to achieve further energy savings in industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is for industry to seize the opportunity offered by improvements in energy efficiency. My Department provides help and advice; we have recently launched a new campaign aimed at the most energy-intensive industrial sectors.

Insulation

30. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the implications for his support for community programme insulation projects of the Energy Efficiency Office review.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Support for community insulation projects will continue as planned. About 500,000 homes, mostly those of pensioners, will have been draughtproofed by the end of 1987/88, and over 300,000 more will be treated in 1988-89.

Electricity Demand Forecasts

31. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy in which years since 1967 the Central Electricity Generating Board's electricity demand forecasts for four or five years ahead have subsequently proved to be accurate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter which falls within the management responsibilities of the Central Electricity Generating Board. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

33. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what further measures he intends to introduce to assist and promote greater conservation of energy for domestic consumers.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I will consider whether any further measures should be taken following the review of the Energy Efficiency Office.

Generating Stations (Closures)

34. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many electricity generating stations have been closed by the Central Electricity Generating Board since 1979; and what total of generating capacity this represents.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Since 1979 the CEGB has closed 66 small power stations with a total generating capacity of 12,378 MW.

Opencast Sites

35. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many opencast coal sites there are in operation in the United Kingdom; to how many of these he has paid an official visit in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand from the British Coal Corporation that there are currently 49 opencast mine sites coaling in the United Kingdom. I have visited one coaling site and one reclaimed site. I plan to visit more sites in the future.

Oil Stocks

36. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his current estimate of the length of time for which Britain will be self-sufficient in oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark). Current estimates lead my Department to believe that the United Kingdom's self-sufficiency in oil could last well into the 1990s.

Electricity Industry (Privatisation)

37. Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what further advice he has received from Lord Marshall and the Central Electricity Generating Board on proposals for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry; and if he intends to act upon them.

Mr. Parkinson: I regularly meet Lord Marshall to discuss a range of issues concerning the privatisation of the electricity supply industry. I shall of course take into account his advice when developing proposals for the future of the industry.

49. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairmen of the area electricity boards to discuss privatisation of the industry.

52. Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairmen of the area electricity boards to discuss privatisation of the industry.

Mr. Parkinson: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East (Mr. Moss) earlier today.

54. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received regarding the proposed privatisation of the electricity industry.

Mr. Parkinson: I have received representations from electricity consumers, unions, other nationalised industries and other interested parties and will take these into account when considering proposals for the privatisation of the industry.

58. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he will give, in the course of preparation for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry, to the specific requirements of final consumers and the case for rationalisation in electricity distribution.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We are currently developing our proposals for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry. The protection of consumers' interests is being given a top priority. No decisions have yet been taken on the future structure of the industry.

60. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the Electricity Council to discuss privatisation of the industry.

Mr. Parkinson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) today.

Solar Energy

38. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the current scope and status of passive solar energy design research by his Department.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department's programme on passive solar design covers both domestic and non-domestic buildings and comprises design studies, field trials, supporting research and development and information dissemination. Nearly £1 million has recently been committed to the second phase of the design studies.

Electricity Supply Industry

39. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what response he has made to the recent views expressed to him about the future of the electricity supply industry by representatives of employers and trades unions.

Mr. Parkinson: I hold regular discussions both with the industry's senior management and representatives of the trade unions. I am giving full consideration to their views in drawing up proposals for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

42. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what advance estimate he has made of the eventual cost of any promotional and advertising campaign accompanying the selling-off of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Parkinson: It would be premature to make such an estimate.

43. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what cost savings have been achieved in the electricity supply industry in each of the last five years; and what cost saving target has now been set for the next financial year.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The electricity supply industry was set a performance aim of a reduction of 4·25 per cent. in controllable costs—fuel, salaries and most other goods and services — per unit sold in real terms between 1982-83 and 1984-85. The industry estimates that had it not been for the effects on its operations of the miners' strike in 1984-85 controllable cost savings would have been close to target. Between 1983-84 and 1986-87 it achieved a further reduction of 4·6 per cent. as compared with the aim for the period 1983-84 to 1987-88 of a reduction of 6·1 per cent. The performance aim for the next financial year is under discussion.

50. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what the rate of return on investment for the electricity supply industry has been in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is not possible to measure the rate of return on investment in an individual year. The Government expect the electricity supply industry to achieve a 5 per cent. real rate of return on its new investment as a whole.

61. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, how many people are employed in the electricity supply industry; and what is his estimate of future employment.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The average number of employees in the industry in 1986-87 was 132,000. The level of employment is a matter for the industry.

Insulation

40. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, how many homes have been given financial assistance for insulation since 1983 for (a) pensioners and (b) other high-risk groups.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 9 December 1987, at column 189.

Electricity Supplies

45. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the total number of households supplied with electricity in each year since 1975.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The electricity boards record the number of domestic customers, supplied in Great Britain as:

	Millions
1975-76	19·3
1976-77	19·6
1977-78	19·8
1978-79	20·1
1979-80	20·2
1980-81	20·4
1981-82	20·6
1982-83	20·8
1983-84	21·0
1984-85	21·2
1985-86	21·5
1986-87	21·7

Oil Exploration

46. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the current level of oil exploration on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Peter Morrison: At the end of November, the total number of offshore exploration and appraisal wells commenced this year was 113.

Fast Reactor Programme

47. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to discuss the future of the European collaboration programme on fast reactor technology.

Mr. Parkinson: I have discussed fast reactor matters in various meetings with Mr. Collier since I took on my present responsibilities.

Power Station, Hinkley Point

48. Mr. Paddy Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many representations he has received opposing the Central Electricity Generating Board's proposals for a pressurised water reactor at Hinkley Point.

Mr. Parkinson: To date my Department has received more than 950 representations following publicity which I required the board to give to its application. In addition, I understand the local planning authorities have received representations direct.

Nuclear Power Industry

51. Mr. Sackville: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to safeguard the future of the nuclear power industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Nuclear power makes a vital contribution to diversity in electricity generation and the Government are committed to ensuring that diversity is maintained when the electricity supply industry is privatised.

British Gas

53. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he will next meet the chairman of British Gas: and what subjects he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Parkinson: I have no current plans to meet the chairman of British Gas. When I do, I will discuss a wide range of issues related to the gas industry.

Plutonium

55. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy who is specified as the owner of the eventual separated plutonium, in contracts for the reprocessing of nuclear wastes from foreign countries at Sellafield.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Contracts for the reprocessing at Sellafield of foreign irradiated nuclear fuel normally provide that the plutonium and uranium products separated by reprocessing shall remain the property of the owner of such fuel. The separated plutonium is returned to its country of origin or to any other destination only on receipt of assurances covering peaceful use, application safeguards, physical protection and controls on retransfer.

Economy Tariffs

56. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what statistics he has on the uptake of economy tariffs offered by area electricity boards.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Electricity Council estimates that just over 2 million domestic customers in England and Wales are on Economy 7 and a further 1 million customers are on other types of economy tariff.

Gas Reserves

57. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give his latest estimates of gas reserves on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) on 23 November 1987, at columns 3-4.

CEGB (Ministerial Meeting)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Parkinson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling).

Coalfield Communities Campaign (Exhibition)

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the coalfield communities campaign to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am pleased to have offered my support for an exhibition relating to the activities of the coalfield communities campaign. This will take place in the Upper Waiting Hall from 14 to 18 March 1988.

Sellafield

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the cost of promoting Sellafield for visitors in 1986-87.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am asking the chairman of BNFL to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Coalfield Communities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if Her Majesty's Government will give further consideration to the recommendations of the Select Committee on Energy that a Cabinet Committee be appointed to examine the problems of coalfield communities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: The Government made clear, in their response to the Select Committee, that a number of Government programmes provide help, and that no additional useful function would be served by discussions in a committee.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Integrated Schools

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many integrated schools in Northern Ireland receive grants from his Department.

Dr. Mawhinney: Three schools, established as independent integrated schools, are now recognised by my Department as grant-aided maintained schools.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the rebuilt Lisburn road Royal Ulster Constabulary station is to be on the proposed Cadogan park site; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The Police Authority has applied for planning permission to build a new police station on the proposed Cadogan park site and the Department of the Environment has decided to hold a public inquiry under article 22 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1972 into the application. The matter has been referred to the Planning Appeals Commission and it is due to be heard early in 1988.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to make the milk quotas allocated to dairy farmers in Northern Ireland available for public inspection.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: No. Under the United Kingdom quota regulations, access to a quota register entry in relation to a holding is restricted to the owner or a person with an interest in that holding.

Artifical Insemination

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officials are employed in artificial insemination centres in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The total staff complement for the centres is 111, although numbers actually engaged on the work vary from time to time according to season.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what agency he intends to replace artificial insemination centres.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The Department will be inviting formal declarations of interest in undertaking this work from the private sector. It is not possible to say which bodies will respond.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many artificial insemination centres are organised by the Department of Agriculture in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The Department provides the artificial insemination service in Northern Ireland through one main centre and 10 sub-centres.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost to his Department of each of the artificial insemination centres in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: The specific cost of running each artificial insemination sub-centre is not readily available. The total cost of providing the artificial insemination service was almost £2·1 million in 1986-87.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will keep the cost of artificial insemination replacement services at the present level.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 10 December 1987]: It is not possible to guarantee that the cost of the artificial insemination services will remain unchanged for the future, or that present levels of subsidy to the services will continue indefinitely.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets were fired in Northern Ireland in the second half of 1986; in what circumstances; in what location the bullets were fired; and how many persons were injured as a result of the use of plastic bullets.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 11 December 1987]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply he received from my hon. Friend the former Minister of State for Northern Ireland on 18 February at column 735.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Science and Technology Graduates

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response has been received to his Department's advertisements for science and technology graduates to work at GCHQ, ref. S(B)941.

Mr. Mellor: An encouraging response has been received to this advertisement, which is aimed at filling a number of posts next year.

France (Iranian Dissidents)

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the French Government with regard to the expulsion from France of Iranian dissidents;

(2) whether he will seek assurances from the French Government that none of the Iranian dissidents to be expelled from France will be returned to Iran against their wishes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: No. The UNHCR, as the protection power in this case, has been playing the leading role and has been in touch with the French authorities. We have fully co-operated with the UNHCR over the return to this country of one of the Iranians who has refugee status here.

Illegal Arms Shipments (Ireland)

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, with regard to the capture of arms in the 'Eksund', what information Her Majesty's Government have received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland about the several previous illegal shipment of arms, announced by the Irish Minister of Justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are naturally in close touch with the Irish authorities. We have a full exchange of views and information, but cannot go into detail about these confidential contacts.

We welcome the recent statement made by the Irish Justice Minister reporting in the search so far and indicating that they will continue to take vigorous action in their hunt for illegal arms.

Iran-Iraq Conflict

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will propose to the United Nations Security Council that a further resolution on the Iran-Iraq conflict be considered which specifies the origin of the current conflict; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Security Council resolution 598 includes a call for the establishment of an impartial body to inquire into responsibility for the conflict. This is one of the elements of the resolution currently under discussion. It would not be wise to pre-empt the outcome of that discussion.

EC (British Civil Servants)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the EEC Commission has sought the permission of Her Majesty's Government to the participation of British civil servants seconded to the Commission in the courses at Time Manager International, Henley-on-Thames, designed to improve morale and public presentation; and if the cost has been provided for in the Community budget.

Mrs. Chalker: I understand that this training programme, which is entirely the responsibility of the Commission, is part of a reinforced training programme for staff, irrespective of nationality. The costs will be provided from the Commission's training budget.

Mrs. Sturt, Thornton Heath

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to be in a position to reply to the letter of 23 November from the hon. Member for Croydon, North-West on the subject of Mrs. Sturt, of 33 Langdale road, Thornton Heath, Surrey.

Mr. Eggar: The deputy high commission in Madras has been asked to provide a full report on this case. I shall reply to my hon. Friend's letter as soon as possible.

Molesworth and Greenham Common

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to the statement by the hon. and learned Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor), the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, of 10 December, Official Report, column 605, if he will give further details about the numbers of missiles to be removed from Molesworth and Greenham Common.

Mr. Mellor: As I said in my statement of 10 December, there are 96 operational missiles at Greenham Common and 16 operational missiles at Molesworth. In order to maintain these numbers operational at all times, it is normal military practice to keep a small number of items of spare equipment available. This spare equipment varies over time, but currently includes five spare missile bodies at Greenham Common and two spare missile bodies at Molesworth. Both the operational missiles and the spare missile bodies will be removed.

INF Treaty

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to the statement by the hon. and learned Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor), the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, of 10 December, Official Report, column 630, if he will list the documents relating to the intermediate nuclear forces treaty that are to be deposited in the Library.

Mr. Mellor: As I indicated in my statement to the House on 10 December, the INF treaty has already been deposited in the Library. The basing country agreement, signed on 11 December, will be deposited in the Library this week, and the exchange of notes between the United Kingdom and Soviet Union as soon as the exchange has been completed. Moreover, subsequent to my statement, the United States Government have published the memorandum of understanding on data. This will, therefore, be deposited in the Library as soon as a clean copy is available.

ENVIRONMENT

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the savings to Her Majesty's Government from changing the present practice of removing tyres from ministerial cars at 2 mm tread depth to one of allowing tyres to wear down to the 1mm plus unit of tread level specified in current construction and use regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: It is departmental policy to ensure that ministerial cars comply in all respects with current construction and use regulations.

Tyres are checked regularly by the drivers to ensure that there is a minimum of 1 mm over three quarters of the width, and there is a similar check when the vehicles are serviced. A decision on whether to replace or not is taken based on the tyres' overall condition.

Housing and Planning Act 1986

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names and addresses of those organisations which have been given grants under section 11 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986, detailing the terms of reference of the grants and the geographical area each organisation is expected to cover.

Mr. Waldegrave: Section 11 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986 does not contain a power to make grants.

Easington

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will pay an official visit to the Easington constituency to meet representatives from the Durham county council, Easington district council and the parish councils within the constituency.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to make such a visit.

Maen Valley Park, Falmouth

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what grounds he has decided to call in the planning application for Maen valley park, Falmouth, Cornwall; and at whose request this was done.

Mr. Waldegrave: The grounds for calling in the planning application at Maen valley park, Falmouth, Cornwall, which lies within an area of outstanding natural beauty, were set out in my Department's letter of 7 December to Kerrier district council. The proposals appear to have implications for national policies relating to the conservation of the natural beauty of such areas.

The application was brought to the Department's attention by the Council for the Protection of Rural England and by a local resident.

Housing Records

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has begun consultations with a view to making regulations on access to housing records under the Access to Personal Files Act 1987.

Mr. Waldegrave: I hope to publish draft regulations for consultation in the spring of next year.

House of Commons (Members' Tea Room)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the improvements carried out in the Members' Tea Room to the dispensing and display counter and ventilation system; who were the contractors; whether the tender price was adhered to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The new servery was designed to improve the service to right hon. and hon. Members and the working conditions for staff of the Refreshment Department. A comprehensive range of equipment has been installed for the storage, preparation, display and dispensing of food and drink, and for storing and dispensing crockery.

The purpose of the new supply and extract ventilation system is to overcome long-standing complaints about stagnant air and high room temperatures.

The main contractor for the refurbishment scheme was Messrs. Haymills (Contractors) Ltd. The work was carried out in accordance with the terms of its tender.

Footpaths and Rights of Way

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to issue guidelines or increase funding to local authorities in order to establish definitive maps of footpaths and rights of way in their areas.

Mr. Moynihan: No. The Department's circular 1/83 on public rights of way already provides comprehensive guidance on these procedures. The allocation of resources for this work is for individual surveying authorities to decide in the light of the relevant circumstances within their area.

Water Authorities

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the total revenue raised in the current financial year by each water authority; and if he will express this as a per capita sum for each adult over 18 years in the area of each authority.

Mr. Moynihan: The total revenue raised by each water authority in its budget for 1987-88 is set out in the table. These comprise all sources of income taken into revenue account, including grants and other non-charge income and land drainage precepts.

	£ million
North West	423
Northumbrian	119
Severn Trent	455
Yorkshire	286
Anglian	347
Thames	574
Southern	199
Wessex	123
South West	98

Information on the number of adults over 18 years in each water authority area is not held centrally, primarily because water authority areas do not coincide with local authority areas.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sources and amounts of income and the total expenditure of each water authority in England and Wales in 1986.

Mr. Moynihan: The income and expenditure of the water authorities in England and Wales was set out in their annual reports and accounts for 1986-87 which were laid before Parliament on 15 July 1987. Copies are available in the Library. This information is summarised in "Water Facts" published annually by the Water Authorities Association. I will place a copy of the edition covering 1986-87 in the Library as soon as it is available.

Women (Domestic Violence)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet in a position to say what arrangements will be made on behalf of women who have been rehoused following incidents of domestic violence to enable them to keep their addresses secret or off the public poll tax register.

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 2 December, at columns 618-19.

Community charges registration officers will be required to omit from the published version of the register the name of any individual who satisfies them that he or she may suffer physical injury if his or her name is listed.

Women's Aid Refuges

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, column 200, regarding exemptions from the poll tax for certain hostels providing accommodation and care, whether Women's Aid refuges will be included in the exemption category; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The exemption for residents of caring institutions will not apply to women's refuges. Refuges are not analogous to the hostels which provide a substantial degree of care, and whose residents will be exempt. Help will be available to women on low income in refuges, through the community charge rebate system and the uprating of benefit.

Water Rates

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority area the water rate.

Mr. Moynihan: The information requested is not held centrally. Information on the average household bill for each water authority in England was given by my right hon. Friend in a reply to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 29 June 1987, at column 46.

Local Authority Dwellings (Unlawful Occupation)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, column 192, what figures he has for the number of local authority dwellings that were unlawfully occupied in each London borough for each of the years 1985-86 and 1986-87;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, column 192, what figures he has for the number of local authority dwellings that were unlawfully occupied in each of the London boroughs not referred to in his answer.

Mrs. Roe: The numbers of council-owned dwellings in unlicensed occupation were reported, for the first time, by local authorities in their 1987 housing investment programme returns; figures for London boroughs at 1 April 1987 appear on page 7.7 (col. A99) of the "HIP 1 (1987) All items print". A copy has recently been placed in the Library.

Homelessness

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the total number of dwellings let to new secure tenants (a) by metropolitan authorities outside London, (b) by English non-metropolitan authorities and (c) by all English local authorities (i) between 1 April 1981 and 31 March 1982, (ii) between 1 April 1982 and 31 March 1983, (iii) between 1 April 1983 and 31 March 1984, (iv) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985, (v) between 1 April 1985 and 31 March 1986, and (vi) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987;

(2) what was (a) the total number of households and (b) the total number of homeless households taking up nominations (i) by metropolitan authorities outside London, (ii) by English non-metropolitan authorities and (iii) by all English local authorities to secure housing association or new town tenancies (1) between 1 April 1981 and 31 March 1982, (2) between 1 April 1982 and 31 March 1983, (3) between 1 April 1983 and 31 March 1984, (4) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985, (5) between 1 April 1985 and 31 March 1986 and (6) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987;

(3) what was (a) the total number of homeless households and (b) the number of homeless households in priority need accepted (i) by metropolitan authorities outside London, (ii) by English non-metropolitan authorities and (iii) by all English local authorities (1) between 1 April 1981 and 31 March 1982, (2) between 1 April 1982 and 31 March 1983, (3) between 1 April 1983 and 31 March 1984, (4) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985, (5) between 1 April 1985 and 31 March 1986 and (6) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987;

(4) what was the total number of dwellings let (a) by metropolitan authorities outside London, (b) by English non-metropolitan authorities and (c) by all English local authorities (i) under secure tenancies and (ii) under non-secure tenancies to new tenants who were homeless households (1) between 1 April 1981 and 31 March 1982, (2) between 1 April 1982 and 31 March 1983, (3) between 1 April 1983 and 31 March 1984, (4) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985, (5) between 1 April 1985 and 31 March 1986 and (6) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987;

(5) what was the total number of dwellings let through the national mobility scheme, and, for London, other mobility schemes (a) to homeless households and (b) to other households (i) by metropolitan authorities outside London, (ii) by non-metropolitan authorities in the south-east, (iii) by English non-metropolitan authorities and (iv) by all English local authorities (1) between 1 April 1981 and 31 March 1982, (2) between 1 April 1982 and 31 March 1983, (3) between 1 April 1983 and 31 March 1984, (4) between 1 April 1984 and 31 March 1985, (5) between 1 April 1985 and 31 March 1986 and (6) between 1 April 1986 and 31 March 1987.

Mrs. Roe: Following are estimates derived from local authorities' annual housing investment programme returns:

Radioactive Waste (Disposal)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when, pursuant to his answer of 19 November to the hon. Member for Burnley, he expects to write to the hon. Member on land fill sites used for radioactive waste disposal.

Mr. Moynihan: I have now written to the hon. Member.

Council Property Sales

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by each English local authority the number of (a) applications received from tenants to buy their council property, and (b) sales to tenants under the provisions of the Housing Act 1980; and what percentage each of these figures are of the local authority stock in April 1981.

Mrs. Roe: Information on right to buy sales up to June 1987, as reported by each authority, appears in the "progress on council house sales" table placed in the Library on 11 December, in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Stamford and Spalding (Mr. Davies), at column 275.

The cumulative numbers of applications received by all of the English authorities could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times since 1979 Her Majesty's Government have approved proposals to opencast sites under the Opencast Coal Act 1958 or the Town and Country Planning Act 1971.

Mr. Trippier: Between 1 January 1979 and 8 December 1987, 78 authorisations were issued in respect of British Coal Corporation — formerly National Coal Board — opencast sites in England. Requests for information in respect of sites in Scotland and Wales should be addressed to the respective Secretaries of State for those countries.

Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times since 1979 Her Majesty's Government have approved proposals to opencast sites under the Opencast Coal Act 1958 or the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 when the inspector has recommended that those proposals be dismissed.

Mr. Trippier: Information is available only for the period commencing March 1984 when the then National Coal Board Opencast Executive was brought into the planning system. Since that date an inspector's recommendation of dismissal has been overturned once.

LDDC (Mr. John Mills)

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what grounds, and on the basis of what material and information, he reached his decision to dismiss Mr. John Mills as deputy chairman of the London Docklands development corporation; whether the grounds for the decision were communicated to Mr. Mills; and if he had an opportunity to comment on those grounds.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of state removed Mr. Mills from office under the powers of paragraph 6(d) of schedule 26 of the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980 because he was satisfied that he was unsuitable to continue as a member of the board of the LDDC.

The only material and information taken into account were statements made by Mr. Mills before his appointment; the information he then disclosed; and the information he has provided to the chairman of the LDDC and the Department of the Environment following a recent interview for television in which the chairman was asked if he knew of Mr. Mills' involvement in two liquidations and of his convictions under consumer protection legislation.

On the afternoon of 30 November, and before he was dismissed by the Secretary of State, Mr. Mills was seen at the Department of the Environment. He was told at the meeting that questions of his candour and judgment arose and given an opportunity to enlarge on the material he had provided; to offer explanations; and to say what he wished about past events and his future as deputy chairman.

WALES

Welsh Language

62. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what specific steps have been taken by his Department following the consultation on a possible new Welsh Language Bill; what has been the outcome of any further discussions undertaken by his Department on this matter; what further steps he intends to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Delyn (Mr. Raffan) on 10 December at column 215.

School Examinations

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of children taking (a) CSE exams, (b) O-level exams and (c) A-level exams in each local education authority in Wales as a percentage of the total number in the relevant age group in each authority for the latest available year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The estimated percentages of all candidates from maintained schools attempting examinations in summer 1986 are as follows:

	Candidates attempting[1]
	CSE	O level	A level
Clwyd	74·2	81·0	17·8
Dyfed	63·0	78·8	16·8
Gwent	71·4	83·5	11·9
Gwynedd	72·4	78·2	15·2

	Candidates attempting[1]
	CSE	O level	A level
Mid Glamorgan	74·7	79·5	14·6
Powys	72·3	81·3	15·2
South Glamorgan	65·4	80·5	17·5
West Glamorgan	76·5	81·3	14·2

[1] A candidate attempting more than one type of examination is counted under each type.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by each Welsh local education authority the total number of children achieving (a) CSE grades 2 to 5, (b) O-level grades A to C and CSE grade 1 and (c) A-level grades A to E as a percentage of the total number of pupils in the relevant year group in each local education authority, for the latest available year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information which relates to school leavers from maintained schools in 1985-86 is as follows:

	Total number of leavers	Percentage of candidates achieving[1] Lower grades[2]	Higher grades[3]	A level pass
Clwyd	6,005	39·1	39·1	15·1
Dyfed	4,955	24·4	40·0	19·2
Gwent	6,650	36·1	36·8	11·8
Gwynedd	3,500	32·6	32·2	18·5
Mid Glamorgan	8,325	27·0	31·5	15·0
Powys	1,615	28·5	43·7	16·7
South Glamorgan	5,640	28·5	33·8	18·6
West Glamorgan	5,435	31·5	41·8	14·2

[1] Leavers are counted only once in the analysis according to the highest qualification attained.
[2] O-level grades D, E, CSE grades 2-5.
[3] O-level grades A to C, CSE grade 1.

Wales Railway Centre

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress with the development of the Wales Railway Centre.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Cardiff Bay development corporation has recently approved a grant to the Wales Railway Centre for the erection of perimeter fencing and other environmental improvements at the Bute street site. The locomotives will shortly be transported to the centre to undergo refurbishment under an MSC community programme project. I understand that the railway centre has approached the Welsh Development Agency, South Glamorgan county council and the Development Corporation for future grant aid.

DEWIS

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will grant a third year of funding to DEWIS, the Clwyd alternative to care and custody, from March 1988, in the light of the proposed redundancies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am in touch with the Clwyd council about the future of this project and expect to reach a decision about its funding shortly.

Connah's Quay (School Closure)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Connah's Quay Golftyn infants school to meet members of staff, the parent governors, the parents and local councillors to discuss the proposed closure of the school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No proposals for the closure of Golftyn infants school have been published. My right hon. Friend would not wish to prejudice his decision in the event of any such proposals coming before him.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Connah's Quay high school to meet staff members, parent-teachers association leaders and local councillors to discuss the proposal of Clwyd Education Authority for a change of character or closure of this school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I am aware that Clwyd local education authority is considering its secondary school provision but no proposals for either the closure or change in character of Connah's Quay high school have been published. My right hon. Friend would not wish to prejudice his decision in the event of any such proposals coming before him.

Schools (Capitation Allowance)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will list by local authority the school where the capitation allowance is exceeded by parental donation.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Heartbeat Wales

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to which food retailers have associated themselves in the Health Education Council's Heartbeat Wales campaign.

Mr. Ian Grist: Heartbeat Wales has contacts with all the key sectors and so far has jointly planned or supported health promotion schemes with the Welsh Meat and Livestock Commission, Tesco and Unigate.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Servants (Statistics)

93. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate for the last five years, the number of civil servants (a) recruited, (b) leaving the service and (c) transferred between Departments.

Mr. Brooke: For the five years 1982 to 1986 there were 198,000 entrants to the non-industrial Civil Service, mainly as recruits to junior grades. During the same period there were 229,000 leavers from the non-industrial Civil Service, from all causes.

Statistics covering entrants to and leavers from the industrial Civil Service are not available, but the overall numbers of industrial civil servants in post have declined from 132,000 as at 1 January 1983 to 93,000 as at 1 January 1987.

Statistics covering transfers of staff between Departments are not collected centrally.

Payroll Giving

94. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the value to the arts of the Government's payroll giving scheme since it was introduced.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that this information is not available.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Wells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to the enhanced structural adjustment facility of the International Monetary Fund.

Mr. Lawson: At the annual meeting of Commonwealth Finance Ministers in September, I announced that the United Kingdom would make a contribution to the interest subsidy associated with the proposed enhanced structural adjustment facility (ESAF) of the International Monetary Fund, which is designed to support structural adjustment programmes in low-income countries. Since then I have reviewed the United Kingdom's contribution to the enlarged SAF, decisions on which should be completed by the end of this month. The United Kingdom executive director to the IMF has now been authorised to increase Her Majesty's Government's earlier offer to an interest subisidy sufficient, at present interest and exchange rates, to subsidise lending rising to 1 billion SDRs (the equivalent of £750 million). This is more than double our earlier offer.

The facility will complement the United Kingdom's own initiative for measures to relieve the burdens of bilateral debt servicing of these countries, which I announced last spring in Washington and which we are continuing to press. There is increasing international recognition of the need to relieve the debt burdens of the poorest African countries, provided they are pursuing sustained programmes of economic reform.

Additional funds will be made available to the overseas aid programme to cover the costs of this increased contribution. The additional costs in 1988-89 will be charged to the reserve and will therefore not add to the total of planned public expenditure.

The prospect of this additional contribution has been warmly welcomed by the IMF managing director and is being made on the basis that appropriate contributions will be made by other major countries and that differentially favourable access will be given to those in greatest need, especially the low-income heavily-indebted countries of sub-Saharan Africa.

Employment

Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect of the recent fall of share prices on the level of employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The forecast published in the Autumn Statement took account of the fall in world stock markets. While this inevitably made the prospect more uncertain, growth of 2½ per cent. (3 per cent. for the non-oil economy) was forecast, holding out the prospect of further falls in unemployment.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make an estimate of the number of people buying homes in the United Kingdom with the benefit of mortgage tax relief over the latest period for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that about 8·4 million tax units are benefiting from mortgage interest relief in 1987-88.

Capital Gains Tax

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to the Exchequer for the last year of capital gains tax relief where compulsory purchase has been involved; and how many cases there have been.

Mr. Norman Lamont: About £3 million on the basis of receipts in 1986-87. Information is not held centrally on which to base an estimate of the number of cases involved.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Electricity Council and British Gas about the implications for their industries and consumers of the proceedings on the levying of value added tax, initiated in the European Court of Justice on 15 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The European Court of Justice is not expected to issue its judgment until some time in the new year. The judgment's detailed implications, if any, for individual industries will need to be assessed when the judgment is issued. The Government have not yet held discussions with the Electricity Council or British Gas.

Job Creation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his reply of 9 December, how many of the jobs created between 1983 (a) in manufacturing industry and (b) in the services sector were in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: Estimates of self-employment by industry are not available for Scotland. The table sets out the figures for employees in employment in manufacturing and in services, along with estimates of total employees in employment, total self-employment in Scotland, and total employment.

Employment in Scotland (thousands, mid-year)
(changes on a year earlier in brackets)

	Employees in Employment
	Manufacturing	Services	Total (Manufacturing Services and other)	Self-employment Total	Total Employment
1983	444	1,216	1,899	179	2,078
1984	434	1,231	1,901	185	2,086
	(−10)	(+15)	(+2)	(+6)	(+8)
1985	430	1,244	1,904	200	2,104
	(−4)	(+13)	(+3)	(+15)	(+18)
1986	410	1,260	1,888	205	2,093
	(−20)	(+16)	(−16)	(+5)	(−11)
Change between 1983-1986	−34	+44	−11	+26	(+15)

Some of the decrease in the figure for manufacturing will be the result of the reclassification of jobs such as industrial cleaning, catering, computer services and road haulage previously done by manufacturers' own employees and now done by subcontractors. This developing feature of our economy has the effect of exaggerating the extent of the move from manufacturing to service sector employment. Service sector and total employment in Scotland have increased since 1983.

Rating Reform

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to introduce legislation to provide that payment of community charge by farmers on behalf of employees dwelling in tied accommodation shall be tax deductible.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 7 December 1987]: We have no such plans. Under existing law, any employer who pays any tax for an employee as part of the latter's remuneration package can normally claim a deduction for tax purposes. However, an employee whose remuneration package includes the payment of any tax on his behalf would normally be taxed on the benefit.

CIVIL SERVICE

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

87. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what progress is being made in appraising the performance of civil servants.

Mr. Luce: All Departments have introduced or are introducing staff appraisal systems for all non-industrial staff. These systems assess the results achieved by staff against agreed objectives. They have been generally well received by staff and managers alike.

Ethnic Minority Recruitment

88. Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what information he has collected on the level of recruitment from ethnic minority groups into the Civil Service open structure grades and their training grades.

Mr. Luce: The Civil Service Commissioners have been monitoring the ethnic origin of applicants to all their recruitment schemes since September 1986. The progress of candidates is being analysed, including the main fast-stream recruitment. The first year's results will be published in the commissioners' 1987 annual report.

Recruitment

92. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what are the implications for his policy on training of the current level of Civil Service recruitment.

Mr. Luce: The Civil Service has much to offer new recruits with a range of induction, vocational and management training and has the ability to vary that provision to meet fluctuations in demand.

Civil Service College

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what professional qualifications can be gained by those studying at the Civil Service College.

Mr. Luce: Civil servants studying at the Civil Service college may gain the following professional qualifications: the certificate and diploma in public sector internal audit and accounting awarded by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA); the professional qualification of the Institute of Internal Auditors (IIA) which offers the designated letters MIAA; the National Computer Centre certificate in systems analysis and design; the Institute of Personnel Management's full professional qualification and certificate in personnel practice, and the certificate of the Institute of Training and Development.

The college also monitors the content, quality and results of training undertaken by civil servants in other educational establishments which leads to the parts I and II examinations of the British Computer Society.

THE ARTS

Business Sponsorship

68. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the level of business sponsorship of the arts in 1986-87; and what forecast he has made of future levels.

Mr. Luce: The Association for Business Sponsorship of the Arts estimates a figure of £25 million in 1986-87. I expect the level to continue to rise.

Funding

70. Mr. Chapman: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will explain in more detail the background to his announcement to increase arts funding for 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: My announcement of a substantial increase in arts funding for 1988-89 and the two subsequent years represented an important practical step towards the implementation of the long-term plan for the funding of the arts which I outlined in my speech in Newcastle in July. The average increase in allocations of 10 per cent. next year is intended to get this new approach off to a good start and to encourage arts insitutions to become more self-reliant in their development and growth.

79. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the Arts Council to discuss the level of funding for the arts in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I met the chairman and secretary-general of the Arts Council on several occasions before announcing the level of the council's grant-in-aid for 1988-89 on 5 November. The council will keep me advised of its plans for the distribution of the grant-in-aid.

Aldeburgh Foundation

71. Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last visited the Aldeburgh Foundation; and what was the outcome of the visit.

Mr. Luce: I visited the Aldeburgh Foundation on 4 November and was very encouraged by what I saw. The foundation has increased its audiences by over 30 per cent. over the last year, and has turned a substantial loss into a profit, in the course of four years.

West Midlands

72. Ms. Walley: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the director of Midlands Arts to discuss the level of funding for the arts in the west midlands in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I expect to meet the director when I visit the west midlands region early in 1988. It is for the Arts Council to determine the distribution of its grant-in-aid to the regions and between different art forms.

Public Lending Right

73. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he has any plans to increase the funding of the public lending right scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: As I announced in answer to a written question on 5 November, at column 848, the annual fund will be increased by £0·75 million to £3·5 million from 1988-89. This represents an increase of 27 per cent. and is the second substantial increase in three years. It will raise the fund in real terms to its highest level since the scheme was implemented.

Funding

74. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the director of Merseyside Arts to discuss the level of funding for the arts on Merseyside in 1988-89.

78. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the chairman of Southern Arts to discuss the level of funding for the arts in southern England for 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I announced the Arts Council's level of grant-in-aid for 1988-89 on 5 November. It is for the council to determine its distribution of those moneys to individual regions.

British Library Project

75. Mr. Butler To ask the Minister for the Arts whether the cost of the British Library project is included in the recently announced 17 per cent. settlement of arts funding over the next three years.

Mr. Luce: No. The three-year settlement of arts funding excludes the costs of the British Library capital project at St. Pancras, which will continue to be reviewed annually in the usual way.

Museums and Galleries

76. Mr. Martin: To ask the Minister for the Arts what provision will be made for the building and maintenance of national museums and galleries in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: As I announced on 5 November, at columns 848-50, I intend that not less than £6 million of the increase in provision for museums and galleries in 1988-89 will be devoted to strengthening the building and maintenance programme of the national museums and galleries. This represents a rise of over 20 per cent.

I shall be announcing shortly the detailed allocation for each institution.

77. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister for the Arts which national museums and galleries have sold items from their collections over the past three years.

Mr. Luce: The majority of national museums and galleries have powers, on certain conditions, to dispose of items from their collections either by sale, exchange or gift. Whether and to what extent they do so is for the trustees and director of each institution to determine. Since 1985, the following national museums and galleries sponsored by my Department have sold items from their collections: British museum; Victoria and Albert museum; National Maritime museum; British museum (Natural History).

Photography (Funding)

80. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the chairman of the Arts Council to discuss the level of funding for photography in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I meet the chairman at regular intervals, but it is for the Arts Council to decide the level of funding of any particular art form.

Greater London Arts

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet Greater London Arts to discuss arts funding in London for 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I have no immediate plans to do so, but I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms. Walley) today.

Subsidised Art Bodies

82. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Minister for the Arts how he intends to encourage subsidised arts bodies to become more self-reliant in their development and growth.

Mr. Luce: I have included substantial sums for incentive funding in the arts budget for next year and the two succeeding years. I intend this money to be used to help arts bodies improve their financial viability, and especially their trading activities. The Arts Council is conducting consultations on its schemes for incentive funding, and parallel developments are in train with other bodies funded by my Department.

I have also substantially increased the budget for the successful business sponsorship incentive scheme, and am considering further measures to stimulate arts marketing.

London (Arts Funding)

83. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister for the Arts what will be the level of financial support for the arts in London in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: The level of financial support for the arts in London is not determined centrally. Substantial assistance will be provided to London arts organisations from the central Government's arts programme out of my office's grants-in-aid of the Arts Council, the British Film Institute, the Crafts Council, the national museums and galleries, the British Library, and other bodies. In addition, the arts in London enjoy considerable support from local authorities in London and the Greater London Arts Association. Moreover, London has a thriving and successful commercial arts sector, the main financial support of which comes from those who use its services.

Wales (Funding)

84. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the chairman of the Welsh Arts Council to discuss the level of funding for the arts in Wales in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I have no immediate plans to do so. I have announced the Arts Council's grant-in-aid for 1988-89, and the council will now determine the share for Wales.

Welsh Arts Council

85. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last met representatives of the Welsh Arts Council; and what was discussed.

Mr. Luce: I met the chairman informally recently.

Scotland (Funding)

86. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister for the Arts what will be the level of financial support for the arts in Scotland in 1988-89.

Mr. Luce: I have announced the level of the grant-in-aid to the Arts Council, and it is now for the council to determine the sum available for Scotland. I understand that an announcement is expected in the near future.

David Shepherd (Art Exhibition)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Minister for the Arts if his Department has considered an application for an art exhibition by David Shepherd to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Luce: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for an exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 11 to 15 January 1988.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Solicitors Complaints Bureau

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Attorney-General how many firms of solicitors have been reported to the Solicitors Complaints Bureau as practising uncertificated in the years 1985, 1986 and 1987.

The Attorney-General: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Servants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if, in the light of the guidance in paragraph 9 of the note on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers and ministerial responsibility for the release of information to the media, she will review the relationship between her press office and the media.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will amend the note of guidance on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants so as to extend to retired civil servants the same privileges on the publication of memoirs as are extended to Ministers.

The Prime Minister: No. The principles and conventions governing publications by former members of the public services are as set out in part IV of the report of the Committee of Privy Councillors on Ministerial Memoirs, Cmnd. 6386.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received about the difficulties confronting civil servants in the exercise of their duties to present Government policies and decisions, pursuant to paragraph 3 of the note of guidance on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers by the head of the Home Civil Service.

The Prime Minister: Apart from the questions from the hon. Member, I have received no such representations.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement outlining the policy of Her Majesty's Government on the financial problems facing the European Economic Community as set out at the recent Copenhagen Councils, with particular reference to the conditions required to be met before Her Majesty's Government agree to an increase in own resources.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made on Tuesday 8 December, at columns 167 to 168, on the outcome of the Copenhagen European Council.

Inner Cities

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Prime Minister which Minister has the principal responsibility for job creation in the inner cities, including the establishment of new businesses; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government's aim is to create a climate which encourages and harnesses enterprise in the inner cities and to remove barriers against private investment, jobs and prosperity. It is the responsibility of all Ministers whose policies affect inner cities to further those objectives.

British National Space Centre

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Prime Minister what funds have been made available to the British national space centre for the collaborative programme with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, announced after her visit to Moscow in March; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The British national space centre will consider funding any proposals for collaborative space science projects with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics within its existing budget. The British national space centre has supported three scientists to work with the USSR on a mission to Mars and its moon Phobos, and is currently discussing other possible collaborations in a number of fields, including X-ray astronomy, solar terrestrial physics and planetary science.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Development and the Environment (Dakar Conference)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many members of the official British delegation to the Dakar European-African conference on development and the environment will be in charge of media and public relations tasks;

(2) if he will list the members of Her Majesty's Government's delegation to the Dakar European-African conference on development and the environment in January 1988.

Mr. Eggar: The exact composition and delegation will depend on the conference papers, which have not yet been received. We would expect public relations tasks and the media to be handled by the conference organisers.

Ethiopia (Wheat)

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the largest quantity of wheat which could be delivered to a value of £1,000, to a given port in Ethiopia, if the wheat was (a) bought in the market in an EEC member state, (b) bought from EEC intervention stores or (c) bought at the cheapest price on the world market.

Mr. Eggar: On the basis of the most recent tender for United Kingdom food aid to Ethiopia, £1,000 would cover the total costs of the delivery to a port in Ethiopia of 7·3 tonnes of wheat whether purchased on the Community market or from EC intervention stocks. However, since much of the cost is borne on the EC agriculture budget, expenditure of £1,000 from the United Kingdom aid budget allows the delivery of 16 tonnes of wheat.

We have been informed by the World Food Programme that, on the basis of its cheapest recent tender on the world market, £1,000 would cover the cost of the delivery of 17·5 tonnes of wheat to its (different) specification to a port in Ethiopia.

Third World (Sugar)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking in order to aid those Third world countries which are over dependent on the production of sugar to diversify from their production towards other commodities.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development gave the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 24 November, at column 118.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pollution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply, Official Report, column 1194, 19 November, to the hon. Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie), what conclusions he has reached on the need to take action in relation to fish and shellfish quality, water quality, conditions at sea disposal sites, and the effect of contaminants in relation to the North sea.

Mr. Gummer: At the international conference on 24-25 November, North sea Ministers agreed on a range of measures to protect the North sea. These were listed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 30 November at column 416-7.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what legal proceedings have been instituted in respect of the United Kingdom's enforcement of a 75 per cent. European Community or British nationals manning level requirement on fishing vessels operating under the British flag; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the implications of the Jader agreement, of 19 May, relating to manning levels on fishing vessels.

Mr. Gummer: As from 1 January 1986 the Fisheries Ministers introduced new licensing conditions aimed at ensuring that vessels fishing against the United Kingdom's quotas have a real economic link with this country. These conditions provided

(i) that the vessel must operate from the United Kingdom, Channel Islands or Isle of Man;

(ii) that at least 75 per cent. of the crew must be British citizens, or EEC nationals (excluding Spanish and Portuguese nationals under the transitional arrangements on the free movement of workers provided for in the treaty of accession), ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom or Islands;

(iii) that the skipper and all the crew must be contributing to national insurance in the United Kingdom or Islands.

On 24 April 1986 judicial review proceedings were initiated by Agegate Ltd., a vessel-owning company incorporated in this country but with predominantly Spanish shareholders, seeking a declaration that licence conditions (ii) and (iii) were contrary to the EEC treaty. On 1 December 1986 an order of reference was made from the High Court, Queen's Bench Division, to the European Court of Justice in Luxembourg requesting a preliminary ruling under article 177 of the EEC treaty on the Community law questions involved. The European Court of Justice has yet to give its ruling on these questions.

On 22 May 1987, a further reference was made by the High Court, Queen's Bench Division, to the European Court of Justice for a preliminary ruling on certain questions raised in judicial review proceedings by Jaderow Ltd. and a number of other vessel-owning companies incorporated in this country but beneficially owned in large part by Spanish interests. The questions concerned the compatibility with Community law of licence condition (i). The judicial review proceedings which were stayed pending the preliminary ruling of the European Court of Justice, concerned our proposal to revoke the licences of a number of vessels owned by Jaderow and the other applicants which had in our view failed to comply with this condition in the six-month period January to July 1986.

The agreement to which my hon. Friend refers was signed by leading counsel on both sides of the judicial review proceedings and provided that the applicants' vessels would, thenceforth and until judgment was given, comply with condition (i), in return for an undertaking on our behalf not to take enforcement action against the applicants (or others in a similar position) for breach of this condition with respect to the period between 1 January 1986 and 30 June 1987 or to seek to enforce licence conditions (ii) and (iii) above until judgment was given in the Agegate case. This agreement formally debars us for the time being from enforcing the licence conditions on the nationality, residence and national insurance status of the crews of British fishing vessels, which would in any case have been impossible to enforce effectively pending the ruling of the European Court of Justice on their compatibility with the Community law. The agreement does however provide for compliance by the vessels concerned with the licence condition on operating from the United Kingdom.

Merchant Shipping Bill

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning part 2 of the Merchant Shipping Bill since its publication.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of expressions of support for the proposed legislation, from hon. Members and others. The Secretary of State for Transport is of course responsible for the Merchant Shipping Bill as a whole.

Farms

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of farms in the United Kingdom which are in the size range of (a) under 100 acres, (b) between 100 and 199 acres, (c) between 200 and 299 acres, (d) between 300 and 399 acres, (d) between 400 and 499 acres, (f) between 500 and 599 acres, (g) between 600 and 699 acres, (h) between 700 and 799 acres, (j) between 800 and 899 acres, (k) between 900 and 999 acres and (l) over 1,000 acres.

Mr. Gummer: The distribution by size of the main agricultural holdings in the United Kingdom at June 1986 is given in the table. This is based on the size groups which are closest to those requested and for which data are readily available.

Total area hectares (ha)	Number of holdings
Under 40 ha (99 acres)	161,947
40 and under 50 ha (124 acres)	16,089
50 and under 100 ha (247 acres)	42,187
100 and under 200 ha (494 acres)	24,756
200 and under 300 ha (741 acres)	7,090
300 ha (741 acres) and over	7,729
Total main holdings	259,798

Notes: Excludes minor holdings.
Total area on each holding includes crops and grass, sole right rough grazing, woodland and other land.

Forestry Management

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food from which budgets he envisages the grants for forestry management and diversification outlined in his set-aside proposals for an extensification scheme coming; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Provision has been made in the latest public expenditure survey for the cost of payments to farmers under the extensification scheme for setting aside land from cereals and putting it to fallow, woodland or non-agricultural use. 25 per cent. of United Kingdom expenditure under the scheme will be eligible for reimbursement from the Community's European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund.

EC Surplus

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the need for a more systematic distribution of EEC surplus food that could be organised by charities; and what has been his response.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 11 December 1987]: I have received a number of representations about this in recent weeks. I am continuing close consultations with the main charitable organisations and have explained to those concerned that the Government are still considering the implications of the European Community free food scheme.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that a further free distribution of surplus EEC food is made available to needy families during the winter period.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 11 December 1987]: The Council of Ministers has now adopted a permanent scheme for distribution of free food from intervention stocks. The Government are considering the implications of this in close consultation with the main charitable organisations.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek powers to prohibit the dumping of sewage sludge in Channel waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 7 December 1987]: No. This Ministry has all the necessary powers and uses them in order, among other things, to ensure protection of the marine environment, the living resources which it supports and human health, and to prevent interference with legitimate uses of the sea.

SCOTLAND

Doctors' Lists

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many doctors' practice lists are (a) under 1,000, (b) under 1,200 and (c) under 1,500 in size.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At 1 October 1986, the latest date for which this information is available, there were (a) 779 doctors with a list size of less than 1,000, (b) 982 doctors with a list size of less than 1,200 and (c) 1,316 doctors with a list size of less than 1,500.

Rating Reform

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the application of the community charge to members of monastic communities; and if it is his intention to propose any amendments to the law in relation to such people.

Mr. Lang: The position of members of religious orders under the community charge proposals is still under consideration.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he now intends to make in respect of student nurses under the poll tax legislation.

Mr. Lang: Student nurses, like other adults, will be liable for the personal community charge and eligible for community charge rebates in appropriate circumstances.

Local Authorities (Rates)

Sir John Biggs-Davison: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of Scottish local authorities are not liable to pay rates.

Mr. Lang: Information on the personal financial or other domestic circumstances of councillors is not held centrally.

Industrial Assistance

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table similar to that on page 34 of the "Scottish Economic Bulletin No. 35" showing expenditure on regional preferential assistance to industry in Scotland for each year since 1976-77 at (a) cash and (b) constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Lang: Gross expenditure on regional preferential assistance in Scotland for each year since 1976-77 at cash and constant 1986-87 prices is given in the table.

Notes:

1. From 1982-83, expenditure outside Assisted Areas, on land and factory building under the Scottish Development Agency Act has been excluded.
2. The Scottish Tourist Board took over responsibility for loans to small tourist enterprises in August 1982. Loans are now available in non-assisted areas also and the scheme is therefore no longer regarded as part of Regional Preferential Assistance (RPA).
3. RSA is provided under the Industrial Development Act 1982 and its predecessors.
4. HIDB loans and equity are classed as non-preferential as these are deemed to be similar to non-preferential assistance outside the HIDB area.
5. HIDB expenditure on land and factory building prior to 1977-78 is not separately identifiable.
6. Assistance under the Development of Tourism Act 1969, Section 4 was extended to non-assisted areas in August 1982 and is therefore no longer regarded as part of RPA.
7. Small Firms Employment Subsidy was ended in March 1980.
8. The 1979-80 total for Small Firms Employment Subsidy excludes estimated non-regionally preferential payments.

Joint Planning

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is satisfied with the adequacy of the existing arrangements for joint planning between health boards and local authorities; and if he has any plans to make joint planning between health boards and local authorities a statutory requirement, as provided for in section 5 of the National Health Service (Amendment) Act 1986.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We are satisfied that the existing voluntary arrangements for joint planning as revised in April 1985 provide a suitable framework and that generally boards are making progress in preparing and implementing joint plans. My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to introduce mandatory arrangements. We are, however, closely monitoring progress on the preparation of joint plans, and health boards are aware of the need to complete outstanding plans as quickly as possible.

Long-stay Hospitals

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement with regard to his Department's policy on long-stay hospitals in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government's policy in relation to the long-stay hospitals continues to be based on the SHAPE report which gave the highest priority to long-stay services. The share of revenue expenditure allocated to these services has increased between 1981-82 and 1985-86 from 35·25 per cent. to 38·61 per cent., and it is expected that this shift will continue.

Youth Training

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of YTS participants found employment within (a) three months and (b) six months of leaving schemes based in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee and Aberdeen.

Mr. Lang: Information is not available in the form requested. Of those who left YTS in the 15-month period from April 1986 to June 1987 (the latest figures available) the proportion in employment three months after leaving the scheme was as follows:

	per cent.
Glasgow City	47
Lothian and Borders (including Edinburgh)	58
Grampian and Tayside (including Dundee and Aberdeen)	58

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report, for Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee and Aberdeen, the YTS schemes available in the fiscal year 1988-89, the number of places in each schemes and the number of weekly hours training involved in each scheme.

Mr. Lang: The Manpower Services Commission has not yet concluded contracts with managing agents for YTS places in 1988-89. Apart from work experience and on-the-job training two-year YTS trainees receive a minimum of 20 weeks off-the-job training and one-year YTS trainees receive a minimum of 13 weeks. In either case, the actual amount will vary according to the needs of individual schemes.

Job Creation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of new jobs he expects to be created in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee and Aberdeen in the financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Lang: Such estimates are not available. Overall prospects for the Scottish economy appear favourable and this can only be beneficial for employment prospects in the four cities referred to.

Council House Sales

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to bring the Scottish law in relation to the compulory sale of council houses adapted for the disabled into line with the legislation affecting England and Wales.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Private Medical Companies (Debts)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the debts owed by private medical companies to (a) the National Health Service Scotland and (b) the National Health Service Clydesdale area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about the debts owed to individual health boards is not held centrally. If the hon. Member wishes to write seeking information from the chairman of the Lanarkshire health board about the matter, I suggest it would be helpful if he could clarify what he means by the term "private medical companies".

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Hone Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total amounts paid to projects in East Lothian by the Scottish Development Agency in each year since 1979 in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms based on 1986-87 prices, showing the percentage changes in payments between years.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 23 October 1987]: As a result of changes in constituency boundaries the information is available only from 1983-84 and relates to all recognised schemes of agency financial assistance. The information is set out in the table.

Hospital Beds

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing, for each year since 1979 (i) the number of National Health Services in-patient beds in the Dundee, East constituency and (ii) the number of National Health Services staff, in terms of full-time equivalents.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 October 1987]: This information is not available centrally on a constituency basis.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Acute Beds

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by each district health authority the number of acute beds in 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mrs. Currie: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 8 December at column 138.

Mr. J. A. Smith

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects Mr. J. A. Smith of 195 New Cheveley Road, Newmarket, whose treatment has been the subject of correspondence with the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, to see an orthopaedic consultant at Newmarket hospital.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that Mr. Smith is being offered an appointment for the week commencing 14 December.

Whipps Cross Hospital

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services for what reason Whipps Cross hospital has been placed on red warning for admissions; what are the implications for services (a) now and (b) during the rest of the winter; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Waltham Forest health authority is responsible for services at Whipps Cross hospital. I am advised that it has recently had to make some restrictions on admission because of increased winter pressure, staff shortages, and a ward closed for the decant of patients for the start of phase I of the redevelopment of the hospital.

NHS (Expenditure)

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of the National Health Service in 1957 and in 1986; and what is the change in real terms, after allowing for inflation.

Mr. Newton: Total National Health Service expenditure in Great Britain in 1957-58 was approximately £720 million* and in 1986-87 was £18,920 million. This represents an increase in real terms (compared with general inflation) of 207 per cent.

* This is an estimated figure which has been adjusted to exclude certain local authority health spending which since 1969-70 has not been part of NHS provision.

Family Planning

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to update and reissue the 1974 memorandum of guidance on family planning in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: The principles underlying this memorandum remain relevant for those responsible for family planning provision. We have no plans to revise it.

Primary Health Care (Brochure)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of producing and distributing the brochure on primary health care recently issued by his Department.

Mr. Newton: Production of the brochure and delivery to distribution points cost £77,800. Personal copies were then sent to some 70,000 doctors, dentists, opticians and pharmacists in the United Kingdom. Distribution was arranged locally by family practitioner committees and health boards. Details of these and other incidental costs are not available centrally.

AIDS

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available to him on the proportion of patients attending sexually transmitted diseases clinics in the area covered by (a) the Yorkshire regional health authority and (b) the Pontefract district health authority, that have been tested, and have proved HIV positive.

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information is not available centrally. However, by 30 September 1987, a total of 218 HIV antibody positive reports had been received by the communicable diseases surveillance centre from the Yorkshire region. More detailed information of the kind requested may be available locally and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the relevant health authorities.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the current doubling time of AIDS infections amongst heterosexuals.

Mr. Newton: Far too few cases have been reported so far for an estimate to be made of the doubling time in numbers with AIDS. To the end of November 1987, only 43 cases of AIDS thought to have been transmitted through heterosexual contact had been reported in the United Kingdom. Thirty four of these are thought to have acquired the infection overseas. There is no information on the doubling time of infection in heterosexuals at large, although the absolute level of infection in non drug misusing heterosexuals is thought to be very low indeed.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will print in the Official Report the text of advice in the light of the threat from AIDS, given by his Department to doctors and dentists exposed to large amounts of saliva in their professional work.

Mr. Newton: Guidance for surgeons, anaesthetists and dentists concerning HIV infection (AIDS Booklet 3) was sent out with a covering note (CMO(86)7) in April 1986. This states:

> Salivary route. HTLV III has been isolated from saliva, although it has not been implicated in the transmission of infection for example following kissing. Nevertheless, in view of the theoretical possibility of transmission and because saliva may be contaminated with blood particularly during dental and other surgical procedures within the mouth, for practical purposes the transmission of HTLV III must be considered a possibility by those exposed to large amounts of saliva during their professional work.

Specific advice reads:

Protective clothing, including gowns and gloves must be worn by those dental personnel directly involved in dental procedures and in view of the aerosols containing blood and saliva that may be generated by low and high speed dental drills, ultrasonic scalers and irrigation/air syringes, the wearing of protective eyewear and masks is essential. High volume evacuation systems must be used and conventional scaling techniques are recommended.

Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of reference laid down by him for each of the chairpersons of health authorities in England; and on what date a change was last made to those terms of reference.

Mr. Newton: Chairmen of health authorities are expected to provide leadership to members and staff so that the highest standards of service are provided to patients within available resources and responsive to local needs as interpreted in the context of national and regional policies.

Health Bodies (Payments)

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the basis of reimbursement of incurred expenses, or the payment of fees or salaries to (a) chairpersons and (b) vice-chairpersons, of regional and district health authorities and (c) chairpersons of family practitioner committees, in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Chairmen of regional and district health authorities in England are entitled to receive remuneration of £11,259 per annum. From 1 April 1988 remuneration of £5,000 per annum will be available to chairmen of family practitioner committees. Vice-chairmen are not paid but along with chairmen and other members can claim travel and subsistence allowance in accordance with the National Health Service and English and Welsh National Boards for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (Travelling Allowances, Etc) Determination 1983 at current rates. Hospitality allowances of £1,250 and £1,000 per annum are available to chairmen of regional and district health authorities, respectively. Chairmen of family practitioner committees have an available hospitality allowance of £125 per annum.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the change in the number of beds in (a) Yorkshire regional health authority and (b) the Pontefract district health authority for each year since 1982, including whatever data are available for 1987.

Mrs. Currie: The available information is given in the table. The number of in-patient cases treated by Yorkshire regional health authority has increased by 15·7 per cent. from 454,013 in 1982 to 525,296 in 1986. The numbers of such cases treated by Pontefract district health authority has also increased by 14·1 per cent. over the same period from 19,945 to 22,765.

[1] Figures are independently rounded to the nearest one hundred (110) whole time equivalents and include qualified and unqualified staff and learners.

[2] Includes agency staff.

[3] Not adjusted for the reduction in nurses' contractual working hours (from 40 to 37·5 per week) during 1980-81.

[4] Actual figures for England are not available prior to 1984. Figures are therefore assumed to be 95 per cent. of those for England and Wales.

[5] Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Information about nurses leaving the National Health Service is not available centrally. However, the most commonly accepted estimate for qualified nursing and midwifery staff is 10 per cent. a year. This means that in the year ending 30 September 1986 some 23,500 left the service, but this includes retirements and those leaving to have a family.

Radiotherapy Departments

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department has now completed its review of the policy relating to the centralising of radiotherapy departments within regional health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The Department's review of its guidance to health authorities on the organisation of radiotherapy services is nearing completion.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the purchasing power of the basic state retirement pension in 1970, 1985 and at present, expressed in 1987 money.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the DHSS "Abstract Statistics for Index of Retail Prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions," a copy of which is in the Library.

Social Services Records (Access)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has begun consultations with a view to making regulations on access to social services records under the Access to Personal Files Act 1987.

Mr. Newton: We are preparing proposals for the regulations on social services records in England and Wales and intend to consult early in the new year.

Heart Bypass Operations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have died while waiting for coronary artery bypass operations in each regional health authority area for each year since 1979.

Mr. Newton: Such information as may be available is not collected centrally.

Elderly Persons

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will increase resources to local social service departments to meet the cost of providing care for those elderly persons who can no longer benefit from medical care but who require constant attention either in nursing homes or in the community itself; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The level of expenditure on social services is for each local authority to decide in the light of its assessment of local needs, its other responsibilities and the overall level of resources available. Local authorities have no power to provide nursing home care. The provision made by the Government for expenditure on personal social services in 1987-88 includes, in addition to allowances for inflation and demography, an extra 1 per cent. (worth £27 million) to boost developments in community care. Sir Roy Griffiths has been asked to review the way in which public funds are used to support community care policy.

Operating Theatres (Report)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received following publication of the National Audit Office report, HC143, on the use of operating theatres in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Currie: No representations have been received on this report.

School Phobia

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many cases of school phobia were diagnosed in 1986-87; what is his Department's policy towards the treatment of school phobia; if he has any plans to renew that policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: These figures are not collected centrally. If a child is diagnosed as having a school phobia a child psychiatrist or psychologist would be consulted. Any health services provided would then rest on the clinical judgment of the consultant concerned.

Single Payments

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments and at what cost were made by his Department's offices situated in (a) Liverpool, (b) Knowsley, (c) Sefton, (d) St. Helens, (e) Wirral, (f) Clwyd and (g) Gwynedd during 1986.

Mr. Portillo: The numbers of single payments made during the financial years April 1985 to April 1986 and April 1986 to April 1987 in the Department's local offices will be placed in the Library as soon as possible. The total amounts of those payments for each financial year have been placed in the Library.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what amount was paid out in single payments through his Department's offices covering Peckham in 1985-86.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 30 November at column 465. Further information about single payments for each of the Department's offices has now been placed in the Library.

Nursery Nurses

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has had regarding the financial situation of nursery nurses; and what steps he is taking to improve their position.

Mr. Newton: None. The pay of nursery nurses is determined on the advice of the independent Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives and Health Visitors.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of courses of treatment from general dental practitioners during the last 10 years; what were (a) the numbers of courses each year, (b) the average numbers of courses each year per dentist, (c) the numbers of courses in respect of examinations only, (d) the average numbers of courses of examination only, per dentist, (e) the numbers of occasional courses per year and per dentist and (f) the numbers of uncompleted courses per year and the average per dentist.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the table. Information is not available on the number of uncompleted courses of treatment.

England

Note: From 1986 data are collected on a financial year basis.

North Tyneside (Population)

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will request the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to conduct a review of its population figures for the North Tyneside borough council area for the years since 1983, in the light of discrepancies between the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' figures and those calculated by other agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Officials from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and North Tyneside borough council met last August to review the population figures. As a result of that review an adjustment has been agreed and will be incorporated into the mid-1987 population estimates for North Tyneside.

Benefit Offices (Payments)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of payments covering (i) maternity grants, (ii) death grants and (iii) cold weather by each of his Department's offices in (a) Liverpool, (b) Knowsley, (c) Sefton, (d) St. Helens, (e) Wirral, (f) Clwyd and (g) Gwynedd for 1986-87.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that information is not available about the cost of payments of maternity grants and death grants in any particular locality. Information about exceptionally cold weather claims made during the winter of 1986-87 for each local office in Great Britain, including the total amount paid, is in the Library.

Ford Estate, Birkenhead

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider opening a local office of his Department on the Ford estate, Birkenhead.

Mr. Portillo: We have no plans to open an office on the Ford estate, Birkenhead.

Claimants (Urgent Payments)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what instructions concerning advice to claimants have been issued to his Department's staff, when refusing lump sum urgent needs payments for cookers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Department's staff are instructed to advise claimants of refusal of a single payment for a cooker by the issue of a special form (Form B03D). This gives a general explanation of the reasons for refusal, explains the right of appeal to an independent tribunal and refers to the citizens' advice bureau and local law centre as sources of help and advice in appealing. It also offers a more detailed explanation of the decision if the claimant requests it.

Low Income Workers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 464, whether the data on low income workers given in the column headed "Reformed System" 1988-89 take into account proposed changes in housing benefit and the proposed 20 per cent. rate contribution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The estimates take account of all of the main features of the social security reforms to be introduced next April.

Social Fund Commissioner

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance he has given to the Social Fund Commissioner about the exercise of her functions under the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Scott: The Social Fund Commissioner is fully aware of the duties required of her under section 35 of the Social Security Act 1986, and we do not propose to give her further guidance.

Agency Nurses

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list for 1986 and 1987 each agency that has been used to supply nurses for the National Health Service;

(2) if he will give for each nursing agency the payments made by the National Health Service in each year since 1979.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate how many (a) pensioners, (b) unemployed, (c) chronically sick and disabled, (d) lone parents and (e) others will be receiving no increase in benefit in April; and how many (i) receive exactly the same cash payments in April 1988 as prior to April 1988 and (ii) suffer cash losses.

Mr. Scott: I regret that information is not available in precisely the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available information is shown in table 7A of the "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income-Related Benefits" which was published at the time of the uprating statement on 27 October and a copy of which is in the Library.

Job Training Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether non-dependants on the job training scheme will be treated as unemployed for the purposes of the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987.

Mr. Portillo: Yes, the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987 allow for the same non-dependant deduction to be applied to a non-dependant on the job training scheme as is applied to an unemployed person.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, with dates and affected DHSS offices, the meteorological stations at which average weekly temperatures have reached the trigger point for exceptionally severe weather payments during November and December; and if he will detail the steps taken to make this information public.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on which areas of the United Kingdom have so far qualified for severe weather payments during December.

Mr. Scott: One weather station, Fort William, recorded an average weekly temperature below 0 deg Celsius during the week beginning 30 November. This weather station is linked to the Department's offices at Fort William and Oban. Arrangements are in hand to publicise through the local media and local advice centres the availability of exceptionally cold weather payments in the areas covered by these local offices.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if, in the light of the current winter's experience, he will reconsider the appropriateness of the current divisional boundaries between and jurisdictional territories of the Inverness and Fort William offices of his Department respectively, in so far as the eligibility to cold weather payments for claimants living within Skye and Lochalsh district is concerned; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, in the light of the current winter's experience, he will reconsider the appropriateness of the location of the temperature monitoring stations at Kinloss as the trigger point for eligibility to cold weather payments processed through the Inverness office of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Weather stations have been linked to local office areas in consultation with the Meteorological Office, taking account of factors such as climatological conditions, the reliability of information produced and the speed with which information could be passed on to the Meteorological Office. The Kinloss and Fort William weather stations were chosen to be linked to the Department's local offices of Inverness and Fort William respectively because they were considered to be representative of the climate for the main centres of population in each of these local office areas.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in the light of the current winter's experience of the operation of the cold weather payment scheme, he will reconsider (a) the siting of temperature monitoring stations, particularly those located on or near the coast, (b) the commencement of the qualifying period of seven days from Monday running through until the following Sunday and (c) the obligation on eligible claimants to claim such payments by application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: (a) Weather stations have been linked to local office areas in consultation with the Meteorological Office, taking account of factors such as climatological conditions, the reliability of information produced and the speed with which information could be passed on to the Meteorological Office.

(b) A fixed seven-day period (Monday to Sunday) was chosen because it is easy to understand and straightforward to operate.

(c) Exceptionally cold weather payments are single payments of supplementary benefit. The normal position is that such payments have to be claimed. For this winter we plan to make it easier for claimants to get help during repeat periods of exceptionally cold weather. We intend to provide that, where a successful claim is made in respect of one period of exceptionally cold weather, that claim will remain valid in respect of subsequent periods of cold weather during the winter. The relevant regulations were laid before the House on 26 November.

We shall be reviewing the exceptionally cold weather provision next year in the light of this winter's experience.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how much low and intermediate radioactive waste is produced in National Health Service hospitals in England.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally. However, in 1986 approximately 2 cu m of low-level waste from English National Health Service hospitals was disposed of at the disposal site at Drigg. Also 0·01 cu m of intermediate level waste from Cobalt 60 sources was sent for long-term storage at Harwell from hospitals in England and Wales.

Prescriptions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many items were issued free of charge to general practitioner prescription (i) to women aged 60 years or over, (ii) to men aged 65 years or over and (iii) to men aged 60 to 65 years in receipt of supplementary pension or housing benefit supplement in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and, in each case, if he will estimate the cost to public funds.

Mrs. Currie: The number of items received in England by women aged 60 and over and men aged 65 or over in the last five years for which figures are available and the estimated total cost of these items are as follows. Separate figures for women and men are not available.

Year	Number of Items (millions)	Total Cost (£ million)
1982	112·7	454·0
1983	117·2	511·2
1984	121·0	557·2
1985	125·7	625·1
1986	129·6	683·0

Information on the number and cost of items received by men aged 60 to 65 years in receipt of supplementary benefit or housing benefit supplement is not available, but estimated figures are as follows:

	Number (millions)	Cost (£ million)
1982	1·4	5·5
1983	1·8	8·1
1984	2·1	9·8
1985	2·2	10·9
1986	2·3	12·0

General Practice Finance Corporation (New Schemes)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the value of all new schemes taken on by the General Practice Finance Corporation in each of the last five years.

Mr. Newton: The following is the information for new loans and leases in each of the last five years.

Financial Year	[1]Loans £ million	[2]Leases £ million	Total £ million
1982-83	5·0	1·6	6·6
1983-84	12·2	3·3	15·5
1984-85	19·3	4·3	23·6
1985-86	20·3	4·8	25·1
1986-87	23·5	2·5	26·0

[1] Long-term loans taken up.
[2] Lease applications approved in full.

Social Fund

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what amount he will allocate to the social fund for his Department's offices covering Peckham.

Mr. Scott: The local offices which serve the hon. Member's constituency are Camberwell area office, Kennington park integrated local office (ILO) and Peckham ILO. Information on their social fund allocations was contained in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) on 4 November at columns 774-81.

Nurses and Midwives

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of funded establishment (a) nurses and (b) midwives in each district health authority;

(2) how many vacancies for nurses and midwives there are in each (1) district health authority and (2) regional health authority; and what is the ratio of vacancies to funded establishment for nurses and midwives for each (1) district health authority and (2) regional health authority.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not collected centrally. Some information will, however, become available in the course of next year as a result of the introduction of improvements in National Health Service information systems.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services which district health authorities provide child care facilities for pre-school age children of nurses or midwives.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not held centrally.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the percentage change in the use of agency (a) nurses and (b) midwives between 1979 and the latest date to which figures are available;

(2) what is the percentage change in the use of agency (a) nurses and (b) midwives between the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Newton: There was a 21·4 per cent. increase in the use of agency nurses and a 30·4 per cent. increase in the use of agency midwives in England between September 1979 and September 1986. Between September 1985 and September 1986 the figures were 39 per cent. and 15·4 per cent., respectively.

Nurse Budgets

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much each district health authority is currently either (a) overspent or (b) underspent on its nurse budget;

(2) what is the total current underspend or overspend on nurse budgets.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of housing benefits for elderly people as a percentage of the total expenditure on housing benefits (a) in Scotland, (b) in the Strathclyde area and (c) in the Lanarkshire area, for each year since 1974.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Liaison Committee

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord Privy Seal when he will propose to the House the names of members of the Liaison Committee.

Mr. Wakeham: As soon as practicable, once the appropriate consultations are completed.

Lobbying

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Lord Privy Seal if he will introduce legislation to provide for a register of commercial lobbying organisations, with power for the House of Commons Commission to provide rules and penalties for those in breach; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: No. As the Select Committee on Members' Interests noted in its first report, Session 1984-85, such a register would pose formidable problems, not only of definition and enforcement, but also of principle, in so far as it gave registered "lobbyists" preferential access to Parliament.

DEFENCE

Maritime Operations

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the British, Dutch and West German naval staffs' joint draft of the new NATO concept of maritime operations is due to be considered by NATO Defence Ministers;

(2) if he will make a statement on the role being played by the United Kingdom in the drafting of the new NATO concept of maritime operations.

Mr. Ian Stewart: NATO's military authorities are currently carrying out a routine updating of NATO's concept of maritime operations in full consultation with member nations, including the United Kingdom.

Exercises

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on British military participation in exercise Caltrop Tyro, held in California from 15 to 18 November; and what were the troop numbers and costs involved.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Exercise Caltrop Tyro was a command post exercise (CPX) which took place in California in November to test procedures and inter-operability between units of the British, American, Canadian and Australian armies. Some 150 British service men took part, and the United States Government paid all the costs arising there.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purpose of the Anglo-American military training exercises held on Pontrilas, Herefordshire, and Blair Atholl, Tayside, in June, with particular reference to the relevance to military activities in the Gulf.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A joint exercise with United States forces took place from 20 to 29 June at a number of locations in the United Kingdom. The exercise was designed to foster the development of joint skills and techniques. The exercise was not linked to current military activities in the Gulf.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the criteria used in deciding the specific dates for exercises Eastern Shield, Capital Guard, Drakes Drum, Autumn Tiger, North Crusade, Western Encounter, Triple Crown and Strong Link; why it was decided not to hold these exercises on a single date; if observers will be present at these exercises, under the Stockholm agreement; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the major home defence exercises to be held in Britain in September-October 1988;

(3) how many personnel performing the role of Soviet Spetsnaz troops will participate in the major home defence exercises to be held in September-October 1988.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Between September and November 1988 there are to be nine district military home defence exercises in military districts in Britain. Each will be a separate exercise of at least five days duration, and under the independent command of the appropriate GOC. The timing of these exercises has been arranged to take account of the availability of regular and TA manpower in each district, and also of the need to maximise military home defence training whilst minimising disruption to other activities. The exercises are designed to test progress in military home defence planning since Exercise Brave Defender in 1985. Details of the scenarios are classified.

On current plans, the numbers involved mean that we are not required to notify or invite observers to these exercises under the terms of the Stockholm agreement.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration was given to postponing exercise Purple Warrior following indications of high levels of radiation in south-west Scotland.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 3 December 1987 at column 712.

Royal Navy (Rules of Engagement)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on changes to the Royal Navy's rules of engagement currently under consideration.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not our practice to comment on rules of engagement.

Holy Loch (Visits)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all visits on a temporary basis to Holy Loch during the last six months involving United States military personnel or equipment not normally based there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The use of Holy Loch is covered by confidential agreements between the United States and United Kingdom Governments and within those agreements such visits are a matter for the United States Government.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recommendations on the future role of battlefield nuclear weapons he is currently considering; and from what source they come.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend is not currently considering any recommendations on the future role of battlefield nuclear weapons.

Joint Air Attack Team

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in Army and Royal Air Force operational practices have resulted from consideration of the United States joint air attack team concept.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the joint air attack tactics concept developed and introduced by the United States armed forces. This has not led to any changes in the operational practices of the Army or the Royal Air Force.

Directorate of Battle Doctrine

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the work of the directorate of battle doctrine;

(2) how many personnel are currently on the staff of the directorate of battle doctrine;

(3) how many staff from the directorate of battle doctrine are currently on secondment or attachment to the air land forces application agency of headquarters United States Army Training and doctrine command/ headquarters, United States Air Force tactical air command.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The work of the former directorate of battle doctrine is now carried out by the directorate of doctrine (Army). The directorate of doctrine (Army) currently consists of 16 personnel, including clerical support. Its work encompasses the formulation of broad tactical concepts for the Army in the time frame 10 to 25 years ahead. It does not have any staff attached or seconded to the air land forces application agency of headquarters United States Army training and doctrine command or to Headquarters United States Air Force tactical air command.

National Joint Ocean Surveillance Information Centre

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the location, role, re-equipment and financing of the United Kingdom national joint ocean surveillance information centre.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The centre to which the hon. Member refers will be financed from the United Kingdom defence budget. It would not be in the national interest to provide the additional information requested.

Harrier GR5

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Harrier GR5 will be employed in the battlefield air interdiction role; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Harrier GR5 will be employed both in the battlefield air interdiction role and in providing close air support of troops.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current unit cost of the Harrier GR5.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 16 November 1987]: It is now our practice not to publish unit production costs, but I refer the hon. Member to table 3.2 of volume 2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1987" (Cm. 101-11).

RAF Molesworth

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the options being considered for future uses of RAF Molesworth following implementation of the intermediate nuclear forces treaty.

Mr. Ian Stewart: It is not our general practice to speculate on possible alternative future uses for military installations until firm decisions have been reached.

Aircraft Interceptions

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many interceptions have been made by Royal Air Force aircraft of (a) Soviet military aircraft, (b) other military aircraft and (c) civilian aircraft in the United Kingdom air defence region in each year since 1979;

(2) on how many occasions since 1979 Soviet military aircraft are known to have penetrated the United Kingdom air defence region.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Royal Air Force aircraft regularly intercept and identify various civil and military aircraft in the United Kingdom air defence region (UKADR). Records of such interceptions are kept only for Soviet military aircraft. Details of penetrations of the UKADR by these aircraft, and their interception by the RAF, are classified. On average, however, Soviet military aircraft are intercepted in the UKADR by the RAF three or four times each week. This number can be much higher during Warsaw pact exercises.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1979 Soviet military aircraft are known to have penetrated United Kingdom territorial airspace.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the two Royal Air Force Phantom squadrons assigned to Fleet Air Defence to convert to the Tornado aircraft.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Of the two squadrons of RAF Phantom aircraft previously assigned primarily to the maritime air defence role, one has already converted to Tornado F3 aircraft, and the second is expected to do so within the next two or three years.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in deployment and operational cycles will result from the replacement of Royal Air Force Phantoms by Tornados in the fleet air defence role.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

Exercise Ocean Safari

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purposes of, and lessons learned from, the deployment of Phantom aircraft to Stornoway for exercise Ocean Safari in September.

Mr. Ian Stewart: As the hon. Member will know, RAF Stornoway is designated as a NATO forward operating base for use in times of tension or war. During the recent NATO joint maritime exercise Ocean Safari, Royal Air Force Phantom aircraft deployed to Stornoway to rehearse the activation of the base and to test its facilities. The base activation plans were found to be generally sound, although a few practical deficiencies were identified. Steps are being taken to rectify these.

United States Navy Carrier-based Aircraft

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made for logistic support of United States Navy carrier-based aircraft at airfields in Scotland.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No specific provision is made for logistic support for United States navy carrier-based aircraft at airfields in Scotland in peace time. The 1973 United States/United Kingdom line of communication arrangement provides for logistic support to be supplied to United States forces to enable them to conduct operations in support of NATO in an emergency. The detailed arrangements for this support are confidential between our two Governments.

Royal Artillery Range, Hebrides

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days in each year since 1979 missile firings on the royal artillery range, Hebrides, were postponed or cancelled due to the presence of air traffic or shipping in the range area.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any instances of range closure due to air traffic. However, the range was closed for a four-day period due to a protest about EEC fishing regulations by local fishermen.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the impact of the establishment of a new recommended route for oil tankers of more than 10,000 tons gross weight to the west of the Western Isles will have on the frequency of cancellation or postponement of missile firings from the royal artillery range, Hebrides.

Mr. Freeman: The range radar and computer systems are designed to take account of vessels moving through the range area and the movement of oil tankers should not therefore affect range firings.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many days in each year since 1975 the royal artillery range, Hebrides, danger area known as D701A was active;

(2) on how many days in each year since 1975 the royal artillery range, Hebrides, danger area known as D701 was active.

Mr. Freeman: Danger areas D701 and D701A were active for an average of 79 and 22 days respectively in each year since 1977; records are not available for 1975 and 1976.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many firings have been made on the royal artillery range, Hebrides, in each year since 1975, of (a) Lance, (b) Rapier, (c) Blowpipe, (d) Sea Eagle, (e) Harpoon, (f) Sub-Harpoon, (g) Martel, (h) Sea Wolf, (i) ALARM, (j) Skyflash, (k) Javelin, (l) Sea Dart and (m) Sparrow missiles.

Mr. Freeman: This information is classified.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service personnel, (b) civilian staff from his Department and (c) contractors' personnel are currently employed at the royal artillery range, Hebrides.

Mr. Freeman: Two hundred and ninety-four service men, 196 civilians and 100 contract personnel, including personnel involved in contracted-out services, are employed on the RAF range, Hebrides.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations have been received from owners and operators of civilian vessels, in each year since 1979, concerning continued firing of missiles on the royal artillery range, Hebrides, while vessels were present in the range danger area.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any such representations. For safety reasons, firing would not take place if vessels were present in the danger area.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of the visit to the royal artillery range, Hebrides, of a United States army general in the autumn.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any such visit.

Low-flying Aircraft

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the investigation into damage caused by a low-flying United States Air Force F-111 over Benbecula on 12 September 1983.

Mr. Freeman: As a result of the incident on 12 September 1983 involving an aircraft of the United States air force over Benbecula, a total of just over £14,000 was paid out by way of compensation to local people who made claims against my Department for damage to their property. I am not aware of any outstanding claims relating to this incident.

North Uist (Radar Installation)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the type 92 radar on North Uist is expected to become operational.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The type 92 radar on North Uist is expected to become fully operational shortly and will form part of the improvements to the United Kingdom air defence ground environment.

Western Isles (Installations)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist to instal (a) satellite communications and (b) tropospheric scatter communications facilities in the Western Isles.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A tropospheric scatter system has been installed on North Uist as part of the improvements to the United Kingdom air defence ground environment, and is expected to become fully operational shortly.

Exercise JMC 87/3

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role was played by Royal Air Force Stornoway in exercise JMC 87/3.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

Exercise JMC 87/2

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role was played by RAF Stornoway in exercise JMC 87/2.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Civilian aircraft participating in joint maritime course 87/2, a Royal Navy exercise in the north-west approaches, made routine use of the civil facilities at Stornoway airport.

Western Isles (Construction Projects)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Western Isles on 24 July, Official Report, column 594, he will list all other military construction projects currently planned for the Western Isles.

Mr. Freeman: Works services other than those already recorded in column 594 of the Official Report for 24 July 1987 are as follows:

RAF Stornoway
Provision of 10,000 gall. storage tank for de-icing fluid.
Installation of Fire Alarm System and other fire precautions.
Provision of Traffic Lights on the A866.
Provision of facilities for Fire/Crash Rescue crews in ATC Tower.
Additional showers to be installed in Building 214.
Replacement of Stand—By Power Plant.
Improvement of Dining Room facilities.

RAF Benbecula
Provision of Support Accommodation at South Celettraval.
Rebuilding of Station Headquarters.
Upgrading of Electrical Power Supply.

Aird Uig
Provision of small buildings and four aerials for ship to shore and shore to ship and similar communication systems.

Additionally the Army have the following:

South Uist
Zero Length Launch facility for Falconet.
Royal Army Ordnance Corp new build of stores section.
Security Fencing for Range Control Building.
Tempest security measures for Range Control Building.
Modification of Air Conditioning for Range Control Building.
Provision of Loading Ramp at Loch Carnan.
Cable trenching.
Modernisation of practising units hangar.
New building to accommodate volumatic disintegrator.

Benbecula
Provision of control Post at airfield.

AIDS Screening

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make it his policy to introduce compulsory AIDS screening amongst members of the armed forces.

Mr. Freeman: No. The subject will, however, remain under review.

Veterinary and Equitation Establishment, Melton Mowbray

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of the Army Veterinary and Equitation Establishment at Melton Mowbray; if he will list the courses, with number and duration and the average attendance for each of the last two years at military establishments at Melton Mowbray; and if he will list the number of student weeks for equitation courses here for each of the last three years as allocated to officers and other ranks and in total.

Mr. Freeman: The annual cost of all functions (both equine and canine) of the RAVC centre, Melton Mowbray, is £2·285 million. Of this, the cost of provision of horse-related training (including farriery) is £367,000. Details of equitation and equitation-related courses held at the centre are given in the table:

Course	Number held per year	Duration weeks	Average attendance over last 2 years
Advanced Military Equitation	1	27½	12
Joint Service Unit Instructor	2	3	7½
Joint Service unit rider/competitor	2 or3	2	9
Military pack transport	As required	3	Total 18 all ranks over last 2 years
RAVC recruit stable management	As required	2	Total 52 soldiers over last 2 years
International Military Equitation Course	1	1	8

A number of student weeks for courses held for each of the last three years as allocated to officers and soldiers is given in the table:

Course	Officer weeks	Soldier weeks	Total weeks	Officer/ Soldier ratio
Advanced Military Equitation	247·5	742·5	990	1:3
Joint Service Unit Instructor	39	90	129	1:2·5
Joint Service Unit Rider/Competitor	42	108	150	1:2·5

National Radiological Protection Board (Report)

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to receive the report of the National Radiological Protection Board in regard to the incidence of cancer and leukaemia among those members of Her Majesty's forces who took part in the British nuclear test programme in the Pacific: and when that report will be published.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay) on 26 November 1987, at column 281.The work of the study has not yet been received by the Ministry of Defence.

Army Pay

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the rate of pay for each Army rank frm private soldier through to field marshal for 1 April 1957, 1967, 1977, and 1987.

Mr. Freeman: For most ranks there are many different rates that may be payable, and it is not practicable to list them all. I refer the hon. Member to the following published information.

Service Pay and Pensions. Cmnd 9692 dated February 1956. (Rates of pay were not revised in 1957).
1967
Service Pay and Pensions. Cmnd 2903 dated February 1966. (Rates of Pay were not revised in 1967.)

The rates of pay that were effective on 1 April 1967 for service medical and dental officers have not been published in a Command Paper, but are set out as follows, expressed in annual terms:

Captain	1,697 5 0
After 2 years	1,733 15 0
After 4 years	1,779 7 6

After 6 years	3,394 10 0
Brigadier	3,704 15 0

1977
Review body on Armed Forces pay Fourth Report 1975. Cmnd. 6063 dated may 1975. Supplement to Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Fourth Report 1975. Cmnd 6146 dated July 1975 (concerning medical and dental officers' pay).

Review Body on Top Salaries Sixth Report. Cmnd 5846 dated December 1974.

Basic rates of pay were not increased in 1976 or 1977 but personnel could receive supplements, depending on the level of their basic pay. The arrangements governing the payment of these supplements can be found in the following documents:

Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Fifth Report 1976. Cmnd 6470 dated May 1976.

Supplement to Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Fifth Report 1976. Cmnd 6515 dated July 1976 (concerning Medical and Dental officers' pay).

Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Sixth Report 1977. Cmnd 6801 dated April 1977.

Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Sixteenth Report 1987. Cmnd 126 dated April 1987.

Supplement to Review Body on Armed Forces Pay Sixteenth Report 1987. Cmnd 176 dated July 1987 (concerning Medical and Dental officers' pay).

The rates of pay that were effective on 1 April 1987 for officers of the rank of major general and above have not been published in a Command Paper, but are as follows, expressed in annual terms:

Major General	36,852·54
Lieutenant General	45,347·40
General	64,738·08
Field Marshall	80,688·36

Military Exercises

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce legislation to entitle civilians participating in military exercises to claim compensation in the event of injury; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Any civilian who suffers injury, or any loss or damange, as a result of military activities is entitled to claim compensation from my Department under the terms of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947. All such claims, including from those taking part in military exercises, are dealt with on their merits and on the basis of any legal liability on the part of my Department.

Exercise Torchlight

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will describe the objectives of the home defence exercise Torchlight, held in April 1986; which parts of the armed forces, Government Departments, and other organisations participated in the exercise; and if he will place a copy of the exercise scenario in the Library.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Torchlight X, which was held in April 1986, was the most recent of a series of biennial conferences on military home defence matters. The audience comprised mainly military staffs and officials from MOD; the police and officials from other Government Departments with an interest in home defence were also represented. Ministers from MOD, the Home Office and other Government Departments also attended. Details of the conference agenda and discussions are classified.

Battlefield Aircraft

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the potential benefits to the Royal Air Force of introducing into service an aeroplane conforming with the British Aerospace concept of a small agile battlefield aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: This is a private venture by British Aerospace and is at a very early stage. My Department will keep in touch with the project as it develops.

Cruise Missiles (Transportation Vehicles)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any proposals to discuss with his United States counterpart the redeployment of the vehicles used to transport cruise missiles for alternative military or civilian uses.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Disposal of launcher vehicles and all their associated equipment are matters for the parties to the treaty.

TRANSPORT

Bus Services

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received during 1986 and 1987 about the bus services in (a) the Greater Glasgow area, (b) Birmingham and (c) Greater London.

Mr. David Mitchell: Bus policy in Scotland is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. However, I understand that he received a total of 102 representations about bus services in Greater Glasgow during 1986 and 1987, 68 of which related to changes to a single school service. I received 17 representations regarding Birmingham and 440 in respect of Greater London.

British Rail (Western Region)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any proposals from British Rail for further investment in rolling stock in its western region.

Mr. David Mitchell: On 17 November my right hon. Friend announced that he had approved a proposal by British Rail to invest in up to 204 express sprinter vehicles to be operated by the board's provincial sector. I understand that 43 of these vehicles are proposed for western cross-country services. My right hon. Friend and I stand ready to approve any further worthwhile proposals which the board puts to us.

M1 (Subsidence)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals his Department has to deal with the subsidence problems at the southern end of the M1.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are just completing remedial work on the worst area of subsidence between junctions 4 and 3 on the southbound carriageway of the M1. There are a number of areas with minor subsidence which do not warrant immediate attention. We are keeping these under surveillance.

Traffic (Denton)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions rumble strips have been promised by his Department on the M57 to slow down traffic approaching the A57 in Denton; and why they have not yet been provided.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I wrote to the hon. Member in March about the M67 rumble area proposal which was associated with the signal controlled crossing point which the motorway contractors then intended to provide on the A57. They later decided not to provide that crossing.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the bridge over the M66 in Denton to be completed so that Windmill lane, Denton, can be reopened; for when it was originally promised; and if he will publish the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The remaining work at the bridge should be completed early in the new year. We had hoped that Windmill lane would reopen in October but unforeseen ground conditions led to delays in diverting statutory undertakers' apparatus.

Manchester Airport (Rail Link)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to make a decision on the section 56 application for a rail link with terminal 2 of Manchester airport.

Mr. David Mitchell: I will make a decision on this application as soon as the necessary evaluations have been completed. Greater Manchester passenger transport executive and the other parties to the application have that work in hand.

British Rail (Inter-City Routes)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to which is the most profitable inter-city route at present run by British Rail.

Mr. David Mitchell: This information is commercially confidential.

Permanent Way Staff (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will hold urgent talks with the chairman of British Rail on the safety of permanent way staff.

Mr. David Mitchell: The safety of permanent way staff has been the subject of detailed study in recent years by a special working party set up by the Health and Safety Commission's railways industry advisory committee. The working party is chaired by an inspecting officer of railways and the members include representatives of railway management, the railway trade unions, and the TUC. The committee has so far produced two interim reports and the recommendations in these reports have been, or are being, implemented. During each of the 10 years up to 1985, an average of 12·5 men were killed after being struck by trains whilst at work on the line. The figure for 1986 was four and the total for this year so far is eight, including the four men tragically killed at Methley junction. The inquiry which will be held into this accident will examine whether anything else can reasonably be done to protect those who work on or alongside the line.

Roadside Rest and Refreshment Facilities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has any plans to increase provision of roadside rest and refreshment facilities with suitable hard-standing areas necessary for heavy goods vehicle parking on non-motorway trunk routes;

(2) if he has any plans to increase provision of roadside rest and refreshment facilities on non-motorway trunk routes.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Forth) on 1 July, at column 88, about the development of new service areas on motorways and other trunk roads.

Informal discussions have already taken place with the Association of County Councils on ways of securing more services on all-purpose trunk roads where they are needed. We intend now to consult all the main local authority associations concerned and representatives of the private sector. Provision of services on all-purpose trunk roads, including services for heavy goods vehicles, is primarily for the private sector within the framework of local planning policies.

Cyclists

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to introduce legislation to require local authorities to provide cyclists with recognised parking places outside public buildings.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. Local authorities already have adequate powers to provide parking facilities for cyclists. We publish advice on this topic in local transport note 1/78 — copies of which have been placed in the Library.

London Regional Transport

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is her policy towards the extent to which London Regional Transport's subsidy from London's ratepayers should be replaced by resources from fare increases.

Mr. David Mitchell: The level and distribution of fares is a matter from LRT. To the extent that fare increases reduce the subsidy to LRT, the ratepayer benefits through a reduced levy.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport to what level the tolls would need to rise on the Severn bridge in order to secure the aggregate revenue specified under schedule 2 to the Severn Bridge Tolls Act 1965 within 40 years of the opening of the bridge.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Projections of future revenue depend on the assumptions made about the growth of traffic volume and the general level of prices in the next 20 years. On current forecasts tolls would need to rise by about 70 per cent. and be maintained in real terms to achieve the objective in the Act.

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange consultations with British Rail on strengthening rail services to take advantage of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: The British Railways Board intends to take full advantage of the opportunities which the tunnel will bring. Section 40 of the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 requires the board to publish a plan by 31 December 1989 setting out its proposals for international services between various parts of the United Kingdom and the continent. I understand that there will be widespread consultations during the preparation of this plan.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investment he proposes to make in British Rail services to take advantage of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for the British Railways Board to make proposals for investment in Channel tunnel rail services. I expect to approve any investment that can be expected to earn a proper commercial rate of return.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Single European Market

100. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what preparations his Department is making for the advent of the single European market in 1992; and whether he will establish a unit within his Department to study and report on changes in organisation and policy which may be required.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have recently announced the launching of a national campaign to ensure that British business is aware of the challenge of creating a single Community market and is able to grasp the new opportunities which this will create. The campaign is being organised by a special single market unit within the Department which is working closely with other Government Departments to identify and secure early adoption of the measures needed to remove the remaining barriers.

Petrol

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information his Department has on the price of four-star petrol at the pump on average (a) in the conurbations and (b) in the small towns and rural areas as at 11 November; what representations he has received from the Petrol Retailers Association on the level of competition in the conurbations and the incidence of petrol retail sites there owned by major oil companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Information on prices in the form requested is not collected by the Department. I understand, however, that certain price information is available in published material such as the Petroleum Times.

I have received no recent representations directly from the Petrol Retailers Association, although I understand that the association has made representations to the Director General of Fair Trading. I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and from retailers expressing support for the Petrol Retailers Association's views.

Newspaper Companies (Subsidies)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has on other EEC countries subsidies for newspaper companies for (a) postage of newspapers, (b) telecommunications, (c) telexes, (d) telegram costs and (e) telephone rental charges.

Mr. Alan Clark: No information is available.

BSC Industries

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, prior to bringing forward privatisation legislation, he will discuss with the British Steel Corporation the possibility of increasing the allocation to BSC Industries from current profits, to assist communities such as Sheffield.

Mr. Atkins: BSC (Industry) Ltd. is a subsidiary of the British Steel Corporation, but has been self-supporting since March 1984. The question of its future financial relationship with BSC is a matter for the corporation itself.

Manufacturing Industry

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures he plans to take to improve the international competitiveness of British manufacturing industry.

Mr. Atkins: Sustained improvements in competitiveness can be achieved only by industry itself. However, my Department offers a wide range of support and advice to assist in this task. That work is under review, and I hope to make an announcement to the House early in the new year.

Motor Trade Bill

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will introduce a comprehensive motor trade Bill designed to control the problem of the sale of unroadworthy cars and the altering of car mileages.

Mr. Maude: No. However, together with my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport I am meeting the Director General of Fair Trading and other interested parties to discuss this problem.

British Steel (Investment)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what are the current investment programmes at each British Steel Corporation plant; and what are the current and projected costs associated with each project;

(2) what are the total investment costs at each of the British Steel Corporation's five integrated plants during the last three years;

(3) what proposals he has received for investment to renew or expand the coke-making capacity at the British Steel Corporation Ravenscraig works.

Mr. Atkins: Capital investment by the British Steel Corporation is a matter for the board of BSC within ceilings agreed with the Government on annual expenditure and individual projects.

Strip Steel

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the current loading level for each British Steel Corporation strip mill in Britain;

(2) what occasions British Steel Corporation forecasts of demand for strip products from 1990-91 have been revised since 1985; and what are the current forecast levels.

Mr. Atkins: Those are matters for the board of the corporation.

Steel Imports

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current level of steel imports into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: For the nine months ended September 1987, United Kingdom imports of steel amounted to £1,236·3 million.

Source: Iron and Steel Statistics Bureau: United Kingdom Imports of Iron and Steel, September 1987.

Steel Plants (Closure)

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list in the Official Report, for each steel plant closed since 1967 (a) its location, (b) the date on which closure procedures were initiated and (c) the date of closure.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 14 December 1987]: This information is not readily available. I shall reply to my hon. Friend in writing as soon as possible and place a copy of the reply in the Library of the House.

British Steel Corporation

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the total amount of public money spent on the British Steel Corporation from June 1979 to date.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The total net amount of public money provided to the British Steel Corporation since June 1979 is £5,151 million, consisting of subscriptions of capital under section 18 of the Iron and Steel Acts of 1975 and 1982, and regional development grants. No public money has been provided to the corporation since December 1985.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what measures he intends to take to prevent overseas steel and iron companies from buying shares in the proposed privatisation of the British Steel Corporation;

(2) what measures he will take to prevent overseas firms and institutions from buying shares in the proposed privatisation of the British Steel Corporation.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 14 December 1987]: We shall consider whether there is a case for restricting foreign ownership, but no decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the cost to date of the current British Steel Corporation advertising campaign.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 14 December 1987]: This is a matter for the board of the corporation.

PRIME MINISTER

Hiscocks House, Brent

Q11. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to pay an official visit to Hiscocks house on the Stonebridge estate in the London borough of Brent.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Westland plc

Q19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy, before Her Majesty's Government approve any further public funds for Westland plc, to seek to establish the identity of six nominee companies, with shareholdings in the company, and with addresses in Panama, Uruguay, Spain and Australia; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Religious Education

Q28. Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received in favour of compulsory morning assembly in schools, in the form of a short religious service or prayers.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations about religious education and assembly in schools.

Australia

Q45. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next intends to seek to visit Australia.

The Prime Minister: I hope to take up the Australian Prime Minister's invitation to visit Australia during the bicentennial year.

Clifton on Dunsmore

Q123. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to make an official visit to Clifton on Dunsmore.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

EC (Food Aid Programme)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the recent report of the Court of Auditors on the EEC's food aid programme; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I wrote to the President of the European Commission on 5 October to express my grave concern over the Court of Auditors' findings. The report is now under discussion in the Council of Ministers.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she intends to submit any proposals to the emergency meeting of the European Council in February about the financial crises facing the Common Market; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made on Tuesday 8 December, at columns 167-68, on the outcome of the Copenhagen European Council.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 December.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 December.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 December.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an Audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

NATIONAL FINANCE

BP Shares

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what form he intends to advertise the Bank of England's buy-back proposals for British Petroleum shares.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Advertisements were placed in the press when details of the scheme were announced, and further publicity will take place, as appropriate, before the scheme closes.

Banking Act

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the powers in section 23 of the Banking Act will be exercised in relation to European Community countries.

Mr. Lawson: The United Kingdom would, of course, fully respect its Community obligations when exercising its discretion to use its powers under section 23 of the Banking Act 1987. The United Kingdom would not use these powers against persons, companies or firms exercising any of their legitimate rights under Community law.

Golden Shares

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the golden shares held by the Government in each of the privatised industries, giving (a) the expiry date of each of the shares, and (b) the conditions that are attached to each.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The Government hold special shares in the following privatised companies:

Amersham International BAA
British Aerospace
British Gas
British Telecom
Britoil
Cable and Wireless
Enterprise Oil
Jaguar
Rolls-Royce
Sealink
Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering

In each case, the rights and restrictions attaching to the special share, including the arrangements for its redemption, are defined in the articles of association of the company concerned.

Treasury Stock

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of persons holding 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975 issued in 1946-47, and the size of the average holding.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 14 December 1987]: There are approximately 13,400 registered holdings of 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975 or after with an average size of £35,600. It is impossible without undue cost to distinguish between personal and corporate holdings.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of redemption of 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The cost of redemption of 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975 or after would be £475 million.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to redeem 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 14 December 1987]: There are no plans to redeem 2½ per cent. Treasury stock 1975 or after.

CIVIL SERVICE

Occupational Health Service

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what progress is being made in the setting up of the Civil Service occupational health service.

Mr. Luce: The Civil Service occupational health service (OHS) was set up on 23 June 1986. Since then much has been done to create an integrated, more efficient and more effective organisation. Substantial economies of scale have been secured and the new service is costing about 7 per cent. less per annum than the organisations it replaced. At the same time it is providing a broader range of services to the whole of the Civil Service, many areas of which now have access for the first time to occupational health care. The OHS will continue to develop and maintain high standards of occupational health in the Civil Service.

THE ARTS

British Library

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts what plans he has for further construction of the new British library building at St. Pancras when building work on the present stage is completed in 1993.

Mr. Luce: I have recently authorised a feasibility study to examine options for the concluding stage of the British Library project, so that a start can be made before the work currently authorised is completed in 1993.

The feasibility study will be carried out by the Property Services Agency, in conjunction with the British Library and the architects who designed the first phase of the building. Their findings and proposals will be reported to me by mid-1988.

The object of the study is to draw up a plan for completing the project in a way which meets the key requirements of the library at the minimum additional cost. Those requirements are to concentrate most of the British Library's London-based collections at one location in a controlled pollution-free environment, with greatly improved facilities for readers and staff. Subject to the outcome of the study, the new building will enable the British Library to vacate most of the 19 sites around London where its stock is currently located, and to unite its major services within a single purpose-built building.

I shall announce further decisions when the feasibility study has been completed.

TRANSPORT

Tourist Signposting

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of tourist signposting in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Progress with introducing the new white on brown tourist signs in England has generally been good. Signs have been approved for over 2,500 attractions. Many of these signs have now been erected. We expect even more signs will be in place before next summer's tourist season. We are continuing to encourage local authorities where progress has not been as good as elsewhere. Signing in other parts of the United Kingdom is the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

M40

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how his recent review of road scheme assessment criteria, to ensure that appropriate weight is given to leisure traffic, affects the predictions of traffic expected to travel on the proposed 12-mile two-lane section of the M40 motorway.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In the recent review of road scheme assessment, the value of time for leisure trips was increased. This would increase the economic benefits of the M40 scheme. It would not affect the traffic predictions which contain both work and leisure trips transferred from existing roads within the M40 corridor and from the M1/M6 corridor.

Newspapers (Subsidies)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any information on the subsidies paid for the costs of transporting (a) journalists and (b) newspapers in other EEC countries.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No.

Roads (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will pay an official visit to the Easington constituency to assess conditions on the A1 between Easington and Dishforth and on the A19 between Dishforth and Easington; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We know quite a lot about conditions on the A1 and the A19 north of Dishforth.

Written answers on 2 December at columns 577-78 give details of the proposed improvements to the A1 between Dishforth and Scotch Corner and the provision of dual carriageways on the last section of the A19-A168 route north of Dishforth. This latter scheme is included in the contract for the new A1//A168 grade-separated interchange for which tenders have now been invited.

The A1 is a motorway from Scotch Corner to the Easington constituency and the A19 is a dual carriageway from Thirsk northwards. Along these stretches, both roads are considered to be of a satisfactory standard to meet traffic requirements in the forseeable future.

Passenger Statistics (London)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers were carried on an average day in the latest year for which statistics are available on (a) the London Underground and (b) London buses; what was the comparable figure five years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information requested is as follows:

Passenger journeys on LRT services

	Daily average (million)
	Underground	Bus
1982	1·4	2·9
1986-87	2·1	3·2

London Regional Transport

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if the objectives for London Regional Transport laid down by the Secretary of State on 20 July 1984 are still in force;

(2) what financial objectives he has determined for London Regional Transport; and what other directions of a general character he has made as to the exercise and performance of the functions of London Regional Transport since 1984.

Mr. David Mitchell: The 1984 objectives cover the financial years 1985-86 to 1987-88. They have not been superseded or supplemented and are still in force.

Green Park Tube (Fire)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the findings of London Regional Transport's internal inquiry into the fire at Green Park tube station in June and as to the extent to which these have been implemented.

Mr. David Mitchell: The incident was reported to the Department in accordance with the statute. It is understood that LRT's internal inquiry report made four recommendations, three of which were adopted.

Motorways (Central Reservations)

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made with reviewing the case for emergency crossing points on the central reservations of motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Since June 1985, when the Department issued advice on the treatment of gaps in central reserve safety fences, the number of emergency crossing points (ECPs) has been reduced by 20 per cent., from 1,292 to 1,038. Agreement has been reached with the emergency services to close a further 568 ECPs by the end of March 1989, bringing the overall reduction to 63 per cent. 224 ECPs have been identified as essential, and 246 are still being considered.

Morpeth Derailment

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached any conclusions on the recommendations of the railway inspecting officer's report on the derailment that occurred in June 1984 at Morpeth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The inspecting officer's recommendations have been considered very carefully by the British Railways Board and the Government. Action has been taken by the board on the recommendations which called for changes in operating procedures in order to prevent a recurrence of such an accident. The board is also continuing to work towards eliminating the practice of signing on by telephone, and progress on this is being monitored by the Railway Inspectorate.

The inspecting officer also suggested that powers be introduced to require railway staff to submit to breath, blood or urine tests. There is no evidence that the railways face serious problems of alcohol or drugs abuse. In addition, the board's rule book makes it clear that staff must not report for duty under the influence of alcohol, or of any drug that might impair the proper performance of their duties, and must not consume alcohol or any such drug whilst on duty. The board considers that this continues to provide a better deterrent than could be achieved by taking powers to require railway staff to submit to breath, blood or urine tests. The introduction of testing could imply the acceptability of a certain level of alcohol, by analogy with the breath-alcohol limits set for motorists, which could undermine the board's more stringent disciplinary code. Supervisors are already instructed to call the police in serious cases, and the board reminds staff regularly of their responsibilities and gives advice to managers and supervisors on these matters.

The Government accept the board's conclusions on this question and do not propose to seek powers to breathalyse train crews. Consultation with other transport industries has also confirmed that there is no clear case for the introduction of such powers for staff with similar responsibilities in those industries.

There would be advantage, however, in updating the Railway Regulation Act 1842 in order to provide for increases in penalties for offences involving alcohol on the railways, and to extend the provisions to cover offences involving drugs. This would require primary legislation, which we propose should apply to all railways—British Rail, London Regional Transport, and privately owned concerns. We shall seek a suitable opportunity for such legislation in due course.

London Traffic Control

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he proposes to continue to exercise the London traffic control functions transferred to him by the London Traffic Control System (Transfer) Order 1986.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The London Residuary Body is terminating, with effect from 31 March 1988, the agency agreement under which it carries out certain London traffic control functions and manages the traffic control system unit; and the local authorities have for the time being been unable to agree joint arrangements for running the traffic control system themselves. The corporation of the city of London has agreed to take over the management of the TCSU from the LRB and provide a similar agency service from 1 April 1988. We propose to lay the necessary order early in the new year and to enter into an appropriate agency agreement with the city corporation. We are writing to authorities about the proposed arrangements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Juvenile Crime

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department is currently undertaking into the causes of juvenile crime; and when he intends to publish any results.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office research and planning unit and crime prevention unit have extensive and varied programmes of work, much of which may contribute to further knowledge about juvenile crime. Of particular relevance is a review of research on schools, disruptive behaviour and deliquency, due to be published in February 1988; the report of a study of fruit and video machine playing by 10 to 16-year-olds is also intended for publication early next year.

Firearms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions during each of the past 10 years convictions have been made for abuse of the exemptions under section 14 of the Firearms Act 1968 by persons who have either acquired and misused or acquired and supplied shotguns to third parties not authorised to hold them.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is not available.

Independent Broadcasting Authority

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Government appointees are on the board of the Independent Broadcasting Authority; what are the criteria for the selection; and if he will publish the list of appointees in the Official Report.

Mr. Renton: The Broadcasting Act 1981 provides for the members of the IBA, including the chairman and deputy chairman, to be appointed by the Home Secretary. The Home Secretary, with a view to enabling the authority to continue to fulfil its responsibility for safeguarding the public interest in broadcasting matters, wishes to ensure that the members of the authority combine personal distinction with a wide and balanced range of interests and experience. The present membership of the IBA is:

Lord Thomson of Monifieth, Chairman
Sir Donald Maitland, Deputy Chairman
Mr. G. R. Peregrine, Member for Wales
Professor J. F. Fulton, Member for Northern Ireland
Mr. J. R. Purvis, Member for Scotland
Mr. R. A. Grantham, Member
Mrs. P. Ridley, Member
Professor A. L. Cullen, Member
Sir Anthony Jolliffe, Member
Mr. M. H. Caine, Member
Lady Popplewell, Member
Mr. Ranjit Sondhi, Member.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has issued any guidelines to the Independent Broadcasting Authority concerning the production of politically sensitive material; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The Broadcasting Act 1981 places a duty on the IBA to satisfy itself, as far as possible, that due impartiality is preserved on the part of the persons providing programmes as respects matters of political or industrial controversy or relating to current public policy. For this purpose a series of programmes may be considered as a whole. Relevant guidance is contained in the IBA's "Television Programme Guidelines". It is for the IBA, not the Government, to interpret and enforce its statutory obigations.

Leicestershire Police Force

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present establishment of the Leicestershire police force; and to what extent the force is up to establishment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The authorised police establishment of the Leicestershire constabulary is 1,733 and there is approval for nine supernumerary police posts. On 31 October 1987, the strength of the force was 1,754, which was 12 above the authorised number because recruitment in that month exceeded wastage.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the establishment of the Leicestershire police force was last altered; what proposals he has recently received to alter that establishment; and what has been his response.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The last change in the authorised establishment of the Leicestershire constabulary was in July 1982 when six additional police posts were approved, bringing the authorised police establishment up to 1,733. We have not recently received any application to vary that establishment.

Cwm Clydach Estate

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of south Wales as to the number of occasions on which police officers have been called to deal with incidents at the Cwm Clydach estate and Glyn Coch Farm, Craig-cefri-parc, West Glamorgan, over the last three years; and what has been the total cost to the police force of dealing with such incidents.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the chief constable of south Wales that since November 1984 the police have been called to five incidents on the Cwm Clydach estate. I further understand that, because the relevant information is not readily available, it is not possible to assess the cost of police attendance at these incidents.

Nationality

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many forms of registration under the British Nationality Act 1981 have been distributed by the immigration service.

Mr. Renton: Fewer than 100. But since the British Nationality Act 1981 came into force on 1 January 1983 about 1 million application forms have been issued by the nationality division.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will launch an advertising campaign giving details of British nationality by registration on national and regional television;

(2) what steps he took to monitor the effectiveness of recent advertisements giving details of British nationality by registration (a) in Great Britain and (b) in Manchester before his recent advertising campaign about British nationality;

(3) what information was available to him on the circulation of the "Manchester A.M." and "Manchester Advertiser" newspapers amongst different ethnic minority groups (a) in Greater Manchester and (b) in the inner city wards of the city of Manchester and the wards in the Stretford constituency.

Mr. Renton: We have no plans to initiate further advertising at this late stage. The circulation of local newspapers and the geographical concentration of local ethnic minorities were taken into account in deciding which papers to use for our paid advertising campaigns, but the available information did not distinguish the ethnic minority readership. The response rate in the first round of advertising was assessed in deciding which newspapers to use in the second round.

Rape

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been convicted of rape since 1970; and how many of these persons have been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mr. John Patten: Information on court proceedings for offences of rape is published annually in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales: Supplementary Tables Vols 1 and 2" under offence classification 19. The figures include some offences other than under section 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956 such as aiding and abetting and attempted rape. Figures for proceedings in magistrates' courts and the Crown court are given in tables SI. 1(A) and S2. 1(A): and for the distribution of the lengths of sentences of imprisonment imposed in table S2. 4. Copies are in the Library of the House.

Indeterminate Sentences

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes he intends to seek to make in the law and procedure relating to indeterminate sentences, following the decision of the European Court of Human Rights in the Weekes case.

Mr. John Patten: The implications of the judgment of the European Court in the Weekes case are still under consideration.

Trevi Ministers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent meeting of Trevi Ministers in Copenhagen.

Mr. Hurd: A meeting of Trevi Ministers was held in Copenhagen on 9 December under the presidency of the Danish Minister of Justice, Mr. Ninn-Hansen. We discussed developments since our previous meeting in Brussels in April including terrorist incidents in a number of member states and successes against terrorist activity.

We agreed that continued co-operation between countries is the most effective way of countering terrorism and specific successes of such co-operation were reported at the meeting.

A number of initiatives launched during the United Kingdom presidency have come to fruition. The coming into operation of the secure communication system has enabled a more rapid exchange of a variety of information to take place between member states, including the exchange of details of the theft and discovery of arms and explosives—an item which had been agreed in principle at our previous meeting. I reported on a successful conference of Trevi officials held in London in November on the detection of firearms and explosives especially at airports, which enabled the participants to exchange information on research into new techniques and to assess existing techniques. We also agreed an updated assessment of the terrorist threat to Community countries.

In other areas of Trevi activity we approved a detailed agreement for developing the network of drug liaison officers outside the countries of the EC for the benefit of Community countries. This is the result of an initiative taken by the United Kingdom last year. I also reported that the conference in London in October had established an international network of co-operation to prevent and deal with football hooliganism.

Official Secrets Act 1911

Mr. Mates: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to seek to reform section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1911.

Mr. Hurd: As my right hon. Friends, the Attorney-General and the Prime Minister have told the House, the Government have had work in hand for some time to find effective, enforceable and reasonable provisions to replace section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1911. This work is continuing and we intend to bring it to a conclusion later this Session. When the work is complete, we shall lay before Parliament a White Paper setting out the Government's proposals for reform of the present law, with a view to early legislation.

Immigration (European Community)

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent meeting of the Ministers of the European Community concerned with immigration.

Mr. Hurd: The ministers of the states of the European Community concerned with immigration met on 9 December in Copenhagen under the presidency of the Danish Minister of Justice. A representative of the Commission of the European Community attended the meeting. My colleagues and I considered a further report from the ad hoc working group of senior officials which was established last year during the United Kingdom presidency.

The meeting reaffirmed the importance of the co-ordination of the visa policies of member states. It was agreed that from 1 March 1988 nationals of 50 countries would require a visa if they wished to enter any country in the Community. It was also agreed that, as a general principle, it was necessary to make a specific individual assessment of such applicants before issuing a visa. There will be consultation between member states about any proposal to remove a country from this list. The United Kingdom already requires visas of citizens of these 50 countries. The list includes the five countries to which our visa requirement has been extended since September 1986.

Ministers instructed officials to study the possibility of further countries being added during 1988 to this common list of those whose citizens required visas, and to study ways of achieving greater co-ordination of the criteria for the grant of visas. We shall consider again at our next meeting the proposal to draw up a parallel list of countries —notably other European countries which have close links with member states of the Community — from whose citizens visas will not be required.

A major problem facing all member states is the need to deal in a humane and orderly way with applications for asylum from those who apply for asylum in different countries, either at the same time or in sequence. It is necessary to establish clear guidelines to determine which country should examine an application for asylum (the "first country of asylum") both to reduce prolonged periods of uncertainty for applicants and to make it possible to deal more effectively with those applications which clearly fail to meet the requirements of the 1951 United Nations convention on refugees.

The presidency put before the meeting detailed guidelines drawn up by the ad hoc working group which would be used to determine the country responsible for examining and reaching a decision on any given application. Given that EC countries received more than 150,000 applications for asylum in 1986, it is important to devise an orderly system for dealing with them. There was a wide measure of agreement on the suggested guidelines, and Ministers instructed officials to continue their work so that agreement might be reached at our next meeting under the German presidency in the first half of next year. My colleagues and I endorsed proposals for the regular exchange of information and statistics about policy and procedure in considering applications for asylum and also for the exchange of information about the conditions in the country of origin from which those seeking asylum in the Community have come.

All those attending the meeting stressed the value of co-operation between Ministers and officials concerned with immigration, and the United Kingdom will continue to play its full part in this work.

Welsh Language

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are any plans to issue Welsh language versions of fixed-penalty notices for road traffic offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The chief constables of the four Welsh police forces have recently completed a review of the practicability of issuing notices in the Welsh language following which arrangements are in hand for Welsh language notices to be offered from early in the new year. I welcome this initiative by the police service in Wales.

Independent Local Radio

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the development of independent local radio.

Mr. Hurd: Our Green Paper "Radio: Choices and Opportunities", published in February, offered the has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of section 37 of the Shops Act 1950, as amended by the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act 1963, which requires a seat to be provided behind the counter for the use of women employed as shop assistants.

Mr. John Patten: No such representations have been received by either the Home Office or the Department of Employment. I should add that section 37 of the Shops Act 1950 was repealed in 1964 by the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act 1963 except in relation to premises which are in a covered market place.

Guildford and Woolwich Pub Bombings

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the Avon and Somerset constabulary are making in their inquiries into the new statements presented to him concerning the Guildford and Woolwich pub bombings case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I understand that the Avon and Somerset police have encountered certain difficulties in interviewing witnesses and in obtaining access to documents; and that in consequence they have thought it necessary to write to solicitors representing the four convicted persons to express their concern. As a result, the inquiries are, unfortunately, taking longer than had been expected.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Hurd: Staff and associated costs of the Home Office press office in 1987-88 are estimated at £300,000. The estimated costs for 1988-89 will depend on the outcome of a review of the complement.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by the Metropolitan police on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the latest estimate of staffing and accommodation costs of the directorate of public affairs and spending on recruitment and other advertising and other promotional literature for 1987-88 is £4,836,926. The level of expenditure for 1988-89 has not yet been decided.

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) men, (b) women and (c) children have been refused visas to visit the United Kingdom since the introduction of visa control on five countries in October 1986; and if he will set out his answer in tabular form for each of the five countries;

(2) how many (a) men, (b) women and (c) children have been granted visas to visit the United Kingdom from the five countries which became subject to visa control in October 1986, listed in tabular form; in how many cases, in each category shown above, applications were made to extend visits; and in how many cases such extensions were for (a) a month, (b) two months, (c) three months, (d) four months, (e) five months and (f) six months or more.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 8 December 1987]: Information on applications for a visa to visit the United Kingdom is given in the following table; separate information on men, women and children is not available centrally. The information available on persons applying for an extension of stay as a visitor cannot comprehensively identify all those applicants who were originally admitted with a visit visa or after the introduction of the visa requirement.

Persons applying for a visa to visit the United Kingdom
Number of persons

	Applications Granted[1]	Refused initially

Anabolic Steroids

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of convictions during the last 10 years for the unlicensed sale of anabolic steroids under the Medicines Act.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

In the last 10 years there have been four convictions under the Medicines Act for the illegal sale or supply of anabolic steroids. One conviction involved three separate charges.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public realtions office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Eggar: The number of staff employed in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office news department and Overseas Development Administration press office is 19·5. The number employed at this point in 1988 will depend on the workload prevailing at the time.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotion material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Eggar: Foreign and Commonwealth Office estimates of expenditure on advertising and other promotional material for 1987-88 are :

FCO Diplomatic Wing	195,000
FCO Aid Wing	351,000
Total	546,000

Detailed decisions on expenditure for 1988-89 have not yet been taken, but the overall figures are expected to be:

FCO Diplomatic Wing	230,000
FCO Aid Wing	352,000
Total	582,000

Expenditure relates mainly to advertising for recruitment, publicity to promote overseas the entitlement of certain British residents overseas to vote in British and European Parliament elections, and general promotional literature.

A disaggregation of these figures to identify the medium used is not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Eggar: Total expenditure on press and public relations for 1987-88 is estimated as follows:

	£ million
Payment to Central Office of Information for overseas information material and related activities	19·2
Other information services	0·9
Running costs of the Diplomatic Wing Information/ News Departments	2·0
Running costs of Aid Wing Information Department	0·2

Detailed decisions on expenditure for 1988-89 have not yet been taken, but the overall figures are expected to be:

	£ million
Payment to Central Office of Information for overseas information material and related activities	19·0
Other information services	0·9
Running costs of the Diplomatic Wing Information/ News Departments	2·1
Running costs of Aid Wing Information Department	0·3

	£ million
	1987-88	1988-89
Cost of information staff at overseas posts	17·6	18·3
Total	39·9	40·6

Most of this expenditure is incurred in carrying out the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's responsibilities for the projection of Britain's image, and Her Majesty's Government's policies in overseas countries.

Diego Garcia

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the base on Diego Garcia has been used by United Kingdom forces in the Gulf; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether the United States of America used the base at Diego Garcia to reinforce its armed forces in the Gulf prior to August; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether United States minesweeper helicopters are permanently based on Diego Garcia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is not our usual practice to comment upon details of operations by United States forces.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any United Kingdom minesweeping helicopters are permanently based on Diego Garcia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Royal Navy does not have any minesweeping helicopters.

Falkland Islands (Fisheries)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 324, if he will place in the Library a copy of any relevant documents, papers, requirements and guidelines relating to the issue of fishing licences in the Falkland Islands conservation zone available to the renewable resources assessment group at Imperial college when determining the conservation requirements governing the issue of licences.

Mr. Eggar: I shall arrange to have placed in the Library of the House soon scientific papers relevant to the work of the renewable resources assessment group (RRAG) for the Falkland Islands Government in determining the conservation requirements for the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone (FICZ). RRAG receives through the Falkland Islands Government daily reports of catches from those vessels licensed to fish in the FICZ. This information is also monitored by the Falkland Islands Government's scientific observers.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will now list the United Kingdom holders of licences to fish in Falklands waters in each round since the introduction of the 150 mile fisheries zone around the Falklands in 1986.

Mr. Eggar: A list of United Kingdom companies allocated licences for the 1987 and 1988 seasons for the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone is as follows. Finfish allocations for 1988 have not yet been completed. Where licences have been allocated to joint ventures involving United Kingdom firms, the name of the JV company is shown in brackets.

1987 first season: 1 February-30 June
Marr (Falklands) Limited (StanMarr Limited)
Witte-Boyd Holdings (SWB Fishing Limited)
Caley International Limited (StanCal Limited)
Falconview Limited (Falconview Fisheries Company Limited)
Berkeley Sound Shipping Company (Stankor Limited)
Sasasco (Stanco Limited)
Scofish International Limited (Clipper (Falklands) Limited)
Auscot Limited

A copy of the Falkland Islands Government's announcement of squid licences for all successful applicants for the first season in 1988 will be placed in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Open University

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the drop-out rate among Open University students for each of the last 10 years, broken down by the year of study and type of course.

Mr. Jackson: The percentage of students finally registering each year who did not take their end of year examinations is shown in the following table.

Drop-out rate (final registration to exams) for each faculty in the undergraduate programme 1977 to 1986

Calendar year	Arts	Social Science	School of Education	Maths	Science	Technology	[1]P/E	[2]U
1977	21·0	23·8	25·5	32·9	25·4	28·5	30·7	—

1986	21·3	23·4	24·5	27·1	23·9	26·5	27·3	20·7

Notes:
(a) The Open University is a distance teaching institution and therefore its statistics are difficult to relate to those produced by conventional universities.
(b) The drop-out rates for Open University students could be due to non-academic reasons such as financial and family problems.
(c) The figures for 1977 to 1981 are not directly comparable with those of 1982 onwards.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how the Government's support to the Workers Educational Association is calculated; and if he will make provison to protect this funding in areas where high unemployment affects fee income.

Mr. Jackson: The Department's grant provided for the Workers Educational Association districts in the current academic year totals £2,496,900. This represents the grant allocated initially for 1986-87 increased to take account of anticipated changes in costs. It is allocated to individual districts on the following basis:

(i) a flat sum allocated to each district to contribute to the salary costs of the district secretary and office expenses;

(ii) a special activities fund designed to allocate resources to districts for specific purposes; and

(iii) allocations to each district based on a count of student hours.

The special activities fund arrangements allow for districts to apply for compensation for fee remissions to unemployed students. My right hon. Friend is quite prepared to consider any proposals from the Workers Educational Association for adjusting the funding formula if this is thought to be necessary.

Nursery Schools

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was (a) the total public expenditure on nursery schools and classes in each year from 1975 to 1985 and (b) the total public expenditure on these services as a percentage of the gross domestic product for England and Wales for each of these years.

Mr. Dunn: The available information relates to an estimate of total net recurrent expenditure by local education authorities in England on under-fives in maintained schools from 1976-77 and is shown in the table. Each amount has been expressed as a percentage of the total United Kingdom gross domestic product.

LEA expenditure on under-fives[1]

Year	Net recurrent expenditure £ million cash	Percentage of GDP (rounded to three decimal places)
1976-77[2]	127	0·098
1977-78	128	0·085
1978-79	146	0·084
1979-80	177	0·085
1980-81	222	0·094
1981-82	241	0·093
1982-83	274	0·096
1983-84	296	0·096
1984-85	331	0·101
1985-86	350	0·097

[1] Information is given for under-fives as a group because separate figures for nursery classes in primary schools is not available.
[2] 1976-77 is the earliest year for which figures are readily available.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: The number of staff employed in the information branch of the Department of Education and Science at 15 December 1987 was 38. Detailed plans for the next financial year remain to be determined.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest figures for estimated spending on advertising and other promotional literature for the current financial year 1987-88 are as follows:

Television	Nil
Radio	Nil
Newspapers	280,000
Other promotional material (publications, videos, exhibitions etc.)	1,459,000

Plans for expenditure in 1988-89 have yet to be finalised.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest estimated expenditure for the current financial year on press and public relations, including staff costs is £2,300,000. Plans for expenditure in 1988-89 have yet to be finalised.

Rock Ferry School, Birkenhead

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Educational and Science what is the standard number of pupils for first year entrance to Rock Ferry school, Birkenhead, under section 15 of the Education Act 1980.

Mr. Dunn: The standard number for Rock Ferry high school is 210 pupils.

European University, Florence

Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what contribution was made by the United Kingdom to the European university in Florence in the latest financial year; how many students attended the university; and how many of those students were British.

Mr. Jackson: The contribution made by the United Kingdom Government to the European university institute in the last financial year was £1,059,000. Of the 190 students at the institute in the last academic year, 21 were from the United Kingdom.

CERN

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to make a statement on the United Kingdom's membership of CERN.

Mr. Jackson: The report of the CERN review group, chaired by Professor Abragam, has just been received, and is today being presented formally by him to a meeting of the CERN council. The report, a copy of which is being placed in the Library, will now be the subject of detailed analysis prior to a substantive discussion of it, planned for the February meeting of the CERN council. At today's meeting the United Kingdom delegate will explain that the United Kingdom will wish to remain a full and active member of CERN provided that a sound basis for doing so in the future can be established.

ESRF

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he proposes to decide on United Kingdom funding of the planned ESRF (synchrotron radiation) facility at Grenoble.

Mr. Jackson: I wrote to the chairman of the ESRF provisional council on 11 December informing him of the United Kingdom's willingness to fund a 10 per cent. share of the construction costs of the proposed European synchrotron radiation facility. Discussions with other prospective partners are continuing.

Agriculture and Food Research Council

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research funds he proposes to distribute to the Agriculture and Food Research Council; and what is his estimate of the total of departmental allocations to the Council.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend is currently considering the advice of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils on the allocation of the additional money for science in 1988-89 announced on 3 November. He expects to announce his decision on allocations shortly.

The Agriculture and Food Research Council will also receive funds from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for commissioned work. I understand that my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has still to confirm the total research that he will be commissioning in 1988-89.

Geological Surveying

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he proposes to implement the recommendations of Sir Clifford Butler's report on geological surveying.

Mr. Jackson: There is nothing further that I can add to my reply to my hon. Friend, and my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) on 29 October 1987 at column 365.

National Curriculum Mathematics Working Group (Report)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish the interim report of the national curriculum mathematics working group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am publishing the interim report of the national curriculum mathematics working group today. I am grateful to the group for the work it has done to date, but hope for a more rapid rate of progress over coming months in its further work on attainment targets and programmes of study for mathematics. Copies of the report and of my response are being lodged in the Libraries of both Houses.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on expenditure to be supported by education support grant in 1988-89.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government intend to support expenditure of £115·5 million in England through education support grant in 1988-89. £81 million of Exchequer grant will be paid in all, and every local education authority will benefit from the programme. Grant will be paid at the rate of 70 per cent. of approved expenditure except for the special extension of the project on records of achievement, where it will be paid at 50 per cent.

Within the overall figure of £115·5 million, £40·5 million of expenditure on schemes of midday supervision will be supported and about £25 million of continuing expenditure on projects began in earlier years of the programme. The amount available for new starts will be just over £50 million, which will be spread across 15 activities. Five of these activities are featuring in the programme for the first time. They are: information technology in schools; a pilot project to broaden the range of languages learnt by pupils in secondary schools as their first foreign language; schemes for the organisation of leisure time activities of vocational benefit to young persons known as learning by achievement; the development of vocational open learning provision, and the provision of equipment for use in the teaching of computer aided engineering on technician courses.

The Department is writing to local education authorities today to inform them of the levels of expenditure which I have approved for activities to be supported in 1988-89. The table sets out for the 15 activities in which new starts are now approved the levels of expenditure to be supported next year and the numbers of authorities for which I have approved projects.

New starts approved for 1988-89

Activity	Total allocation (£ million cash)	Number of LEAs to be supported
1. IT in Schools[1]	19·0	All
2. Provision of Books and equipment for GCSE examination courses	10·0	All
3. The teaching of mathematics in schools	4·6	All

ENERGY

Electricity Transmission (Costs)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what response the Central Electricity Generating Board has made to the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the efficiency and costs of transmission of electricity.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Central Electricity Generating Board has sent me its first response to the report which was published on 26 June this year. Copies of the response have been placed in the Library.

The commission found that the CEGB generally managed its transmission function efficiently in the interests of its customers and in discharge of its statutory duty, but identified several areas of weakness and one major failure. However, the commission did not consider that in respect of any of the matters investigated the board was at the time pursuing a course of conduct which operated against the public interest. The commission recognised the high level of technological competence which the board displayed in the transmission of electricity, but drew attention to the importance of developing an equally high standard of general management, particularly in the absence of competitive pressures.

Accordingly, the commission made a large number of recommendations, mainly aimed at improvements in general management in the area of transmission. The CEGB's response summarises the action which the board plans to take. There were five areas which the commission recommended should have priority:

1. Clearer definition of Board responsibilities
The CEGB has explained the collective and individual responsibilities of executive board members. I attach importance, as does the board, to a clear definition of responsibilities at all times.

2. Future management of the Five Centre Grid Control Project
The board acknowledges that serious mistakes were made in the original two-tier grid control project; and has taken steps to ensure that the revised five centre project will be carried out efficiently. My Department will wish to keep in touch with the progress of the project.

3. Year to year changes in transmission plans and

4. Fluctuations in estimated plant and equipment requirements
The board will be reviewing recent changes and fluctuations to see whether firmer indications of requirements can be given to suppliers. I believe that it is important that there should be an informed relationship between the board and suppliers, though set in the context of maximising the scope for competition. I note that the commission endorsed the CEGB's practice of basing its investment planning and appraisal decisions on the costs and benefits which will accrue to electricity consumers.

5. Approach to budget setting
The board accepts the need for a rigorous approach to budget setting. My Department will take a close interest in the board's re-examination of the scope for applying priority-based budgeting to expenditure on transmission.

The commission considered that the board was wrong not to have undertaken a formal assessment of costs and benefits before embarking on reorganisation of its production activities. I attach importance to the action which the board is taking to evaluate and achieve the cost savings which reorganisation has made possible.

The board will be reporting to me next summer on progress achieved in implementing the recommendations.

Government Buildings (Lighting)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy to what extent he has promoted the findings of his energy efficiency demonstration scheme's expanded project file 69 on lighting controls for installation in the Government's main buildings and where the Government are the principal tenant.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My energy efficiency office actively promotes the efficient use and control of lighting in buildings. The Property Services Agency is fully aware of the project referred to by the hon. Member and other advisory material on energy efficient lighting.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Parkinson: The staffing of my Department's press office (including the public inquiry point and support staff) is 11. Staffing levels are presently under review.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Parkinson: Provisional figures for expenditure by my Department in 1987-88 in the following areas are:

	£ million
(a) Television advertising	Nil
(b) Radio advertising	Nil
(c) Press advertising, including newspapers	1·85
(d) Other promotional material	1·16

This estimate includes £450,000 in respect of publicity in connection with the collection of the second call on British Gas shares. This sum was excluded from that given in the previous answer on 17 July, at column 647 for the sake of consistency with the figures given in that answer for 1986-87.

Detailed decisions on expenditure for 1988-89 have not yet been taken.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Parkinson: The estimated expenditure for 1987-88 is £359,000.

The figures include:

(i) forecast expenditure by the press office:

(ii) staff costs (salaries, accommodation and common services) for all permanent information service and support staff currently in post in the press office, including the public inquiry point.

Staffing levels are currently under review; therefore detailed decisions have not been made for 1988-89.

Opencast Executive

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many (i) administrative and (ii) productive employees were engaged in the activities of the Opencast Executive in (a) Wales, (b) England and (c) Scotland for each of the years 1980 to 1987; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many sites are (a) currently coaled by the Opencast Executive in (i) Wales, (ii) England and (iii) Scotland and (b) were so worked in each of the years 1980-1987.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the British Coal Corporation and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards proposals by the Central Electricity Generating Board to build new nuclear generating capacity, in the context of the overall development of national electricity supplies.

Mr. Parkinson: In August of this year I received an application from the CEGB for my consent to build a pressurised water reactor nuclear power station at Hinkley Point C in Somerset. The CEGB has also informed me that it expects shortly to submit applications for my consent to build new coal-fired power stations at Fawley in Hampshire and at West Burton in Nottinghamshire.

The Government are satisfied that there will be a need for considerable new generating capacity before the end of the century. By then, many existing power stations will have been retired. The days of overcapacity in electricity supply are rapidly coming to an end, and new capacity must be planned now if supplies are to be maintained. Electricity demand is steadily rising as economic activity revives.

Secure supplies of electricity are vital to the nation's well-being. We cannot afford to risk dependency on one source of power alone. There is an obvious need for diversity in the nation's power sources to which nuclear power can make a valuable contribution. It provides independence from the uncertainties of future prices of fossil fuels. My right hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Walker), attached substantial importance to the need for greater fuel diversity in giving his consent in March of this year for the Sizewell B PWR. In the ensuing debate of 11 May the House recognised the important contribution that nuclear energy is making and will continue to make to the strength of the British economy. The proposals to privatise the industry which I shall bring before the House in due course will take the need for diversity fully into account.

The Government are satisfied that the PWR can provide nuclear energy safely. The Sizewell B decision was made only after the most careful and painstaking independent assessment of the issues by the inquiry inspector. In June of this year the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate also completed its assessment of the safety issues for the Sizewell B design with the granting of a nuclear site licence. The safety of that PWR design has been exhaustively examined and found to be acceptable. The NII will, of course, have to continue to be satisfied, through the licensing process, in respect of individual projects and, in particular, with the examination of those safety issues which are site specific in their nature.

However, without further nuclear stations, the nuclear component in our electricity supplies will decline as the existing Magnox stations are retired. The CEGB made it clear at the Sizewell B public inquiry that, in the event of receiving consent for the Sizewell B PWR, it would wish to proceed with a small family of PWRs based on the Sizewell B design. Each future power station application will be considered on its merits. The Hinkley Point C proposal is the first of these and I shall announce, in due course, the details of the public inquiry which will assist me in my decision on the CEGB's application.

Subject to receiving the necessary safety, environmental and other consents, these stations will contribute, along with other generating options, including further coal-fired stations and renewable resources, to meeting the nation's requirement for additional generating capacity.

SCOTLAND

"Prosecuting Sexual Assault"

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to introduce legislation to give effect to the recommendation of his Department's report, "Prosecuting Sexual Assault"; and if he will issue guidance to the courts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to the right hon. Member for Glasgow, Govan (Mr. Millan) on 28 October 1987, at column 144.

Prisons (Damage)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the estimated cost of damage caused in the recent prison disturbances in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

	£ thousands
Shotts (26-27 September 1987)	186
Peterhead (28 September to 3 October 1987)	92
Perth (4-6 October 1987)	96
	374

Prisons (Disturbances)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inmates have been charged with offences against prison rules following the recent prison disturbances in Scotland; how many have been found guilty; and what awards have been given.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Charges, or adjudications by governors or visiting committees, for alleged offences under the Prison (Scotland) Rules 1952 do not proceed if the same allegations are subject to independent criminal investigation.

Allegations of offences during recent incidents at Shotts prison (26-27 September), Peterhead (28 September to 3 October) and Perth prison (4-6 October) are the subject of investigation by the police and procurators-fiscal. It would be inappropriate for me to comment on the nature or possible outcome of these investigations, or any criminal proceedings which might result.

Scottish Transport Group

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has proposals to privatise the Scottish Transport Group or any of its subsidiary companies during the next two years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson) on 3 December 1987 at column 669.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the profit or loss of the Scottish Transport Group and each of its subsidiary companies in each year from 1983-84 and 1986-87; and what is the projected profit or loss for 1987 and 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Transport Group's annual accounts are prepared on a calendar year basis. The profit for the calendar years 1983 to 1986 inclusive is shown on page 28 of the group's annual report and accounts for 1986, a copy of which is available in the Library. Profit figures for each of the group's subsidiary companies for the calendar years to 1986 are contained in the annual reports of the companies, copies of which are deposited with the Registrar of Companies. Projected profits for both the current year and future years are matters of commercial confidence.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the value of all assets held by the Scottish Transport Group and each of its subsidiary companies.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The value of all assets held by the Scottish Transport Group is set out in the group's annual report and accounts, a copy of which is available in the Library. Figures for each of its subsidiary companies are contained in the annual accounts of each of the companies, copies of which are deposited with the Registrar of Companies.

Armed Forces (Casualties)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects detailed guidance relating to armed forces casualties, and to host nation arrangements, as referred to in paragraph 4.4 of the Scottish Home and Health Department's circular SHHD/DGM (1987)41, "Emergency Planning in the National Health Service: Health Service Civil Planning" to become available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of Friday 11 December to the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Galbraith).

Nursery Schools

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total public expenditure on nursery schools and classes for each year from 1975 to 1985 and (b) the total public expenditure on these services as a percentage of the gross domestic product of Scotland for each of these years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available on total public expenditure on nursery schools and classes is as follows:

	£ million
1976-77	12·6
1977-78	13·1
1978-79	12·3
1979-80	13·5
1980-81	16·5
1981-82	18·4
1982-83	22·2
1983-84	22·0
1984-85	24·0
1985-86	26·2

Note: Comparable figures for 1975-76 are not available.

The percentage which these sums represent of estimated Scottish GDP is 0·1 for each year.

Nurseries and Playgroups

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was (a) the total public expenditure spent on local authority day nurseries, local authority playgroups and grants to the voluntary sector for provision for under-fives for each year from 1975 to 1985 and (b) the total public expenditure on these services as a percentage of the gross domestic product of Scotland for each of these years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available on expenditure by social work authorities on children's day care services, including payments to voluntary bodies and individuals, is as follows:

	£ million
1975-76	3·0
1976-77	4·0
1977-78	4·1
1978-79	5·0
1979-80	6·0
1980-81	8·2
1981-82	9·1
1982-83	[1]10·2
1983-84	[1]11·0
1984-85	[1]11·6
1985-86	[1]12·4

[1] Estimate.

The percentage which these sums represent of estimated Scottish GDP is 0·04 up to 1979-80, rising to 0·05 thereafter.

Grants are also made by central Government to voluntary social work organisations. However, the exact amounts from such grants which are devoted to provision for under-fives are not available.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Rifkind: At 1 December 1987 the number of staff in the information officer grades employed in the Scottish Information Office was 23. Decisions have yet to be taken on the precise disposition of staff in the Scottish Office for 1988-89.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising,

(b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Rifkind: Estimated expenditure by my Department on television, radio, newspaper advertising and promotional material in the current year is £134,500, £58,000, £493,000 and £549,800 respectively.

Detailed decisions on expenditure by media have not yet been taken, but I expect the overall publicity figure to be £1,353,600.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Rifkind: The estimated running costs of the Scottish Information Office for 1987-88 are £1·7 million. Decisions on the expenditure estimate for 1988-89 have still to be taken.

Rating Reform

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates he has made of the financial implications for each of the Scottish regions of the introduction of a uniform non-domestic rate.

Mr. Lang: No such estimates have been made. There are no plans to introduce a separate uniform non-domestic rate for Scotland.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether those in receipt of supplementary benefit will pay 20 per cent. of their poll tax liability.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 October 1987]: I am sorry not to have replied to the hon. Member more quickly. The information requested is as follows.

Those receiving income support, which will replace supplementary benefit in April 1988, will receive the maximum rebate of 80 per cent. The levels of income support will be adjusted to take account of the average 20 per cent. minimum contribution.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give his latest estimate of the national average community charge in Scotland at current prices; if he will give the formula for his calculation; and if the rebate system as it applies in Scotland will be based on this figure.

Mr. Lang: I refer to the information contained in my reply to the hon. Member on 1 December, at columns 519-22. The calculations are based on the replacement of the income from domestic rates in 1987-88. Under the proposed community charge rebate scheme, rebates will be calculated on the basis of the actual personal community charge payable in each local authority area.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the percentage change in National Health Service expenditure for the years 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 after correcting for (a) National Health Service pay and prices deflator and (b) demographic deflator; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Forward plans for spending are made on a cash basis and no specific assumptions are made about pay and price movements for individual programmes. Estimates are made of the effect of demographic changes on demand for hospital and community health services but these are not appropriate to the National Health Service as a whole.

As my right hon. and learned Friend announced on 9 December, we plan to spend some £2,393 million on the National Health Service in Scotland next year and to provide a further increase of over £100 million in each of the two following years. These figures reinforce the Government's commitment to the National Health Service and should allow for the continued development and improvement of health services in Scotland over the planning period.

Heroin

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what action his Department is taking in conjunction with police authorities to eliminate the distribution of heroin in Scotland;

(2) what advice he has given to police authorities in relation to the suppression of heroin abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No specific advice has been given to police authorities on the suppression of heroin misuse as this is an operational matter for chief constables. But, as indicated in "Tackling Drug Misuse: a summary of the Government's strategy", a copy of which is in the Library, we regard action to combat drug misuse as commanding a high priority from all the agencies involved.

To support the police in their efforts to curb drug misuse, my right hon. and learned Friend has approved increases in authorised establishments to enable drug units to be formed in all eight Scottish forces. There are now around 100 officers specifically engaged in drugs work in Scottish forces compared to about 30 in 1979. In addition, the strength of the Scottish crime squad was increased by 21 officers in 1986 to allow the formation of drugs wings based in Edinburgh and Glasgow. The rate of specific police grant was increased from 50 to 51 per cent. with effect from 1986-87 in recognition of the demands, including the need to tackle drugs misuse, upon police resources.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths atttributed to heroin abuse have been recorded in each year since 1977.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The international classification diseases categories do not identify whether a death is due to heroin abuse. The following figures show all deaths where heroin was mentioned in the underlying cause.

	Number
1977	—
1978	—
1979	—
1980	4
1981	3
1982	1
1983	5
1984	10
1985	7
1986	5

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reports he has received about recent deaths in the Glasgow area from heroin abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None. I understand that the circumstances surrounding four recent deaths in Glasgow apparently associated with heroin misuse are being investigated by the procurator fiscal in Glasgow who will in due course submit a report to the Crown Office.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he has paid to the Scottish Development Agency in 1987-88; and how much he expects to pay in 1988-89. 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: The Government's contribution to the Scottish Development Agency for 1987-88 is estimated at £94·9 million. Information about the industry programme for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 will be published in the public expenditure White Paper. Further details will be given in the "Scottish Commentary" and in the annual Supply Estimates.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, he will give the total amounts paid to projects in the Dumbarton constituency by the Scottish Development Agency in each year from 1979 to 1983 in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms based on 1986-87 prices, showing the percentage changes in payments between years.

Mr. Lang: This information is not available.

Parole

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for a review of the parole system in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) on Wednesday 16 December.

General Practitioners (Ancillary Staff)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total cost in the last full year for which figures are available of the 70 per cent. direct reimbursements to unrestricted principals in general practice under the ancillary staff scheme for ancillary staff salaries, and a breakdown of the cost for each health board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: At 31 March 1987, the latest date for which this information is available, the details are as follows:

Health Board	£
Ayrshire and Arran	975,518
Borders	288,554
Argyll and Clyde	803,575
Fife	712,729
Greater Glasgow	1,434,337
Highland	725,657
Lanarkshire	888,950
Grampian	1,217,550
Orkney	58,729
Lothian	2,027,388
Tayside	1,047,791
Forth Valley	719,217
Western Isles	136,431
Dumfries and Galloway	330,076
Shetland	65,083
Total	11,431,765

General Practitioners

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total, and a breakdown for each health board, of the number of unrestricted principals in general practice, as at 1 October 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table:

	Unrestricted principals in post
Scotland	3,271
Health Board
Argyll and Clyde	296
Ayrshire and Arran	238
Borders	69
Dumfries and Galloway	107
Fife	192
Forth Valley	183
Grampian	293
Greater Glasgow	631
Highland	152
Lanarkshire	301
Lothian	494
Orkney	21
Shetland	18
Tayside	249
Western Isles	27

Cold-related Deaths

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of hypothermia and cold-related deaths in each year since 1979 for (a) the Tayside region and (b) the Dundee district authority area.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

Deaths mentioning hypothermia: Tayside region and Dundee district 1979 to 1986

Year	Tayside	Dundee
1979	23	8
1980	20	9
1981	18	8
1982	18	10
1983	17	11
1984	15	5
1985	23	8
1986	20	7

Housing Statistics

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the numbers of (a) flats and (b) houses which are (i) two apartments or less, (ii) three apartments, (iii) four apartments and (iv) five apartments or more, for each of the following (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing

Association, (c) new town development corporations, (d) housing associations and (e) other private rented accommodation;

(2) if he will provide the average weekly rents for (a) flats and (b) houses which are (i) two apartments or less, (ii) three apartments, (iii) four apartments and (iv) five apartments or more, for each of the following (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (c) new town development corporations, (d) housing associations and (e) other private rented accommodation;

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the breakdown of numbers of dwellings and average weekly rents into houses and flats is not collected centrally. Scottish Development Department statistical bulletin HSIU No. 29 "Public Sector Rents in Scotland 1986-87", available in the House Library, contains information on average annual rents by dwelling size.

Rents

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the average registered rents and change on previous rent for (a) housing association tenancies, (b) private furnished tenancies and (c) private unfurnished tenancies, in a form similar to the table on page 37 of "Scottish Housing Statistics 1986".

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information available for 1987 is for the first half year only as follows:

Rent registration: average registered rents and change on previous rents

1987 (January-June)	Mean registered rent £ per annum	Change on mean previous rent per cent.	Number of cases
Housing Associations:
First Registrations	1,047	40	1,281
Re-registrations	1,052	19	5,535
Private:
Furnished
Tenancies	1,821	-22	566
Unfurnished Tenancies:
First Registrations	1,090	31	427
Re-registrations	838	36	2,878
All registrations	871	39	3,305

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the average weekly household expenditure on rent as a percentage of average weekly earnings of tenants of (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (c) new town development corporations, (d) housing associations and (e) other private rented accommodation;

(2) if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the gross average weekly earnings of tenants renting accommodation from (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (c) the new town development corporations, (d) housing associations and (e) other private landlords.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available. Scottish Development Department statistical bulletin HSIU No. 29, "Public Sector Rents in Scotland 1986-87", a copy of which is available in the House Library, contains information comparing local authority average weekly rents with the average gross weekly earnings of a full-time adult manual employee in Scotland.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the estimated numbers of tenants of (a) local authorities, (b) the Scottish Special Housing Association, (c) new town development corporations, (d) housing associations and (e) other private sector landlords who are in receipt of rent rebates or rent allowances for (i) certificated cases and (ii) standard cases.

Mr. Portillo: I have been asked to reply.

I shall let the hon. Member have such information as is available as soon as possible.

Earnings

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the gross average weekly earnings, exclusive of overtime, for (a) registered general nurses, (b) firemen, (c) postmen, (d) waiters and waitresses, (e) shop assistants, (f) ambulancemen, (g) agricultural workers and (h) construction workers.

Mr. Lang: The following information is available from the results of the new earnings survey:

Average gross weekly earnings (including overtime) of full-time employees on adult rates

Scotland, April 1987	£ per week
	Manual men	Non-manual men
Industry:
Agriculture, forestry and fishing	132·6	—
Construction	176·8	248·3

These results are subject to sampling errors.

The survey cannot provide reliable estimates of the corresponding figures for women, nor for the specific occupations listed.

The new earnings survey reports, available in the Library of the House, provide information for Great Britain as a whole for some of the occupations listed.

Springhill Farm Sewage Station

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appeals he has received against the proposal to allow consent to make emergency discharges of screened sewage effluent into Tollcross burn from the proposed sewage pumping station at Springhill farm, Baillieton, Glasgow; if he will list all appellants in the Official Report; and if he will call in this application.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Two requests for call-in have been received. The appellants are as listed. A decision on whether or not to call in the application will be made early in the new year.

1. Shettleston Community Council.
2. Sandyhills East Community Council.

Sea Transport Services

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for shipping subsidies for sea transport services to Scotland in 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Subject to parliamentary approval of the Estimates, I propose to make available in 1988-89 total subsidy provision of £11·84 million. The deficit subsidy provision for Caledonian MacBrayne will reduce in line with recent trends in the company's improved performance to £6·54 million. The estimated requirement to continue the fare reduction support for P and O services to Orkney and Shetland is increased to £4·1 million. On the basis of budgets submitted by coastal bulk shippers within the tariff rebate subsidy scheme, the funding requirement next year will be £1·2 million.

The proposed level of subsidy provision reflects the Government's continuing commitment to assisting the essential sea transport services to the west coast islands and the northern isles.

Education Statistics

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the numbers of pupils from Edinburgh, South constituency who obtained places in further education in each year from 1977 to 1987; and if he will express that number as a percentage of the age group for that year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 October 1987]: The information is not readily available.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the accounting policies of nationalised industries in the light of the discussions which have taken place on the report, "Accounting for Economic Costs and Changing Prices", published in August 1986.

Mr. Major: Successive Governments have pointed out the desirability of making due allowance for changing prices in company accounts. This is particularly important in businesses where, as in a number of the nationalised industries, assets are long lived and where rates of return based on historic cost are inadequate as measures of economic performance.

The nationalised industries have been at the forefront of the application of current cost accounting. The Government have welcomed this and note that some of the industries that have been privatised, in particular those subject to regulation, have decided to maintain current cost accounts. We have noted that the Director General of Telecommunications has proposed that British Telecommunications should publish information on current cost profits.

When the Government published the report of the advisory group, "Accounting for Economic Costs and Changing Prices" they said that sponsor Departments and the Treasury would discuss the general principles described in the report, their merits and their practical application with individual nationalised industries, the nationalised industries' chairmen's group and other interested parties. Discussions with the individual industries and with the chairmen's group have now taken place. There have also been comments by the accountancy bodies and wider discussions.

These discussions have been at a technical level throughout. The majority of corporations have recognised the need to measure economic costs and have indicated ways in which some of the recommendations in the report to that end need modification for practical application. Suggestions have also been made as to how some of the recommendations might be further developed. The discussions have identified certain problems which require further study. They have shown the conditions under which modified historical cost accounts can be used to measure economic performance. These are that in those accounts the revaluations should cover all assets and be regularly updated, and that revalued assets are consistently treated in both the profit and loss account and balance sheet. The discussions have underlined the importance of the distinction made in the report between industries with a substantial degree of influence over their prices—the "price-makers"; and industries whose prices are determined in competitive markets — the "price-takers". The Government are satisfied with the outcome of the discussions and do not propose to take any immediate action. The discussions have been useful in confirming that the present accounting policies of nationalised industries go a long way towards the objective of providing measures of economic costs and that some further progress is in prospect. Present accounting policies should be maintained and reviewed in a year or two so that they continue to develop in ways which fulfil this objective.

Britoil

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he is giving to exercising his power as a special shareholder in Britoil under article 71B of that company's articles of association.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I am currently considering whether any of the circumstances provided for under article 71B of Britoil's articles of association apply in the present situation.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to use Her Majesty's Government's special share in Britoil to prevent any takeover by any other company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: If a takeover bid were made the Government would consider all the circumstances and then decide whether it would be appropriate to use the powers of the special share.

Value Added Tax (Report)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has completed his consideration of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise report of its review of value added tax and other aspects of free zones; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I have considered very carefully the Customs' report of the review which was announced in the White Paper "Building Businesses . . . . Not Barriers". I have also borne in mind the representations I have received concerning free zone rules. Some of the changes sought by free zone operators would be contrary to European Community legislation and others would be contrary to the interests of fair competition with the rest of the economy.

I have concluded that the existing rules are generally equitable and are soundly based. There is no evidence that they discourage the entrepot trade which the free zones were designed to encourage.

However, I have decided that one change to the present rules is desirable to allow greater flexibility to free zone traders. Where goods manufactured in free zones are removed to the rest of the United Kingdom, import VAT is presently charged on their full value, including the value of United Kingdom materials, labour and overheads. This system of charging import VAT on United Kingdom elements is unique to free zones and was introduced to avoid the need for possibly complex calculations to ascertain the import VAT due on the imported elements alone. I am prepared to accept traders' assurances that such calculations can be made without undue difficulty. I propose to remove the anomaly and allow traders to pay import VAT on the imported elements only. However, traders may continue to pay tax on the full value if they prefer to avoid the need to support a claim to a lower value.

The necessary amendments to the Free Zone Regulations 1984 (SI 1984 No. 1177) will be laid before the House shortly.

Coinage (Consultation)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the results of the public consultation on the coinage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lawson: In July this year the Royal Mint issued a consultation pamphlet "The United Kingdom Coinage". This set out four options for making the coinage lighter. Comments were invited from the general public and from those with special interests such as the blind and elderly, those who handle large amounts of coins, and the manufacturers and users of coin operated machines.

The consultation period ended in September. More than 3,000 replies were received. A majority of those who commented on the options favoured that in which the 5p is replaced by a coin similar to the old sixpence, and the 10p with one similar to the existing 5p. This was option 4 in the pamphlet. Having carefully considered the responses to the consultation, I have decided to introduce new 5p and 10p coins, as in option 4. This will reduce the overall weight of the coinage considerably. It will also complete the change from the pre-decimal coins.

The precise specifications for the new coins will be announced later, after further consultation about the details with the blind and with manufacturers of coin-operated machines. The new 5p will be issued first, probably in 1991 to give plenty of notice of the change, and the 10p will be issued two or three years later. The new coins will be issued with the same designs as the present coins.

On 12 November 1984 I informed the House that I had instructed the Bank of England to cease issuing £1 notes after the end of that year, but that the notes would continue to be legal tender for at least a further year. That further period has long since elapsed, and there are now very few series D £1 notes still in active circulation. Accordingly, the Bank is announcing today that, after 11 March 1988, series D Bank of England £1 notes will cease to be legal tender. This announcement does not affect the status of £1 notes issued by Scottish banks.

Government Manpower

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of staff in post in central Government Departments at 1 October.

Mr. Major: At 1 October 1987 there were 585,070 staff in post in central Government Departments. Of these, 509,133 were non-industrials and 75,937 were industrials.

Rating Reform

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether payment by employers or other of the community charge for occupants of Government homes, ministerial homes, charitable homes, convenants and monasteries will be treated as a taxable benefit and as a taxable expense for those who pay it.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 16 December 1987]: Where there is an employer-employee relationship a benefit chargeable to income tax will arise for the employee if the employer pays the community charge on his behalf. In other circumstances the tax treatment of the payment of the community charge on behalf of another person will depend on the particular facts. The employer will normally be able to claim a deduction for the payment in calculating his profits for tax purposes.

Taxation

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to reduce the percentage of earnings taken in income tax, national insurance contributions and indirect taxes below the level pertaining in 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 16 December 1987]: The Government have already succeeded in reducing the percentage of earnings taken in taxes and national insurance contributions from the levels reached in 1981-82. Those levels reflected the need at that time to give priority to the control of public borrowing. It remains the Government's aim to bring taxes down further when prudent to do so.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much income tax was repaid to children under 18 years of age as a result of tax claims made on their behalf for the 1985-86 financial year.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 16 December 1987]: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the number of persons paying tax under schedule D for the last 10 years for which information is available.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The information readily available for a full 10-year period covers those who were both liable to tax on their total income and had a source of schedule D case I or II (self-employment) income. Where husband and wife in a taxpaying couple each has a source of schedule D case I or II income, they are counted separately in the table:

Year	Number of persons (million)
1976-77	1·9
1977-78	1·9
1978-79	2·0
1979-80	2·0
1980-81	2·0
1981-82	2·1
1982-83	2·2
1983-84	2·2
1984-85	2·3
1985-86	2·4

Profit-related Pay

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many profit-related pay schemes had been submitted for approval to the Inland Revenue under the provisions of section 1 of the Finance (No. 2) Act 1987 as at 30 November.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 16 December 1987]: By the end of November 363 applications for registration of profit-related pay schemes had been received by the Inland Revenue.

Privatisation

Mr. Doran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his latest estimate of receipts from the privatisation of state-owned enterprises over each of the next four financial years.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: There is no change to the estimate given in the 1987 Autumn Statement.

British Telecom

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he expects to raise any money from the sale of any British Telecom shares in 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: No decisions have yet been taken about individual sales in 1988-89.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value of his remaining shareholding in British Telecom.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: At market close on 14 December the value of the Government's residual holding of ordinary and preference shares in British Telecom was some £6·65 billion.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the total cost to the Treasury in 1987-88 of mortgage interest tax relief, if such relief were restricted to base rate income tax; and if he will estimate the regional share of mortgage interest tax relief, restricted to base rate income tax, based on the most recent available data from the family expenditure survey.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The cost of mortgage interest relief in 1987-88 is estimated to be about £4¾ billion, of which £330 million relates to the cost of relief at income tax rates in excess of basic rate.

For a regional distribution of mortgage interest relief based on data from the family expenditure survey (FES), I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply which I gave the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 22 July at columns 233-34. As the sample size for the FES is relatively small, estimates of the regional distribution of mortgage interest relief at basic rate based on the FES would not be significantly different from the distribution of total mortgage interest relief.

DEFENCE

Housing (BAOR)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he intends to provide the additional funds to improve the standards of housing for service men in the British Army on the Rhine; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Funds are already provided for the improvement of accommodation for service men in BAOR, and modernisation programmes both for single living accommodation and for married quarters have been running for some years. These are continuing and although I would wish to provide additional funds to complete them more quickly they must compete with other priorities within the defence budget, and with other demands in the BAOR building programme.

Munster Garrison

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the maintenance and repair of ordnance in the Munster garrison of the British Army of the Rhine is to be carried out under cover and within modern workshops; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The improvement of the maintenance and repair facilities at Waterloo barracks, Munster is presently planned for the mid-1990s. This is part of a long-term programme of work to modernise working conditions in many of those barracks we occupy in BAOR which were not designed for the sophisticated and heavy equipment now in service. The work has to compete with other priorities within the Army budget and this project must in turn compete with other building demands in BAOR. All priorities are kept under regular review, but I do not see any prospect yet for bringing this project forward in the programme.

Service Hospitals

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide in the Official Report full lists of (a) all Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force hospitals and (b) all service establishments which contain in-patient hospital facilities, listing in each case the number of beds established, the number of beds occupied on any recent convenient date, the nursing establishment and the relative number of nurses currently employed.

Mr. Freeman: There are 18 service hospitals:

Navy
RNH Haslar
RNH Plymouth
RNH Gibraltar

Army
QEMH Woolwich
CMH Aldershot
DKMH Catterick
MW Belfast [1]
BMH Berlin
BMH Dharan
BMH Hannover
BMH Hong Kong
BMH Munster
BMH Rinteln

Royal Air Force
PARAF (H) Wroughton
TPOWRAF (H) Ely
PMRAF (H) Halton
RAF (H) Akrotiri
RAF (H) Wegberg

[1] Military wing attached to Musgrave Park civilian hospital.

There are no in-patient hospital facilities at other service establishments. I shall answer shortly with the statistical information required for each hospital.

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many beds in service hospitals facilities are now occupied by National Health Service patients; and what are the present arrangements for funding the care of such patients.

Mr. Freeman: The average daily bed occupancy of NHS in-patients at United Kingdom service hospital facilities of the third quarter 1987 was 649, which included 121 service dependants. NHS patients are currently admitted subject to resources being available and treated without charge to the NHS. Exceptionally ex-service far east prisoners of war are treated on an extra cost basis and, at RAF hospital Ely, NHS patients are treated in 65 reserved beds under a local contract with the district health authority.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988;

(2) what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations offices of the armed forces; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes) on 16 November 1987, at columns 446-47. No significant change in the number of staff employed by the defence public relations staffs of the Ministry of Defence is envisaged in the next year.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89;

(2) what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by the armed forces on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what is the estimated expenditure in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Ian Stewart: This information is not held centrally. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89;

(2) what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by the armed forces on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88; (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) gave to him on 17 July 1987, at column 676. The estimate for 1988-89 is similar to that for 1987-88.

Nuclear Weapons

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, Official Report, 23 November, column 36, if he will list what information he has as to the specific numbers of both nuclear warheads and launch vehicles to be withdrawn in accordance with the intermediate nuclear forces treaty.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The INF treaty provides for the withdrawal of 859 US missiles and 283 launchers; and 1,752 Soviet missiles and 845 launchers. While for the purposes of the treaty all missiles are deemed to carry nuclear warheads, in practice a proportion may be armed with conventional or chemical warheads; and some non-deployed missiles included in these figures may not be equipped with warheads. A full breakdown of the missiles and equipment to be eliminated is contained in the memorandum of understanding on data, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Conventional Forces

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give his latest estimate of the conventional balance of forces between the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the Warsaw pact, including manpower, tanks, artillery, anti-tank weapons, aircraft, aircraft carriers and submarines.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to annex A of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1987," pages 61-66.

Gateway Motor Auctions (Stirling) Ltd.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, mindful of the fraud perpetrated on his Department by Gateway Motor Auctions (Stirling) Ltd. in 1985 and 1986, he has instituted any changes in the monitoring of vehicle disposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Yes, I am aware of the embezzlement by the directors of the company, but it would not be in the public interest to disclose details of changes in the Department's monitoring and auditing arrangements.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations he has made into the accounting procedures applied by his Department in its dealings with Gateway Motor Auctions (Stirling) Limited in 1985 and 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Following an investigation of the circumstances, not yet complete, procedures have been strengthened, and further safeguards are being explored for inclusion in the arrangements when these are renewed in 1988.

Mr. Frank McGrath

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he takes to ensure that Mr. Frank McGrath, assistant director of technical costs in his Department is not in breach of his contract with the Government as a result of his appointment as an instructor of courses run by Lion International, or in breach of any requirement for confidentiality on matters relating to his Department.

Mr. Sainsbury: Departmental procedures require staff wishing to publish articles or give lectures to seek prior approval. The text of any material to be published, or lecture notes, are also cleared before hand. Mr. McGrath sought and obtained approval to give a talk, in his own time, at a seminar run by Lion International, in March 1986, and nas given similar talks since then. No breach of contract or confidentiality is involved.

EMPLOYMENT

Food and Agriculture Industries

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the unemployment rate in the food and agriculture sectors of the British economy for each year since 1983.

Mr. Lee: Information on the previous industry of unemployed claimants is not collected.

The information available from the labour force survey does not permit unemployment rates by industry to be calculated on a basis comparable with whole economy unemployment rates, because at least one third of the unemployed did not give a previous industry, mainly because they had not had a job in the previous three years.

Unemployment rates calculated for those recording a previous job in the industries concerned are as follows

	1983 Per cent.	1984 Per cent.	1985 Per cent.	1986 Per cent.
Division O: Agriculture, Forestry and Fishing	5	6	5	6
Classes 41 and 42: Food, Drink and Tobacco	10	9	10	8

Source: Labour Force Surveys, spring each year.

Benefits

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if, pursuant to his answers of 9 November, Official Report, columns 49-50, relating to unemployment benefit and vacancies; he will institute the collection and collation of information regarding vacancies and applicants for unemployment benefit, in order to identify those claimants available for work in occupations for which vacancies exist.

Mr. Lee: The basic objective of the recent merger between the unemployment benefit service and the jobcentre service is to bring together the work of both organisations to provide a more coherent and effective service for unemployed people. As part of the integration process the new employment service is examining more effective ways of bringing suitable vacancies to the attention of claimants.

Textile and Knitwear Industry

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he is satisfied with the quality and quantity of job training for the textile and knitwear industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department does not collect detailed information on the amount or nature of training undertaken by individual employers. This reflects the Government's view that responsibility for training rests primarily with industry. Although I am generally satisfied that there is a commitment to training in the textile and knitwear industry, I believe that greater investment is called for if the industry is to be competitive in world markets.

Agricultural Machinery

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to introduce legislation concerning agricultural machinery safety mechanisms.

Mr. Nicholls: There is already legislation on the safety of agricultural machinery. I understand that the European Commission is preparing a proposal for a directive to harmonise the laws of the member states relating to the safety of machines, including those used in agriculture. Meanwhile, I have no plans to introduce further legislation.

Rhymney Benefit Office

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations his Department has received about the closure of the Rhymney benefit office, Mid Glamorgan; and whether he will reconsider the decision to close, in the light of more representations.

Mr. Lee: Representations were received from the hon. Member, Rhymney community council, the Rhymney Valley district council and the Rhymney branch of the Labour party. The decision to close the office was made after careful consideration of all the local circumstances which remain unchanged. I see no reason to reconsider the decision.

Miss Ira Celia Utieyione (Work Permit)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will review the decision communicated on 3 December 1987 by Karen O'Toole, on behalf of the overseas labour section of the Department of Employment, to Peter Hey of the South Sands hotel, Salcombe, in respect of his application for a work permit for Miss Ira Celia Utieyione, reference SS/8714617, to employ her as an overseas national trainee, in the light of further information contained in a letter from Mr. Hey to the hon. Member for South Hams on 7 December 1987, sent to his Department on 10 December 1987.

Mr. Lee: I shall review the decision and write to my hon. Friend.

Women and Young People

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what representations his Department has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of regulation 6(1)(vii) to (xi) of the Pottery (Health and Welfare) Special Regulations 1950 which prohibits women and young persons from employment in specified processes which may expose them to clay and silica dust;

(2) what representations his Department has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of section 205 of the Public Health Act 1936 for England and Wales and the fifth schedule of the Factories Act 1961 for Scotland, which prohibit the employment of a woman in a factory within four weeks of giving birth;

(3) what representations his Department has received calling for the denunciation of International Labour Organisation convention 45; Underground Work (Women) and European Social Charter article 8(4)(b);

(4) what representations his Department has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of section 93 of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 which prohibits women and young people from lifting, carrying or moving a load so heavy as likely to cause injury at a mine;

(5) what representations his Department has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of section 124(1) of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 and section 21(1) of the Sex Discrimination Act 1975, which prohibits the employment of women below ground in mines;

(6) what representations his Department has received since 1977, calling for the repeal of section 4 of the Factories Act 1961, which prohibits the employment of women and young persons in certain processes connected with lead manufacture in factories;

(7) what representations his Department has received since 1977 calling for the repeal of regulations 6(1)(i) to (vi) of the Pottery (Health and Welfare) Special Regulations 1950, which prohibit women and young people from employment in specified processes involving lead.

Mr. Nicholls: No record has been kept. However, these provisions were included in the 1979 Equal Opportunities Commission report "Health and Safety Legislation: Should we distinguish between men and women?"

In addition, the European Commission communication "Protective Legislation for Women in the Member States of the European Community" (COM(87)105 final) drew attention to the fact that much protective legislation was contrary to the equal treatment directive (Council directive 76/207/EEC). The Government have issued a consultative document on "Restrictions on Employment of Young People and the Removal of Sex Discrimination in Legislation" which examines such legislation, suggests possible ways forward and seeks views.

Steel Industry

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish statistics for the number of (a) fatal and (b) other accidents in the British steel industry since 1977 and any comparable information available to him about Japan.

Mr. Nicholls: The available information for reported accidents to employees in the iron and steel industry in Great Britain is as follows. Comparable figures for Japan are not available.

Reported occupational injuries to employees in the iron and steel industry (Minimum List Heading 311 of Standard Industrial Classification 1968) in Great Britain

Figures for 1986-87 are provisional and were collected under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 (RIDDOR). This introduced a wider definition of "major injuries" and there are no figures available for the iron and steel industry so that the wider category of "metal manufacturing" is used. The figures under that category are 16 fatalities, 533 major injuries and 3,814 "over three days" injuries.

Labour and Social Affairs Council

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the European Community Labour and Social Affairs Council held in Brussels on 1 December.

Mr. Lee: I represented the United Kingdom at the Council.

We welcome the adoption by the Council of conclusions on action to combat long-term unemployment which arise from the action programme on employment growth (adopted under the British presidency in December 1986). The conclusions suggest a series of specific measures which might be taken by member states towards reducing the levels of long-term unemployment and invite the Commission to present an action programme.

An action programme on the training of young people for adult and working life was adopted. The programme aims to provide all young people in the Community with up to two years vocational training; the Government welcome particularly its emphasis on projects which encourage the development of enterprise.

The Council adopted a resolution on safety, health and hygiene at work which sets valuable guidelines for applying the provisions of article 118A of the treaty of Rome; this is a new article introduced under the Single European Act, which gives the Council power, acting by a qualified majority, to adopt minimum requirements for the health and safety of workers. The Council adopted a common position — the first stage in the co-operation procedure with the European Parliament — on a draft directive to proscribe four specified carcinogens.

Other matters discussed, but not conclusively, included a fresh action programme for the vocational and social integration of people with disabilities, and a draft directive on protection from the risks of exposure to benzene.

WALES

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new provisions have been made by his Department during this past three years to improve dental care for mentally handicapped people in Gwynedd under the all-Wales strategy for mentally handicapped persons; how much money has been provided from strategy resources for each such initiative; and if he will list them, noting the date at which they are expected to be fully operational.

Mr. Grist: Under the all-Wales strategy, all providers of services are expected to promote access for people with a mental handicap to the facilities available to the community at large, including dental care. In addition to the generality of funding we are making available to the Gwynedd health authority, my right hon. Friend is providing on a recurrent basis £24,500 for the authority to employ three whole-time equivalent dental hygienists working solely with people with mental handicaps. For further details about these services the hon. Gentleman might care to contact the general manager of Gwynedd health authority.

Health Authorities (Expenditure)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales at what frequency during the course of a financial year health authorities in Wales are required to submit their current account expenditure figures to his Department; whether they are also required to compare such actual year to-date expenditure with a calendarised year to-date budget; and whether his Department monitors the performance against budget of these authorities, in global terms or by departmental performance.

Mr. Grist: The Department's role in monitoring is related to the totality of the resources available to each authority. Control and monitoring of individual budgets within the notified allocations is the management responsibility of health authorities.

The Department monitors the financial performance of health authorities through a financial information system designed to provide and update information about cash expenditure in relation to allocated resources. At the start of each financial year, each authority provides the Department with a cumulative monthly profile of its anticipated demands for cash within the totality of its notified cash limit allocations. This is revised on a regular basis to take account of any change to the authority's spending plans, or any adjustment to its notified cash limit. Cumulative cash expenditure returns, submitted on a monthly basis, are then compared with this profile so that any overspend can be identified and early action taken, in consultation with the authority concerned, to recover the situation.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the likely budget overspending in the current financial year of each of the nine health authorities in Wales, respectively, on the basis of the latest information available to him; and if he will identify any additional loan finance which he is making available to each of these authorities to enable them to remain solvent during the current financial year.

Mr. Grist: The information is as follows:

Revenue resources cash overspending/(underspending)[1]

	£ million
Clwyd	0·06
East Dyfed	0·49
Gwent	1·49
Gwynedd	1·49
Mid Glamorgan	1·66
Pembrokeshire	0·20
Powys	(0·07)
South Glamorgan	(0·19)
West Glamorgan	0·29

[1] Based on the monthly returns to the 31 October of actual cash spending against profiles of expected cash spending provided by health authorities.

Health authorities have a duty to contain their expenditure within notified cash limits and I do not therefore expect any authority to overspend in cash terms at the end of the year. In recognition of their financial problems, I have made loans of £1 million available to Gwent and Gwynedd health authorities in the current financial year.

Welsh Office Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, how many persons are employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in dealing with health responsibilities; and what were the comparable numbers so engaged in May 1979.

Mr. Grist: The numbers are available only in respect of staff dealing with health and social services responsibilities and are:

	1 May 1979	1 December 1987
Full-time	320	257
Part-time	5	19
Total (full-time equivalent)	322½	266½

In addition, staff in the Department's central services divisions provide relevant support services including health statistics.

Regional Aid

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the total expenditure in the current financial year on regional policy in Wales; and what is the financial provision for such spending being made for the financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Grist: Estimated expenditure for 1987-88 on regional selective assistance and regional development grants in Wales totals £98 million. Expenditure plans for 1988-89 will be shown in the 1988 public expenditure White Paper and details of the regional selective assistance and regional development grants provision in the Supply Estimates.

Health Authorities (Wage Awards)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each of the nine health authorities in Wales the estimated cost of the absence of central funding of wage awards by his Department over the past two years.

Mr. Grist: The cost of pay awards borne by district health authorities over the past two years in excess of central funding is estimated as follows:

	1986-87 £ million	1987-88 £ million
Clwyd	0·453	0·403
East Dyfed	0·292	0·258
Gwent	0·573	0·482
Gwynedd	0·300	0·261
Mid Glamorgan	0·669	0·584
Powys	0·132	0·117
South Glamorgan	0·770	0·659
West Glamorgan	0·454	0·405
Pembrokeshire	0·093	0·091

Note: Estimates based on actual settlements for review bodies' staff (ie medical and dental, nurses and midwives and the professions allied to medicine) and for other staff at 6 per cent. settlement has been assumed for 1986-87 and a 5 per cent. settlement for 1987-88. Firmer estimates for other staff would require detailed information from individual authorities about the staff in post and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Health Authorities (Staff)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing for each of the health authorities in Wales the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff who are employed on administration for the latest date for which figures are available, together with corresponding figures for each of the past seven years.

Mr. Grist: The requested information, which relates to all administrative and clerical staff employed by health authorities in Wales at 30 September each year, is given in the following table.

Dyfed (Traffic Volumes)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the increase in traffic volumes in the Dyfed county council area over the past five years; what representations have been made by the council; and if he will make a statement on the finance made available over the past five years and in the settlement year 1988-89 for its transport programme.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information on traffic volumes in the Dyfed county council area is not available but I have recently met representatives of Dyfed county council to discuss other highway matters.

Since 1983-84 capital allocations to the county council for expenditure supported by transport supplementary grant have totalled £22·9 million. The 1988-89 TSG settlement for Dyfed amounts to £1·904 million. Since 1985-86 provision for transport expenditure falling outside the TSG criterion has been covered by the overall formula capital allocations to counties for all other services. From 1985-86 for Dyfed these amounted to £28·6 million. For 1988-89 the provision is £11·1 million.

Dyfed (Approved Projects)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what projects of regional or national importance have been approved for Dyfed in each of the past five years and in the year 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since 1983 Dyfed county council has received one allocation for a project of regional or national importance (PRNI) of £0·9 million (1987-88—1989-90) in respect of the A4139 route 9 access road to the Pembroke dock enterprise zone. Preseli Pembrokeshire and South Pembrokeshire district councils have received allocations of £0·8 million (1984-85—1985-86) and £1·55 million (1984-85 — 1987-88) respectively for enterprise zones.

In addition, Dyfed county council has received a special project allocation in respect of Haverfordwest college of education of £3·930 million (1987-88—1989-90).

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether Deloitte, Haskins and Sells management consultancy division is being retained to give any further advice or assistance to his Department, or directly to the health authority, following the recent completion of its final report on the financial position of the Gwynedd health authority.

Mr. Grist: I have agreed to the contract with Deloitte, Haskins and Sells being extended to the end of this financial year so that it can provide further support and assistance to Gwynedd health authority in developing its action plan for achieving financial balance.

Steelworkers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will initiate a study of the effects in the Newport area of redundancy and premature retirement on the mental and physical health of steelworkers and their families; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No such study is planned.

Public Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the number of persons whom he nominates to each of those public bodies in respect of which he (a) has sole responsibility for making all or a majority of appointments and (b) has responsibility for making a minority of appointments, or some or all of the appointments, jointly with other Ministers;

(2) when he will be appointing members, or a member, to those public bodies in Wales in respect of which he has responsibility for making all or some appointments himself, or jointly with other Ministers, and in each case how many members he will be appointing and what proportion of his appointees on that body they represent.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

National Museum of Wales

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of the industrial department of the National Museum of Wales, Cardiff.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The future of the industry department is linked with that of the Welsh industrial and maritime museum which must be considered in the context of the wider proposals for the Cardiff bay.

Cancer

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the incidence of various forms of cancer in the areas of each general practice in Meirionnydd Nant Conwy in each year since 1957.

Mr. Grist: Data are not available in the form requested. The available information relates to the district of Meirionnydd for the period 1974 to 1983 and is shown in the following table.

	Number	Average [1]	Standardised registration rate (Wales = 100)
Oesophagus	40	14·6	114

[1] Annual registration rate per 100,000 population.

Land Disposal

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications for consent to dispose of land under section 32 of the Housing Act 1985 he has received from each of the housing authorities in Wales; and which of the applications received his consent.

Mr. Grist: This information is not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Nursery Schools

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the total public expenditure spent on nursery schools and classes each year from 1975 to 1985 and (b) the total public expenditure on these services as a percentage of gross domestic product for each of these years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Estimated expenditure on educational provision for all under-fives, whether in nursery or primary schools in Wales, and the relevant percentages of GDP for each year are as follows:

	Expenditure £ million (cash)	Percentage of GDP
1976-77	14·8	0·011
1977-78	15·2	0·010
1978-79	16·5	0·009
1979-80	18·3	0·009
1980-81	25·0	0·011
1981-82	26·1	0·010
1982-83	27·4	0·010
1983-84	28·7	0·009
1984-85	29·3	0·009
1985-86	32·3	0·008

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total spending in 1987-88 on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material is £576,500.

For 1988-89 detailed decisions on expenditure by media have not yet been taken but I expect the overall publicity figure to be about £700,000.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total estimated expenditure on press and public relations in 1987-88 is £1,047,500. This figure includes expenditure on salaries and accommodation for all the information grades and support staff.

The total estimated expenditure on press and public relations in 1988-89 is £1,198,000. The figure includes expenditure on salaries and accommodation for all the information grades and support staff.

Eye Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list area by area in Wales the numbers of treatment for eye diseases recorded in each of the years since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Information for the number of in-patients and day cases treated in the specialty of opthalmology by the NHS, is given in the following table.

Health authority	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
Clwyd	1,401	1,539	1,525	1,546	1,743	1,803	1,819
East Dyfed	955	900	839	1,025	1,041	1,153	1,170
Gwent	1,149	1,346	1,073	1,314	1,260	1,060	1,542
Gwynedd	947	887	881	958	878	1,301	1,374
Mid Glamorgan	1,896	2,022	1,900	2,327	2,358	2,333	3,482
Pembrokeshire	—	—	—	16	24	36	17
Powys	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
South Glamorgan	1,455	1,713	1,439	1,715	1,860	1,772	1,708
West Glamorgan	951	1,071	983	1,097	1,101	1,210	1,315

As in other areas of NHS activity, these data show that levels of patient throughput have increased significantly in recent years.

Hospital Eye Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioners referrals of patients to the hospital eye service there were in each of the years from 1980.

Mr. Grist: Information for the number of patients who were prescribed a pair of glasses by the hospital eye service in Wales is given in the following table. It is not possible to say how many of these patients were referred by their general practitioners.

	Number
1980	14,164
1981	14,508
1982	12,479
1983	12,143
1984	12,333
1985	12,701
1986[1]	11,660

[1] Provisional estimate.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the chairman of the University Grants Committee in the last four weeks.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have spoken to him on one occasion.

St. David's Forum

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the participation of senior civil servants of his Department (a) on the steering committee of the St. David's forum and (b) in the particular meeting of the St. David's forum at the Cliff's hotel, Gwbert-on-Sea, Dyfed, on the weekend of 28-29 November, was with his permission.

Mr. Peter Walker: My predecessor agreed to Welsh Office participation in the forum, which has my continued support.

Privately Owned Housing

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to respond to the Select Committee on Welsh Affairs' report on the condition and repair of privately owned housing in Wales.

Mr. Grist: I am glad to be able to tell the hon. Gentleman that the Government's response to the Select Committee report on this subject has been presented to the Committee today. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Clwyd Health Authority (Headquarters Extension)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the proposed cost of the planned extension to the headquarters of the Clwyd health authority.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter of operational policy for Clwyd health authority and I suggest that the hon. Gentleman writes to the district general manager.

Cancer Patients, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to enable cancer sufferers in Clwyd to receive treatment in Clwyd as opposed to treatment in Wirral; how many Clwyd patients have been treated in England for cancer for each of the years 1980 to 1987; what consultations he has had with English health authorities and hospital consultants on the prospects of treatment for cancer in Clwyd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office published in 1988 the report of a comprehensive review of regional services, including radiotherapy and medical oncology, delivered to patients in north Wales. The Department's decisions on the report were announced, following consultation, in 1987. Discussions have been held with officials of Clwyd health authority on the report's recommendations, including the funding of medical oncology in the district. Representatives of the Welsh Office and Clwyd and Gwynedd health authorities are to meet officials of Mersey regional health authority in the new year to discuss the report and in particular the Department's intention to commission a study of options for improving the provisions of cancer services to north Wales patients. Information on the number of Clwyd residents receiving treatment in England for cancer is not readily available.

Children with Special Needs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will allocate extra funds to Clwyd health authority in order to appoint two more speech therapists and two more physiotherapists to deal with children with special needs.

Mr. Grist: The bid submitted by Clwyd district health authority under the joint finance arrangements for the funding of two speech therapists and two physiotherapists is currently under consideration alongside all other joint finance bids. Decisions will be announced in the new year.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will order a review of joint financing in Wales and make available extra funds to authorities in Wales with a view to making urgent improvements to speech therapy provision.

Mr. Grist: The number of whole-time equivalent speech therapists in Wales has doubled since 1979. The determination of staffing levels is the responsibility of district health authorities using their discretionary resources and applications for central funding such as joint finance as appropriate.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake a tour of language units in Clwyd schools to meet parents, teachers and speech therapists to discuss improvements in the staffing provision in speech therapy.

Mr. Grist: No. The determination of appropriate staffing levels in speech therapy is the responsibility of the district health authority.

Lluesty Hospital, Holywell

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will allocate extra cash to Clwyd health authority to avert ward closures at Lluesty hospital, Holywell.

Mr. Grist: It is for the management of Clwyd health authority to provide the most effective service within the resources provided. Any proposal for a substantial permanent variation in service at Lluesty hospital would be subject to the usual consultation arrangements.

Physiotherapy (Clwyd)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will allocate extra cash to Clwyd health authority for physiotherapy provision in Clwyd hospitals, and in particular Mancot community hospital.

Mr. Grist: The only application that the Welsh Office has received from Clwyd health authority for funding physiotherapist posts is a joint finance bid for two posts which is currently under consideration.

Deeside Community Hospital

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet representatives of Clwyd health authority with a view to establishing a firm date for the start of the building of Deeside community hospital and to restoring the proposed hospital to its original size and projected cost.

Mr. Grist: No. Our officials have already discussed with representatives of Clwyd district health authority the implications of their capital programme and a further meeting has been arranged for January. Proposals for Deeside community hospital will form a part of that discussion. Responsibility for the funding scale and timing of service developments in Clwyd rests with the health authority.

Welsh Language

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to how many independent schools in Wales teach Welsh as a second language; and how many pupils attend these classes.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Comprehensive information is not available.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to how many independent schools in Wales provide education through the medium of Welsh for all or part of the curriculum.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No independent schools in Wales provide education through the medium of Welsh.

Children's Play

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to encourage the development of children's play in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: Following the liquidation of Playboard in March of this year, a panel was set up drawn from the voluntary sector, the Welsh Counties Committee, the Committee of Welsh District Councils and the Sports Council for Wales to advise on the allocation of £50,000 earmarked for expenditure in 1987-88 and on the way forward for children's play in Wales. The panel has recently reported and I have decided that for this financial year I will make the following allocations.

(a) £35,000 will be made available to help equip play resource centres. These centres which provide play equipment such as inflatable castles etc. on loan to groups working in the community. I am seeking bids from voluntary and public bodies to utilise these funds.

(b) £10,000 will be provided to the Wales Play Association to help towards their set-up costs and to undertake a training initiative.

(c) £5,000 will be made available to help establish the organisation to take forward children's play in the longer term.

For the longer term, I have asked the Committee of Welsh District Councils to set up a management committee to act as a host body for the development of children's play in Wales.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much low and intermediate radioactive waste is produced in National Health Service hospitals in Wales.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 14 December 1987]: Virtually all the waste from the use of radioactive substances in medical practice consists of low or very low-level material, which is disposed of in accordance with licensing conditions and local arrangements. Details of such disposals are kept by district health authorities, but are not held centrally. Any waste not suitable for disposal, including the very small quantities of intermediate-level wate in the form of redundant radioactive sources, is stored and disposed of as appropriate utilising the national disposal service. The amount is included in the national waste inventory published in the annual reports of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, which are available in the Library.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Peter Walker: 18½ under the Director of Information. At present no change is envisaged for 1988.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Fund

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether all the legislation necessary for the operation of the social fund and the reformed structure of income-related benefits in Northern Ireland after April 1988 is now in place; if he has any plans in the near future to bring forward legislation by Order in Council on matters of social security; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The main primary legislation necessary for the operation of the social fund and the reformed structure of income-related benefits in Northern Ireland after April 1988 is already in place; the necessary subordinate legislation will be in place shortly. In addition, it is proposed to make an Order in Council containing social security provisions for Northern Ireland corresponding to those for Great Britain contained in the Social Security Bill.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice he is giving to officers administering the social fund in areas in Northern Ireland as to the procedure to be adopted in the event of their exceeding their allocations for grants and loans before the end of a year, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: No such advice will be necessary. Each social security office will be expected to contain its payments within the amounts allocated.

Equal Opportunities (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the next report on the monitoring of equal opportunities within the Northern Ireland Civil Service will be published.

Mr. Stanley: The second report of the Northern Ireland Civil Service's equal opportunities unit is being published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

The report shows that there is a continuing increase in both the numbers of women and in the numbers of Roman Catholics within the Northern Ireland Civil Service. Between 1 January 1985 and 1 January 1987, the overall proportion of women increased by 0·4 percentage points to 49·5 per cent. and at the higher grade levels (staff officer equivalent and above) by 2·0 percentage points to 13·1 per cent. The overall proportion of Roman Catholics increased by 1·1 percentage points to 33·7 per cent. and at the higher grades by 1·9 percentage points to 21·5 per cent. The numbers of registered disabled staff (228) declined from the 1985 position of 265 officers and their proportion of total staff fell from 1·2 per cent. to 1 per cent.

The report provides an analysis undertaken on behalf of the Civil Service Commission for Northern Ireland which demonstrates that the service is attracting applicants from all sections of the community. Compared with earlier years, women and Roman Catholics form a greater proportion of staff entering at executive officer level and above; there is an expectation that entrants at this level will progress to the higher reaches of the service.

The report contains an account of the extension of monitoring arrangements to industrial staff and provides a breakdown of the composition of this group.

The report breaks new ground by analysing in detail the various stages of two major recruitment competitions and indicates how this work will be developed. It also contains the first in-depth analysis of an occupational group—the training centre staff of the Department of Economic Development.

As in the first report, the unit describes how it intends to develop its work, building on the comprehensive foundations already laid. I hope that this important report will be widely read and studied. It represents an extremely thorough, comprehensive and open examination of personnel practices within the Northern Ireland Civil Service and provides further evidence of the Government's concern to ensure that fair employment is a reality in Northern Ireland.

Job Release Scheme

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future of the job release scheme and new workers scheme in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: In line with the action taken to end both those schemes in Great Britain I have decided that both schemes will close in Northern Ireland from 31 January 1988. All existing applications for job release will be considered if a proposed date of early retirement is no later than 31 January 1988 except that applications with a release date of up to 31 March 1988 may be considered in exceptional circumstances. In relation to the new workers scheme applications can be considered under this scheme only if the job to be supported starts on or before 31 January 1988 and all other conditions are met. Applications must be received at the Department of Economic Development within 13 weeks of the date the job started.

Heart Operations

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what information is available as to indicate the current waiting lists in Northern Ireland for each category of heart operation at present and at each quarter since December 1983;

(2) what information is available to indicate the number of patients on the waiting list for heart operations since December 1983 who have died before having their operation.

Mr. Needham: The table shows the total waiting list for cardiac surgery at the end of each quarter since December 1983. A recent review of waiting lists means that the figure at 30 September 1987 is not comparable with those at earlier dates. Information is not held centrally on the type of operation required by patients on the waiting list or on the number of patients who die before their operation.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate by category and by hospital the number of heart operations performed in each quarter since December 1983.

Mr. Needham: The royal Victoria hospital is the only hospital in Northern Ireland which carries out cardiac surgery. The numbers of heart operations notified to the Department through the hospital activity analysis scheme are shown below.

It is estimated that this scheme captures data on 90 per cent. of cases treated at the royal Victoria hospital.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to him to indicate average waiting periods for heart surgery in Northern Ireland in relation to those in regions in Britain and elsewhere in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Needham: The table shows the number of patients on the cardiac surgery waiting list at 30 September 1987 by waiting time.

Waiting time	Number

Because of regional differences in the designation of cardiac and thoracic surgery, it is not possible to compare the Northern Ireland figures with those for other parts of the United Kingdom or the European Economic Community.

Heart Disease

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to him to indicate the rates of heart disease in Northern Ireland in relation to those in regions in Britain and elsewhere in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Needham: The table shows the age-standardised mortality rates from ischaemic heart disease in 1980 for males and females for those countries for which data were available. These details have been extracted from figures produced by the World Health Organisation and they represent the most recent information available in its data bank.

"Change of Heart" Campaign

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the "Change of Heart" campaign.

Mr. Needham: There has been widespread interest throughout the community in the "Change of Heart" programme since it was launched in October 1986. A number of initiatives have been developed involving a wide range of organisations and interests in public services, business, the voluntary sector and the community.

An integral part of the programme is the centrally organised publicity and advertising campaign which supports and complements the work of the numerous people involved in local initiatives.

Initial research suggests that the public are starting to make the necessary changes, in relation to life style factors such as smoking, diet and exercise.

Youth Organisations (Grants)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the amounts paid by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland to the headquarters of voluntary youth organisations during the last three years; if he will give for each organisation getting support, the approximate current membership of these groups; and if he will list the amounts of grants and payments made by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland to youth organisations during the last three years.

Equal Opportunity Unit

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his response to the proposal from the Northern Ireland Council on Disability for an equal opportunity unit to be established by the council and resourced by the Department of Economic Development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 15 December 1987]: The question is currently under consideration. When a decision is made it will be delivered to the Northern Ireland Council on Disability.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many accidents, with details of fatalities, there have been in each of the last three years' operation of the youth training programme.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer, 15 December 1987]: Recorded accidents in youth training programme for the last three years are as follows:—

	Number
1985-86	178
1986-87	231
[1] 1987-88	161

[1] To date.

The majority of accidents fall under the following categories (a) cuts, (b) bruising, (c) sprains and (d) minor burns. There have been no fatalities.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the destination of youth training programme leavers for each of the last three years; and of those who found employment, how many were with the firm who provided the training.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 15 December 1987]: Of those leavers from full-time training schemes whose destination was known the following information applies:

	To Employment Per cent.	To Further Education Per cent.	To Unemployment Per cent.
1984-85	55	3	42
1985-86	57	3	40
1986-87	55	4	41

Employer-led partnerships provide training for less than 20 per cent. of full-time YTP trainees. Separate records have not been kept of the number who find jobs with the employer who provided them with full-time training.

Schemes (Relationship)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the relationship between action for community employment and community volunteering schemes, and national schemes, such as UK 2000, neighbourhood emergency action, crime prevention initiatives, and so on.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 December 1987]: Although there is no formal relationship between the action for community employment and community volunteering schemes in Northern Ireland and the national initiatives promoted by Manpower Services Commission through the community programme in Great Britain, there are nevertheless many similarities and continuing contacts between the respective officials.

Community Care

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's policy towards providing places under each action for community employment and community volunteering scheme for community care activities.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 December 1987]: Sympathetic consideration is given to proposals from sponsors seeking places for community care activities. Approximately 30 per cent. and 66 per cent. respectively of action for community employment and community volunteering scheme places support such activities.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give further information on the 100-place enterprise scheme under the action for community employment programme and its progress; and how it will be evaluated.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 December 1987]: Since the ACE enterprise pilot scheme was launched in May 1987 60 applications have been received. To date 20 candidates have been selected to participate.

The scheme will be evaluated by departmental economists to assess the degree to which the ACE network can assist ACE workers move into self-employment.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if in relation to the action for community employment and community volunteering schemes, he will give the following information, (a) the annual budget for each of the schemes over the years since they started, (b) the current number of schemes, the places in each and their geographical distribution across Northern Ireland, (c) the number of managing agents in each scheme, the number of places in each managing agency and their location by name of sponsoring agent and address, (d) the categories of work undertaken under each scheme, (e) the criteria by which applications to be accepted on to the scheme as a sponsor are assessed and (f) the criteria by which schemes are evaluated by his Department and the training policy and training budget for each scheme.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 December 1987]: The information is as follows:

(c) There are no managing agents in the ACE Scheme. The following managing agents operate within CVS.

	Volunteers
Belfast Managing Agent, Bryson House, Bedford Street, Belfast	91
Northern Ireland Voluntary Trust, Murray House, Belfast	410
Waterside Churches for Community Needs, 6 Shipquay Street, Londonderry	113

(d) The following are the main categories for work undertaken by each scheme.
Environmental/Conservation
Community Care
Community Arts
Administration/Clerical
(e) Applications are accepted from sponsors who promote projects that satisfy the aims and objectives of the appropriate scheme and who demonstrate to the Department's satisfaction that they have the capability to manage an ACE/CVS project.
(f) Each scheme is reviewed on a regular basis to ensure that they are managed in an effective and efficient manner and that they meet their aims and objectives.

Sponsors in both ACE and CVS are encouraged to develop and implement comprehensive training and development programmes for workers and volunteers. Costs of ACE workers attending approved external training courses are funded at 100 per cent. Within CVS there is a training budget based on £30·00 per full time volunteer per year.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if in relation to action for community employment and community volunteering schemes, he will give (a) the criteria by which applications from the waiting list for each scheme are assessed, (b) the number of people with a registered disability with places on each scheme, (c) the breakdown of males and females on each scheme, (d) the breakdown by religious affiliation on each scheme, (e) whether the two schemes are subject to the rules of the Fair Employment Agency and (f) how he intends to apply the new policy guidelines on fair employment to sponsors of the two schemes and what monitoring arrangements are being set up; and if he will list the sponsoring agents of the community volunteering scheme by name, address and number of volunteer hours, as well as the budget for the community volunteering scheme, broken down into such local areas as is convenient.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 16 December 1987]: The information is as follows:

(a) The following are the types of projects which are favoured in assessing applications from the waiting list:
(i) Projects that promote the development of self sustaining employment.
(ii) Projects from areas where the existing level of ACE provision is lower than the local incidence of long term unemployed.
(iii) Projects that provide a service to disadvantaged groups in the community.
(iv) Projects with an emphasis on unskilled work.

(b) In September 1987 there were 32 disabled people in ACE. It is not known how many of these were registered disabled.
Information in the form requested is not readily available for the community volunteering scheme.

(c) ACE: Male 57 per cent. Female 43 per cent.
Information in the form requested is not readily available for the CVS.

(d) Information on the breakdown by religious affiliation of participants in ACE and CVS is not held by the Department.

(e) Sponsors of both ACE and CVS are subject to the provision of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1976.

(f) Copies of the new policy guidelines have been issued to all sponsors. Although these guidelines are voluntary the Fair Employment Agency is under a statutory obligation to have regard to the guidelines in considering whether or not equality of opportunity has been provided.

The information about CVS sponsoring agents is as follows:

SOCIAL SERVICES

NHS Charges

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he plans to impose charges on any further National Health Services services.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans for legislation to require National Health Service patients in hospitals or visiting a general practitioner to pay for any services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have no such plans.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what the percentage rise in (a) prescription charges, (b) minimum dental charges and (c) maximum dental charges has been between 1979 and the latest date available in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms.

Mr. Newton: Between 1979 and 1987 prescription charges rose by 433 per cent. in cash terms and by 207 per cent. in real terms. The maximum charge for a single course of dental treatment rose by 219 per cent. in cash terms and 84 per cent. in real terms. There is no minimum charge.

Moss Side Special Hospital

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the recorded number of instances of self-mutilation among women patients at Moss Side special hospital, for the previous 12 months;

(2) what are the recorded numbers of instances of the use of seclusion, and the recorded number of hours women patients have been held in seclusion, at Moss Side special hospital, for the previous 12 months.

Mrs. Currie: In the 12 months from 1 December 1986, the recorded number of instances of self-mutilation among women patients at Moss Side hospital was 250. The recorded number of instances of seclusion was 1,573 of which 975 related to women patients. The recorded number of hours spent in seclusion by women patients was 17,302, which included seclusion during the night hours. Eighty per cent. of the total time spent in seclusion by women patients was accounted for by nine of them. There are at present 198 men patients and 86 women patients at Moss Side. Over the past year or so, the hospital has admitted a number of grossly disturbed, delinquent young women who suffer from psychopathic disorder, in many cases associated with mental impairment. Self-mutilation is a behavioural symptom often exhibited by women patients and had been a marked feature of the behaviour of the young women before they were admitted to Moss Side. Slow modification of this behaviour accounts in part for the high use of seclusion among this group. The hospital is trying to minimise the extent of self-mutilation and seclusion among women patients by management of the patient mix and the opening in October this year of an extra ward for women patients.

Operations (Cost)

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the approximate average cost to the National Health Service of the following operations (i) heart transplant, (ii) kidney transplant, (iii) liver transplant, (iv) heart by-pass, (v) heart valve replacement, (vi) hysterectomy, (vii) hip replacement, (viii) knee replacement, (ix) in vitro fertilisation and (x) abortion.

Mrs. Currie: We do not routinely make estimates of the costs of individual operations. Such information as is available for seven of the operations listed is based on special studies. This has, where necessary, been revalued to take account of inflation. Details of treatments and length of stay in hospital may have changed since the studies were done. The figures are therefore only approximate.

Heart transplant	[1]15,000
Kidney transplant	[2]7,400
Coronary artery bypass graft	3,300
Heart valve replacement	5,000
Hysterectomy	[3]1,200
Total hip replacement	3,300
Abortion	170

[1] Including additional costs in the year of operation.
[2] Based on 1981 study.
[3] Based on 1982 study.

Nurses

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have undertaken advanced training courses which lead to specialisation in fields such as intensive care in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Newton: I regret that information is not available in the form requested prior to 1985. The numbers of registered nurses entering selected specialised post-basic training courses since 1985 are as follows:

Number of nurses entering selected post-basic training courses Year ending 31 March: England

	1985	1986	1987
General intensive care	649	436	502
Coronary care	71	60	61
Renal care	134	132	140
Operating department nursing	353	272	249
Special intensive care of the newborn	287	278	393

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses were in training in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. However, the number of nurses commencing basic nurse training in each of the past 10 years is as follows:

Intake of students and pupils to basic nurse training year ending 31 March: England

	Students	Pupils	Total
1978	18,200	11,210	29,410
1979	22,600	12,770	35,370
1980	20,540	12,080	32,620
1981	19,630	11,290	30,920
1982	20,200	11,600	31,800
1983	18,950	10,890	29,840
1984	17,670	7,300	24,970
1985	19,210	6,320	25,530
1986	18,600	5,100	23,700
1987	18,430	4,390	22,820

Notes:

(1) Actual figures for England are not available prior to 1984. Figures are therefore assumed to be 95 per cent. of those for England and Wales.

(2) Figures are rounded to nearest 10.

(3) The decline in the number of pupils undertaking enrolled nurse training is partly due to the uncertainty about the future of such training, whose cessation has been proposed by the UKCC in Project 2000.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial incentives exist to encourage nurses to undertake more advanced nursing training which leads to specialisation in such fields as intensive care.

Mr. Newton: Currently there are specific financial incentives though post-basic training and expertise may improve prospects of promotion. Recently, the Nursing and Midwifery Staffs Negotiating Council has reached agreement on new grading definitions for nursing and midwifery staff designed to recognise and reward clinical skills appropriately.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many nurses left the National Health Service other than at retirement age in each of the last five years;

(2) what is the average number of years worked by nurses in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total level of expenditure on pay for nurses, in cash and constant 1986-87 prices, in each year since 1973.

Mr. Newton: Following is the information requested derived from the annual accounts of health authorities in England and for 1973-74, those of their predecessor hospital authorities:

National Health Service staff salaries and wages: Nurses and midwives

	Per annual accounts £ million	At 1986-87 prices £ million
1973-74	416	1,732
1974-75	744	2,596
1975-76	965	2,679
1976-77	1,112	2,728
1977-78	1,206	2,597
1978-79	1,354	2,634
1979-80	1,649	2,745
1980-81	2,294	3,221
1981-82	2,511	3,211
1982-83	2,713	3,236
1983-84	2,828	3,225
1984-85	3,034	3,314
1985-86	3,210	3,307
1986-87	3,495	3,495

Notes:

1. The figures for the earlier years have been expressed at 1986-87 prices by the use of the Gross Domestic Product deflator.
2. The figures for 1973-74 are not comparable to those for later years as prior to National Health Service re-organisation (1 April 1974) responsibility for community health and ambulance services rested with local government authorities.
3. The figures for 1974-75 include an element of estimation being based on an incomplete return from health authorities.
4. Expenditure on non-National Health Service staff (agency, etc.) nurses and midwives is excluded.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what the levels of nursing staff were in (a) Sunderland district health authority, (b) Durham district health authority and (c) Hartlepool district health authority in the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the table.

NHS Nursing and midwifery staff in post[1] at 30 September of each year Whole time equivalent[2]

District Health Authority	1982	1983	1984	1985	1985
Sunderland	2,490	2,570	2,520	2,580	2,590
Durham	1,100	1,090	1,110	1,160	1,160
Hartlepool	790	790	780	790	840

Source: DHSS Annual census of NHS non-medical manpower.

[1] Includes qualified nurses and midwives, learners and unqualified staff. Agency staff are also included.

[2] Figures are independently rounded to nearest 10 whole-time equivalents.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to set up an inquiry into the health of nurses; what are the present arrangements for monitoring their health; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 16 December 1987]: It is for employing health authorities in discharging their responsibilities under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 to promote, maintain and improve the health and well-being of all staff. Arrangements for the monitoring of staff health is a matter for individual authorities in the light of local circumstances.

Laboratory Scientific Officers

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will issue an instruction to the official side of the Whitley council to negotiate the pay of laboratory scientific officers in the National Health Service on the same basis as employees engaged in therapy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The pay of most staff engaged in therapy is the subject of recommendations by the pay review bodies, rather than negotiation, and I do not think it would be appropriate to constrain the Whitley Council negotiating arrangements in the way my hon. Friend appears to have in mind. However, I understand that the relevant council will embark on negotiations about a new pay and grading structure for medical laboratory scientific officers in the new year.

Housing Benefit Supplement

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants are receiving housing benefit supplement.

Mr. Portillo: Information on the current number of recipients is not available, but we estimate that during the course of the 1986-87 financial year some 400,000 people received housing benefit supplement.

AIDS

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 759, he will take steps to collect the available information on the proportions of homosexuals presenting themselves for treatment at sexually transmitted diseases clinics in (a) London and (b) the rest of England who are found to be HIV positive.

Mr. Newton: There are difficulties in securing accurate information on the proportions of homosexuals presenting for treatment at genito-urinary medicine clinics who are HIV positive because individuals may not admit to being homosexual or those who do may not agree to be tested for HIV. However, details of all positive HIV tests in England and Wales are reported in confidence to the Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre. Where available this includes information on the risk behaviour of the individual involved. From next year it is proposed to collect from genito-urinary medicine clinics the numbers of new cases of HIV infection presenting. Clinicians will be asked, where possible, to distinguish those infections which are thought to be homosexually acquired. Details of negative tests are not sought (with the exception of data required for special studies) because of the great deal of work that would be involved.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 759, he will list the membership of the group of experts monitoring HIV infection rates; and when he expects them to report on the likely number of AIDS infections in the United Kingdom in 1991.

Mr. Newton: The members of the group which is considering the monitoring and surveillance of HIV infection and AIDS are:

Dr. J. W. G. Smith, (Chairman) Director, Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS).
Professor M. Adler, Academic Department of Genito-urinary medicine, University College and Middlesex Hospital School of Medicine.
Dr. N. S. Galbraith, Director, PHLS Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre.
Professor A. Glynn, Director, Central Public Health Laboratory and Head, PHLS AIDS Co-ordinating Centre.
Professor M. J. R. Healy, Professor of Medical Statistics, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.
Professor M. Marmot, Professor of Community Medicine, University College, London.
Dr. D. Reid, Director, Communicable Diseases (Scotland) Unit.

Observers

Dr. R. G. Covell, Senior Medical Officer, Scottish Home and Health Department.
Dr. D. James, Board Secretary, Medical Division, Medical Research Council.
Ms H. Hillier, Statistician, Department of Health and Social Security.

Secretariat

Dr. G. Greenberg, Senior Medical Officer, Department of Health and Social Security.
Mr. J. Griffiths, Senior Executive Office, Department of Health and Social Security.

We hope to receive the group's report early in January 1988. As I said in my earlier reply it is hoped that any improvements that result from the group's recommendations will produce better data on HIV infection and AIDS which can be used as a basis for forecasting numbers of cases in the future.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases non-haemophiliacs have contracted the AIDS virus following blood transfusions given in or before October 1985.

Mr. Newton: Since October 1985 the national blood transfusion service has screened all blood donations for antibodies to HIV. Before screening could be made available to the service, a small number of patients in the United Kingdom received blood infected with the virus. Eight of these have since developed AIDS, of whom seven have died.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider making to those persons who contracted the AIDS virus, following a blood transfusion given in or before October 1985, payments which are similar to those that will be made to haemophiliacs who contracted the AIDS virus through blood transfusions.

Mr. Newton: The Government have provided special financial help for haemophiliacs infected with HIV in recognition of their wholly exceptional circumstances which I explained to the House in my statement on 16 November. After careful consideration we concluded that this combination of circumstances does not apply to those who have unfortunately become infected with HIV through blood transfusions and that similar financial help is therefore not appropriate.

Consultancy Advice

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the contracts given by his Department to Deloitte Haskins and Sells in relation to management consultancy advice on the work of health authorities in England.

Mrs. Currie: Since January 1984 one such contract has been let by the Department. It concerned the implementation of management budgeting in the community health services sector by Bromley health authority.

Agency Nurses

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the amount spent by district health authorities on agency nurses in each of the last five years.

Mr. Newton: Following is the information derived from the annual accounts of district health authorities in England:—

Expenditure on Non-NHS Staff (Agency, etc.)—Nursing

Year	£
1982-83	31,262,646
1983-84	27,685,596
1984-85	36,912,356
1985-86	46,965,803
1986-87	[1] 64,897,347

[1] Provisional (ie as yet unaudited) figure.

Operating Theatres

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the capital value of all the operating theatres in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not held centrally and any attempt at an estimate would be purely speculative.

NHS (Stolen Property)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the value of property stolen from the National Health Service in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Currie: The annual accounts of health authorities in England incorporate a statement of losses which includes categories as follows:

	Losses of cash due to Theft, Fraud, etc.	Losses of equipment and property in stores and in use due to Theft, Fraud or Arson, etc.
1982-83	257,081	609,312
1983-84	96,388	805,292
1984-85	83,896	1,180,604
1985-86	77,470	1,434,764
1986-87[1]	85,935	1,587,207

[1] Provisional (ie as yet unaudited figures).

(Prior to 1 April 1985 losses incurred by family practitioner committees were reported with the annual accounts of the district health authorities with which the committees were associated.)

NHS (Security)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with security arrangements in National Health Service premises to protect (a) National Health Service staff and (b) National Health Service property.

Mrs. Currie: A number of steps have been taken to improve standards of security in the National Health Service. Comprehensive guidance in the form of a security manual has been issued to the Health Service. All district health authorities have developed security strategies based on this guidance, tailored to meet the requirements of their individual localities. These strategies have been approved by regional health authorities which are responsible for monitoring their effectiveness.

The Department's advisory committee on violence to staff, under the chairmanship of my noble Friend, is currently considering the question of acts of violence against staff including those working in the National Health Service. The committee hopes to report to my right hon. Friend by early spring.

Stricter accounting procedures have been introduced to improve the identification of sources of losses. We are satisfied that this range of initiatives has already helped to raise the general level of security in the Health Service and will continue to do so.

Waiting Lists

Ms. Harriet Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out, region by region, the total in-patient waiting list in each district, showing the percentage change from the figures for 30 March 1986.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is given in the table.

[1] No regional total given for North East Thames for March 1987 as figures for Hampstead Health Authority were not available.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services whether district health authorities are required to know the cost of care per patient by specialty in order to make valid bids for a share of funds allocated under the national waiting lists initiative.

Mr. Newton: When proposing projects for support from the 1987-88 waiting list fund health authorities gave the numbers of additional patients who could be treated for the funding requested. In most cases this was the marginal cost of treating additional patients and was less than either the full or average cost of patient care for the treatments planned. This approach will be adopted for projects funded in 1988-89.

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the current waiting lists for (a) examinations, (b) operations and (c) beds in each specialty in each hospital in (i) the Crewe, (ii) the Chester and (iii) the Halton health districts; and what were the comparable figures at a convenient date in each of the last eight years.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 3 December 1987]: The available information is given in the table.

Hospital Closures

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the hospitals (a) approved for total closure and (b) approved for partial closure for each district health authority since April 1985;

(2) if he will list the hospitals (a) totally closed and (b) partially closed since April 1985 for each district health authority.

Mrs. Currie: The hospitals approved for (a) complete closure and (b) partial closure between April 1985 and December 1986, the latest date for which statistics are currently available, are as listed. It should be noted that closure plans may be modified, delayed or even dropped after approval is obtained; our routinely collected statistics record approved and not actual closures.

Hospital Beds

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, region by region, the percentage change in average available daily beds for each district health authority for the years 1979-80 and 1986-87.

Mrs. Currie: The available information for the years 1979 and 1986 is given in the table. Over the same period the number of in-patient and day cases treated rose from nearly 6 million to nearly 7½ million, an increase of about 25 per cent.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he has given to health authorities about closing any more beds in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: None.

Smoking

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial support he gave to World Non-Smokers Day on 17 November.

Mrs. Currie: None.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the Froggatt committee report on smoking and health.

Mrs. Currie: The independent scientific committee on smoking and health is expected to present its fourth report to Ministers around the turn of the year. A decision on publication will be taken after it has been received.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what will be the cost to public funds of National No-Smoking Day 1988.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that the Health Education Authority will spend approximately £80,000 including the costs of evaluating the results. I hope to lend my personal support to No-Smoking Day 1988 as smoking is the single most important risk factor in lung cancer and other preventable diseases.

Solihull Hospital

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make an official visit to Solihull hospital in order to discuss prospects for the new district general hospital.

Mrs. Currie: We have no plans to do so. As my hon. Friend will be aware, the management of major new schemes in the capital building programme is the responsibility of the regional health authority. I understand however that building work on the new hospital is due to start in July 1991.

Residential Care

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services, for each of the last five years, what was the amount paid for residential care through regulation 9 payments, and what has been the percentage change since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: The information held centrally is not in the form requested. The table sets out the position since 1979. 1986 is the most recent year for which information is available.

[2] There are no figures for 1985 because for operational reasons there was no inquiry in that year.
[3] Until 1986 it has not been possible to identify separately expenditure on people in residential care homes and nursing homes.
Note.—The percentage change in expenditure since 1979 is 45·80 per cent.

District Nurses (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many district nurses served the Easington constituency in the years 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1985-86.

Mrs. Currie: Information by constituency is not available. Figures in the table refer to Durham district health authority within whose boundary Easington falls.

Chiropodists (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many chiropodists were practising in the Easington constituency during the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mrs. Currie: Information by constituency is not available. Figures in the table refer to Durham district health authority within whose boundary Easington falls.

Care in the Community (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what additional funding he intends to make available for care in the community within the district council area of Easington.

Mr. Newton: The provision of care in the community is the responsibility of local authority social services and health authorities, and it is for them to decide upon the level of funding in the light of their individual circumstances and priorities.

Mentally Handicapped Children

Mr. Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many mentally handicapped children have been taken into either voluntary or statutory care under the Children and Young Persons Act 1969; and in what proportion of these or both of the parents is mentally handicapped, over the most recent period for which figures are available;

(2) in how many cases, when one or both parents are mentally handicapped, children have been taken into care at birth, or subsequently, and for what reason, over the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally.

National Insurance Credits

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services in what circumstances persons may be registered as unemployed for the purpose of receiving national insurance contribution credits, but without drawing unemployment benefit; and how many are currently within this category.

Mr. Scott: On 14 May 1987, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 433,071 persons registered as unemployed and not receiving unemployment benefit or supplementary benefit but receiving national insurance contribution credits. The reasons for unemployment benefit not being paid are shown in the table.

	Number
Unemployment benefit exhausted	200,353
Contribution deficiency	65,389
Title to benefit not yet determined	[1]140,042
Waiting days not completed	[1]4,656
Other reasons	22,631
Total	433,071

[1] Some of these claimants will be found to qualify for unemployment benefit.

NHS Employees

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for the most recent convenient date the number of posts (a) established and (b) filled in each region for the following groups of National Health Service employees (i) medical laboratory scientific officers, (ii) speech therapists, (iii) occupational therapists, (iv) clinical physicists, (v) clinical biochemists and (vi) clinical psychologists.

Mr. Newton: Figures for staff in post are shown in the table. Information on established posts is not collected centrally.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the total savings in 1988-89 from uprating the illustrative figures for personal allowances in income support set out in the technical annex of the White Paper "The Reform of Social Security" Cmnd. 9091, by 4·5 to 5 per cent. instead of 6·5 to 7 per cent., after excluding the compensation for the payment of 20 per cent. rates.

Mr. Scott: It would have cost an additional £156 million in public expenditure to set the rates for 1988-89 at the levels suggested.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the effect on a married couple with two children at primary school and a gross income of £100 per week with rent and rates of £43 per week, of (a) the loss of income due to the non-indexing of child benefit to inflation in each year from 1985 to 1988, (b) changes in housing benefit, (c) changes from family income supplement to family credit and (d) the abolition of free school meals.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Comparisons must be somewhat hypothetical, since assumptions must be made for how the current scheme would have been carried forward, had it not been replaced from April 1988. Assuming, for this atypical example, that the main assumptions are similar to those used in the "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income Related Benefits" published at the same time as the uprating statement on 27 October and that, of the £43 specified for rent and rate payments, £33·20 is for rent, £8·02 is for local authority rates and £1·78 is for water rates, the answer is as follows. The loss in net disposable income from the child benefit uprating in November 1985 (expressed at current prices), was 44p per week. For the July 1986 upratings this figure fell to 37p a week, and in April 1987 it fell further to 33p per week. No loss of net income arises from child benefit in April 1988 because the family credit structure provides automatic compensation and, in cash equivalent terms, replacing family income supplement and free school meals by family credit raises disposable income for such a family by £5·95. Reform of the housing benefit scheme would reduce such a family's rate rebate by £4·94 and rent rebate by £7·62.

Single Payments

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what were in constant 1979 prices, the total amounts of single payments made by his Department in each of the years between 1979 and 1986 inclusive.

Mr. Scott: The expenditure on single payments for the years 1979-80 to 1986-87 is as follows:

United Kingdom cost at 1979 prices[1]

Year (ending April)	£ million
1979-80	40
1980-81	40
1981-82	44
1982-83	70
1983-84	114
1984-85	158
1985-86	207
1986-87	198

[1] Based on the Gross Domestic Product Deflator.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what single payments were made at (a) Cowdenbeath, (b) Dunfermline and (c) Kirkcaldy offices of his Department in 1986-87; and to what value.

Mr. Portillo: Information concerning the amount spent on single payments made at each of the Department's local offices has been placed in the Library. Information concerning the number of single payments made at (a) Cowdenbeath, (b) Dunfermline and (c) Kirkcaldy is given in the table:

Number of single payments for the period April 1986 to April 1987

Office	Number
(a) Cowdenbeath	6,179
(b) Dunfermline	6,982
(c) Kirkcaldy	12,118

Note: The figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

Defibrillators

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government, and what advice it has given to ambulance authorities, concerning the supply of defibrillators to all emergency ambulance vehicles maintained by public funds.

Mrs. Currie: We have endorsed the training of emergency ambulance crews in advanced techniques, which includes the use of defibrillators. Our policy guidance is set out in a circular to health authorities (DA(84)12), a copy of which is in the Library.

The extent to which advanced training is given is for those health authorities responsible for managing ambulance services to decide, taking into account local circumstances and the types and locations of health service facilities in the area.

Acute Services

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the spending per patient by specialty in the acute sector for each of the district health authorities in the north-west region, and for Brighton, Bournemouth and Southport and Formby district health authorities during the financial years 1981-82 to 1986-87.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is not available centrally. District health authorities' spending by specialty will, however, be identifiable in their annual financial returns from financial year 1987-88. Health authorities are expected to submit the returns for that year to the Department by the end of June 1988.

Blackpool District (Funding)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, for each of the last five financial years, the percentage relationship between the actual level of funding received for both capital and revenue expenditure by the Blackpool, Fylde and Wyre district health authority and the level of funding indicated by the national resource allocation working party formula.

Mr. Newton: The resource allocation working party formula is used to determine regions' resource targets. The allocation of resources to districts is a matter for regions, which follow the same principles as the national formula, but take account of local needs and circumstances in determining district resource targets. Allocations year by year need to be sensitive to local service plans and allow for a manageable pace of change.

My hon. Friend may like to contact the chairman of North Western regional health authority for information about the allocation of resources to the Blackpool, Fylde and Wyre district health authority.

Statistical Reports

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the titles and a brief description of the statistical reports and returns made by the Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde, Brighton, Bournemouth, and Southport and Formby district health authorities to their regional health authority during the financial year 1986-87.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that this information is not available centrally. Prior to this financial year, 1987-88, regional health authorities did not send statistical reports from their districts to the Department.

National Performance Indicators

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when the national performance indicators for the hospital service for the financial year 1986-87 will be published.

Mr. Newton: A national set of performance indicators for 1986-87 will be issued to all health authorities in England in February 1988.

Mrs. C. James

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress is being made with regard to the claim of Mrs. C. James, of Birmingham B23, regarding damage caused to her home by acid leaking from the battery-operated wheelchair supplied by his Department's contractors; why Mrs. James has not been kept informed about such progress; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The matter to which the hon. Member refers is the responsibility of the Disablement Services Authority. However, I understand that the authority has now written to Mrs. James to find out the cost of the damage caused so that compensation may be paid.

Military Hospitals

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent action he has taken to obtain provision of additional beds in military hospitals for National Health Service patients; and if he will make a statement listing any factors which he has found to have inhibited such provision.

Mr. Newton: We have encouraged health authorities, when circulating information to general practitioners about waiting times in National Health Service hospitals, to include, as appropriate, information about waiting time for service hospitals. Some health authorities are negotiating contracts with a military hospital for treatment of waiting list cases using funds from the £25 million national waiting list fund. This is an approach we intend to develop further for projects supported from the £30 million fund for 1988-89. For most National Health Service patients treatment in a service hospital would entail considerable travel. Many patients would prefer to be treated closer to home and family. Others require pre-operative tests or post-operative checks.

Birmingham Hospitals

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many beds at the children's hospital, Birmingham, and the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, are at present not available for use.

Mrs. Currie: The Department does not routinely monitor the availability of beds on a day-to-day basis.

The hon. Member may therefore wish to write to the chairman of Central Birmingham health authority for the information he seeks.

Mr. David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total number of beds available for patients (a) at the children's hospital, Birmingham, and (b) at the Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham, in September 1986 and at the latest available date.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member the precise information he has requested. The latest available information is given in the table.

Average daily number of available beds at 31 December 1985 and 1986

	1985	1986
Children's hospital, Birmingham	190·8	193·2
Queen Elizabeth hospital, Birmingham	519·0	524·9

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Moore: My Department has no section which can be separately identified as public relations. Functions commonly associated with public relations and those of the press office are carried out by information officers as part of their duties in the Department's information division.

On 1 December 1987 the information division employed 68 permanent staff of whom 29 were information officers.

Anticipated figures for permanent staff in 1988 are identical.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of the Health Education Authority; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mrs. Currie: The section of the Health Education Authority's public affairs division responsible for advertising, promotions and press relations has an establishment of 11. Seven of the posts are currently filled and I understand that the remaining posts are expected to be filled over the next few months.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by the Health Education Authority on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mrs. Currie: The information is as follows:

Television	2,650,000
Radio
Newspaper	865,000
Posters and other promotional material	656,500

The authority is presently considering its use of media for 1988-89.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by the Health Education Authority on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mrs. Currie: The Health Education Authority plans to spend about £5·1 million on publicity and promotional activity in 1987-88, including £3 million on AIDS public education. The operational plans for 1988-89 are presently under consideration but the authority expects to spend at least this amount in 1988-89.

Swiss Cheese

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how much Swiss Vacherin Mont d'Or cheese was withdrawn from sale in the United Kingdom following his warning on 25 November.

Mrs. Currie: The system put into operation in the event of a food hazard such as this involves contact with all local authority environmental health departments and the revelant trade interests so as to get the food removed from sale. Central and local publicity was aimed at advising members of the public to return any of the Swiss Vacherin Mont d'Or cheese which they had already bought.

We do not routinely collect information on the results but past experience shows the system to be fully effective and there is no suggestion that it was not so in this case.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the percentage change in National Health Service expenditure for the years 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 after correcting for (a) National Health Service pay and prices and (b) demographic factors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Department does not make forward projections for National Health Service specific pay and price changes. Demographic pressures can be calculated for hospital and community health services but cannot be meaningfully applied to the National Health Service as a whole.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what temperatures were recorded at Turnhouse in the week ended 17 December for the purposes of calculating eligibility for severe weather payments.

Mr. Scott: The Department receives information from the Meteorological Office in respect of fixed seven-day periods beginning each Monday. The latest week for which we have received temperature data is week ending 13 December. The information for Edinburgh airport (Turnhouse) is as follows:

	Temperature (C)
Monday	1·4
Tuesday	−1·6
Wednesday	0·0
Thursday	1·5
Friday	2·6
Saturday	−0·4
Sunday	−0·4
Weekly average	−0·1

Bradford Royal Infirmary

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on how many occasions in each month during the current year women were turned away from the baby unit at Bradford Royal infirmary due to lack of facilities and transferred to the regional neonatal units in Leeds;

(2) what are the shortages of staff and ventilators at Bradford Royal infirmary; how many babies are transferred to the regional neonatal units in Leeds on average throughout each month due to these or other shortages; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Bradford and Leeds both provide neonatal intensive care facilities. It is normal practice for patients to be referred to Leeds when the Bradford unit is full and vice versa. Bradford's capacity has occasionally been affected by recruitment problems. The number of ventilators at Bradford is sufficient to meet normal demand. I understand that to date, this year, seven patients have been transferred from Bradford to Leeds. In the same period, Bradford has accepted 18 patients from outside the district, including some from Leeds. The hon. Member may wish to seek more detailed information from the chairman of Bradford health authority.

Maternity Pay

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received calling for amendments to the statutory maternity pay scheme.

Mr. Portillo: None since the scheme started in April 1987, although a number of representations and inquiries have been received questioning the application of statutory maternity pay in specific circumstances.

Cancer Research

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about his Department's funding of cancer research being carried out by Quest at the Middlesex hospital.

Mrs. Currie: The Department has recently received a number of applications for funding of research with the objective of automating cervical cancer screening, and expects to receive several more in the near future. I propose to convene an ad hoc expert panel, to be chaired by the Chief Scientist, Professor F. O'Grady, to advise Ministers and to recommend those applications which should be supported.

One of the applications received was from Dr. A. M. Sincock for the funding of a project entitled "The screening of cervical neoplasia by quantitative assay of a hydrolysed DNA component present in the nuclei of cells exfoliated from the cervix uteri". Dr. Sincock's application has been considered by external referees who gave qualified support. In the light of this reaction, the relatively large number and cost of other applications with the same objective, and because Dr. Sincock is already funded by Quest for a Test until June 1988, no decision on funding has been taken. The application will be considered by the ad hoc expert panel and a decision on funding made as soon as possible.

Chester District Health Authority

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make extra funds available to the Chester district health authority to fund the short-term programme; what ward closures took place in the Chester district in the current financial year; when a consultant urologist appointment will take place; how many Clwyd patients are treated and seen in Chester district premises annually, expressed by percentage and number for each of the years since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: As the allocation of resources to the Chester health authority is the responsibility of the Mersey regional health authority, the hon. Member may wish to contact the regional chairman for information about the funding of Chester's short-term programme.

The information the hon. Member seeks about ward closures in Chester in the current financial year and with regard to the appointment of a consultant urologist is not available centrally. As the Chester health authority is responsible for the management and development of local hospital services, the hon. Member may wish to contact the district chairman on these issues.

Centrally held information on Clwyd residents treated in Chester hospitals is based on the results of the non-maternity hospital in-patient inquiry and given in the following table. 1985 is the latest available year; figures prior to 1982 are not comparable due to reorganisation of the NHS.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of people employed in the care of mentally handicapped people by area health authorities in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 1 December 1987]: The number of doctors and nursing staff (excluding agency staff) in post in mental handicap areas of work at 30 September in England are as follows. Details of other staff employed in the care of mentally handicapped people are not available.

Whole-time equivalent[1]

Year	Total[2]
1979	26,300
1980	27,400

1985	32,200
1986	33,000

Source: DHSS Annual censuses of NHS medical and non-medical manpower.

Notes: Figures for nursing staff for 1979 and 1980 have been estimated, since figures are not available by area of work on an exactly consistent basis with those for later years. Figures have not been adjusted for the change in nurses' working hours during 1980-81 (from 40 to 37·5 hours per week).

[1] Figures are rounded to nearest one hundred (100) whole-time equivalents.

[2] Includes all permanent paid, honorary and locum medical staff.

The figures shown cover health authority staff working in hospitals and in the community. For example, there were 230 whole-time equivalent community mental handicap nurses in 1981 (the first year in which they were separately identified) and 1,100 in 1986. The number of residents in National Health Service mental handicap hospitals and community units was 45,600 in 1979 and 34,200 in 1986.

Hospitals (Bed Occupancy)

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the bed-occupancy rates in each specialty in each hospital in (a) the Crewe, (b) the Chester and (c) the Halton health districts in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 3 December 1987]: A table giving the information my hon. Friend seeks has now been placed in the Library.

A variety of reasons may lead to variations in occupancy. These include the need to have beds available for emergencies, unexpectedly early discharges and unpredictable admissions (for example in maternity cases).

The health services information steering goup recommended in its first report that bed use data should include all patients using a ward in a 24-hour period and that aggregated bed occupancy statistics should not be used alone as an indicator of efficient bed use. A more useful measure of bed utilisation is patient throughout per available bed and this has been included for information.

Health Districts (Operations)

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many operations were performed in each specialty in (a) the Crewe, (b) the Chester and (c) the Halton health districts in each of the last eight years.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 3 December 1987]: The information which I can give my hon. Friend without incurring disproportionate costs is in the table.

District Health Authority	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
In-patient cases treated in the surgical acute specialties in NHS hospitals

Health Districts (Patient Treatment)

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients were treated in each specialty in (a) the Crewe, (b) the Chester and (c) the Halton health districts in each of the last eight years.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 3 December 1987]: A table giving the available information has now been placed in the Library. Because of National Health Service restructuring in 1982, earlier figures are not directly comparable.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is able to estimate the total first year savings arising from the April 1988 changes to the existing housing benefit scheme, and to isolate the individual savings achieved by (i) requiring all households to meet at least 20 per cent. of their rates bill, (ii) the increase in the taper on rent to 65 per cent. on net income, (iii) the phasing out of help with high, fixed fuel charges, (iv) the abolition of extra help with partial heating, (v) the increased rates contribution expected from non-dependants not in full-time work and (vi) any other separately identifiable saving; and if he will publish the figures in the Official Report.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 3 December 1987]: The total savings from the April 1988 changes to the housing benefit scheme are currently estimated to be £650 million; £500 million of this is a saving on rate rebates and £150 million on rent rebates and allowances. These figures are based on the estimated cost of the new scheme compared with the estimated cost of extending the current scheme into 1988-89. We estimate that some two thirds of the total saving is a result of the requirement for households to pay a minimum of 20 per cent. of their rates bill, but this saving should be seen in the context of the compensation being provided under the income support scheme and reflected in housing benefit and family credit.

It is not possible to give a further breakdown of the savings figures in precise terms as they were largely derived from a computer model that encompassed all the major changes in structure and associated changes in other benefits. This could be rerun only at disproportionate cost. Modelling work the Department has already done, however, would indicate that the figure includes a saving of approximately £80 million from the new capital rule and £46 million from increasing the rent taper from 60 per cent. to 65 per cent.

Gloucester Health Authority

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses, midwives, doctors, professional medical staff, administrative officers and ancillary workers were employed by the Gloucester health authority for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what was the average yearly salary for each of these groups of Health Service employees for the same period.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 7 December 1987]: Such information as is available centrally is shown in the tables.

Figures for all staff groups for Gloucester district health authority, which formed part of the Gloucester area health authority before the National Health Service reorganisation in 1982, are not available centrally. From 1982 we have figures for all doctors and dentists employed in the district health authority except for senior registrars and consultants, whose contracts are held by the regional health authority and cannot be identified centrally. There will therefore be more doctors and dentists actually working in the Gloucester district health authority than are accounted for in table 1.

It should be noted that it is likely that data for 1982 were effected by the April 1982 reorganisation.

Average yearly salary details for staff employed by the Gloucester health authority in the various staff groups are shown in table 2. Again details are not available centrally prior to 1982 due to the NHS reorganisation.

Greenwich Health District (Casualty Service)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on recent closures and restrictions of services at the accident and emergency departments of the Brook and Greenwich district hospitals resulting from the shortages of beds and suitably qualified medical staff; and what steps he has taken to ensure that there is an adequate casualty service covering the Greenwich health district.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 14 December 1987]: There have been no closures or restrictions at the Brook hospital accident and emergency department since 10 September or at Greenwich district general hospital accident and emergency department since 24 September. A local major accident occurred on 29 October and in order to ensure that facilities would be free to meet that exceptional demand the accident and emergency department at the Brook hospital was closed to other patients at the time as part of the hospital's normal procedure in such circumstances. The provision of a casualty service in Greenwich is the responsibility of the Greenwich health authority and I have received no evidence that it is inadequate.

Incontinence Pads

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to reply to the letter from Mary Arnold, chairperson of Coventry Council for the Disabled, on the supply of incontinence pads, sent to him on 3 November.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 14 December 1987]: I wrote on 14 December.

Prescriptions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount paid in general practitioner prescription charges in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The total amount paid by patients in prescription charges in England in the last five years for which figures are available is as follows:

Financial year	Amount (£ million)
1982-83	102·79
1983-84	110·04
1984-85	120·75
1985-86	127·76
1986-87	147·88

Heart Campaign

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services which food retailers have associated themselves with the "Look After Your Heart" campaign, sponsored by his Department.

Mrs. Currie [holding answer 16 December 1987]: The following food retailing organisations have associated themselves with the campaign during its first seven months by way of promotional activity directed at the public:

J. H. Dewhurst Ltd., Butchers
Tesco Stores Ltd.

In addition, more than 50 industrial and commercial companies have undertaken to carry forward the campaign's objectives with their employees. These include the following associated with food retailing:

Boots plc
Marks and Spencer plc
Oxford and Swindon Co-Operative Society
Whitbread and Co. plc

Care in the Community

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will provide funds for local authorities to employ more trained paramedical staff for the care in the community programme; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he gives financial help to local authorities who wish to provide telephone installation costs to elderly persons living alone.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 11 December 1987]: Local authority personal social services are funded mainly by local rates, income from fees and charges and central Government block grant via the rate support grant system. Block grant is not tied to specific services and it is for local authorities themselves to decide how to spend their resources in the light of local circumstances, needs and plans.

Expenditure by local authorities on telephone installations for elderly and disabled people was £7·364 million in 1985-86, a real terms increase of 8·6 per cent. over the amount spent in 1978-79. Separate information is not collected about expenditure on paramedical staff.

Chief Adjudication Officer

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each of the recommendations made in the second report of the chief adjudication officer which affect his Department the action which has been taken to implement them.

Mr. Portillo: A Departmental response to the recommendations in a report of the chief adjudication officer is made following publication of the report. The contents of that response are normally published in the next report of the chief adjudication officer. I have, however, placed a copy of the departmental response to the second report in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pollution

12. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate what proportion of the recent fall in the fish harvest from the North sea is due to the current levels of pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Scientific studies by my Department indicate that pollution has a negligible effect on North sea fish catches.

68. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to control pollution arising from agricultural activities.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms. Walley) on 19 November at column 652.

Olive Oil

13. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards proposals to limit expenditure on olive oil under the common agricultural policy.

Mr. MacGregor: As my hon. Friend will be aware, the Government are pressing for effective stabilisers to apply to all major CAP regimes; and for existing stabilisers, including that on olive oil, to be strengthened where appropriate.

Pigmeat

15. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will review the veterinary conditions pertaining to the importing of pigmeat; if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Veterinary conditions pertaining to the import of pigmeat and pigmeat products are laid down by European Community directives. These are reviewed in the light of the disease situation within the Community and in third countries.

Confectionery Industry

16. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when was the last time he met the president of the Biscuit, Cake, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance; and what issues affecting the United Kingdom confectionery industry were raised.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend the Minister met the president of the Biscuit, Cake, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance on 22 July 1987 when a wide range of commodity issues affecting the industry was discussed.

Pesticides

17. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had in the European Community about the levels of pesticide residues in food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Since the Council of Agriculture Ministers adopted directive setting maximum residue levels for certain pesticides in cereals and products of animal origin in June last year, discussions have continued at official level on further proposals for amendments to the fruit and vegetable directives. Last week the Council had its first discussion of the progress made and will return to the subject early next year.

29. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he received in 1986 in relation to the effects of agricultural pesticides.

Mr. Donald Thompson: During 1986 I received approximately 200 letters concerning agricultural pesticides which covered a wide range of issues, including legislation, residues, controls on use and aerial application.

73. Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is considering new measures on the control and use of pesticides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: After consultation with the Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP), and following the timetable set down in the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986, a variety of new controls will take effect in Great Britain from 1 January 1988. These include the following requirements:

(a) on users of pesticides that they observe the conditions of approval of each pesticide, in particular in relation to the permitted use and crop, the maximum dose rate, harvest and other intervals, operator protection including clothing, and environmental safeguards;

(b) on suppliers of pesticides to farmers and growers, to show through certification their understanding of crop protection and related health and environmental questions;

(c) on suppliers to the amenity horticulture industry, similar relevant qualifications.

The implications of these new controls for the industries concerned have been the subject of detailed consultation. My noble Friend Baroness Trumpington announced on 30 October interim arrangements governing the application of pesticides to minor crops, and guidance on the use of low-volume spraying techniques will be given following the next meeting of the ACP in February 1988.

Further requirements on the training and certification of pesticide operators in agriculture, horticulture and forestry come into force on 1 January 1989 and I am concerned that employers and employees take full advantage of the training facilities now available.

Storm Damage

18. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next be meeting the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the effects of the recent hurricane.

Mr. MacGregor: I have no plans for any further meeting on this matter.

26. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the impact of the recent weather on the harvest.

Mr. MacGregor: I am very much aware that some farmers in many parts of the country, particularly on the east coast, have had a bad harvest because of the very difficult weather conditions during the summer and autumn.

It is not possible to make an estimate of the direct impact of this as the effect will vary from farmer to farmer. But overall our present estimate is that the harvest will total 21·6 million tonnes. Even with this figure there will be a substantial surplus of feed grain of between 7 million and 8 million tonnes including intervention stores.

53. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further representations he has received from smallholders who have large trees lying on their ground as to the resources which they may claim to assist them in their removal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have received no such representations although I am aware of the difficulties this is causing in some cases. Individual smallholders can contact MAFF offices to see if help is available under the farm and countryside initiative in their particular circumstances.

Sheepmeat

19. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the ceiling on headage payments as proposed in the European Commission's review of the sheepmeat regime.

Mr. MacGregor: I am opposed to the proposal to limit ewe premium payments to the first 500 ewes in each lowland flock and first 1,000 ewes in each LFA flock.

24. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the effect in Britain's less-favoured areas of the European Commission's proposals for the sheepmeat regime.

Mr. MacGregor: The proposal to phase out the variable premium would remove the assurance of the guide price for those LFA producers who sell finished lambs and it would also affect the price they receive for stores. But the annual ewe premium would be set at a higher level so increasing its benefit to LFA producers; and clawback on exports would end so enabling the industry as a whole to benefit increasingly from the export market which already takes 20 per cent. of our output. The proposal to limit ewe premium to the first 1,000 ewes in each flock in the LFAs would have an adverse impact on larger sheep flocks.

76. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on British sheepmeat exports.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Our sheepmeat exports are encouragingly strong. Exports in 1986 amounted to some 72,000 tonnes, valued at £133 million and accounting for over 20 per cent. of home production. A further increase is forecast for 1987.

77. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the sheepmeat regime proposals.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the hon. Member for Durham, North-West (Ms. Armstrong).

Hill Land Compensatory Allowances

20. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans for increasing the hill land compensatory allowances in the near future.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) on 9 December.

Food (Radioactivity)

21. Ms. Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the adequacy of the arrangements for monitoring for radioactivity in foodstuffs to protect human health in the event of another nuclear accident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram).

28. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had and what agreements he has made in the European Community about radioactivity levels in foodstuffs.

Mr. Gummer: Discussions on emergency intervention levels to be applied in the event of a nuclear accident took place in the Council of Foreign Ministers on 14 December when a common position was reached (subject to confirmation of Italian support) on a framework Community regulation.

The result of the agreement is that the Community will now have in place a system for regulating imports and intra-Community trade in a coherent and pre-determined way in the event of any future nuclear emergency. A decision was also taken to renew the existing post-Chernobyl controls on food imported from third countries.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

22. Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the number of environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Gummer: A host of organisations, representing the whole spectrum of countryside interests, have welcomed the speed with which the Government have increased the number of environmentally sensitive areas.

47. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms are presently operating under the environmentally sensitive area scheme.

Mr. Gummer: In the nine months following the launch of the first environmentally sensitive areas over 1,600 applications were received by the Ministry and its counterparts in Wales and Scotland.

55. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what increase in resources has been made available to the environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Gummer: Earlier this year the Government announced that their annual budget for environmentally sensitive areas would be doubled to approximately £12 million.

63. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the response by farmers in environmentally sensitive areas to the scheme.

Mr. Gummer: In the eight environmentally sensitive areas in England, Wales and Scotland we have received over 1,600 applications and formal inquiries covering 60,000 hectares or 150,000 acres.

32. Mr. Conway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in the operation of environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Gummer: The first eight environmentally sensitive areas were successfully launched earlier this year. On 30 November my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I laid before Parliament orders which will extend two of these areas and create a further six from 1 January 1988.

40. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the total area covered by environmentally sensitive areas in England and Wales once all those presently proposed are in operation.

Mr. Gummer: The total land area covered by the existing and proposed areas in England and Wales is estimated at approximately 470,000 hectares or 1,800 square miles.

Rural Employment

23. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to protect employment in rural communities.

Mr. MacGregor: As envisaged in the farming and rural enterprise package announced on 10 March, the Government are pursuing a number of new initiatives which will assist rural employment. So far as my own Department is concerned, I am introducing the farm diversification grant scheme and the farm woodland scheme, both of which will encourage on-farm business activity.

Food Prices

25. Mr. Miller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the increase in food prices in the last year; and what was the comparable figure over the same period 10 years ago.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The latest figures from the retail prices index indicate that in the 12 months to October 1987 food prices increased by 3 per cent. This compares with an increase of 13·6 per cent. in food prices in the period from October 1976 to October 1977.

78. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the increase in food prices since 1979, and what was the comparable rise in prices generally.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Between May 1979 and November 1987 the annual rate of increase in food prices was 5·7 per cent. while the rate for retail prices as a whole was 7·8 per cent. These increases can be compared with those of 16·4 per cent. and 15·4 per cent. respectively during the period in office of the last Labour Administration. These figures reflect the success of the Government's policies.

Research and Development

27. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the procedures for reviewing research and development in agriculture, fisheries and food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are regular reviews of all areas of R and D work, which draw on advice from research consultative committees consisting of representatives both from the industries concerned and from the scientific community. These report to a priorities board, under an independent chairman, which then advises Ministers.

64. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which organisations will be consulted about the review of research and development in agriculture, fisheries and food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The normal review procedures outlined in my reply to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. Mcleish) on 19 November at column 656, involve consultation with a wide range of organisations and individuals in the areas concerned. The additional examination of "near market" work is part of the more general process of policy formation and will not involve any formal consultation outside agriculture Departments, though we shall be seeking views on an informal basis.

Farm Woodland Scheme

30. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his proposed rates of payment for the farm woodland scheme.

Mr. Gummer: The proposed rates of payment under the farm woodland scheme are as follows:

£190 per hectare a year in the lowlands;
£150 per hectare a year in the disadvantaged areas, which are sometimes known as the new less-favoured areas and £100 per hectare a year in the severely disadvantaged areas, which are sometimes known as the original less-favoured areas.

These will apply to arable land and improved grassland up to 10 years old.

Up to 3,000 hectares of more marginal agricultural land will also be eligible during the three-year experimental period at a rate of £30 per hectare a year.

34. Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in developing a scheme to encourage farmers to plant woodlands on their farms.

Mr. Gummer: We issued a consultation document on the farm woodland scheme earlier this year. The Farm Land and Rural Development Bill which provides enabling powers for this scheme was introduced in another place on 21 October and the Government announced details of their revised proposals for the scheme on Second Reading of the Bill. The details were also set out in Ministry press notice No. 336/87, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Farmers (Diversification)

31. Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further measures will be taken to encourage farmers to diversify their enterprises.

Mr. Gummer: A scheme to offer capital grants for farm diversification was laid before the House on 18 November. I understand that it was debated in Committee this morning. Those grants will be available from 1 January 1988. In addition, associated grants for enterprise feasibility studies and initial marketing costs will be introduced later next year under powers being sought in the Farm Land and Rural Development Bill which reached Report stage in another place today.

61. Mr. Neale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further measures have been taken to assist farmers to diversify their enterprises.

Mr. Gummer: Under the powers in the Agricultural Training Board Act 1987, which my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, North (Mr. Neale) has introduced as a private Member's Bill, the Agricultural Training Board has recently set up a number of training courses designed to help farmers' diversification possibilities.

I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply given today to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter).

Fisheries Protection

33. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels have been boarded by personnel of the fisheries protection service so far in the current year; how many vessels were boarded in 1986; of these, how many were foreign vessels; and how many skippers were proceeded against and convicted in English and Welsh courts for illegal fishing as a result of these boardings.

Mr. Gummer: During 1986 a total of 1,458 vessels were boarded in the waters of England and Wales by personnel of the fisheries protection service, of which 938 were foreign vessels. To date 33 convictions have resulted from these boardings and a further three prosecutions are pending.

So far in 1987 a total of 1,437 vessels have been boarded, of which 920 were foreign vessels. To date 33 convictions have resulted from these boardings and a further 23 prosecutions are pending.

Food Aid

35. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to meet European Economic Community Agriculture Ministers to discuss the Commission's free food scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 14 December.

Cereals

36. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish proposals to reduce cereal production; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 8 December 1987, at column 126, to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory).

51. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to have discussions with the National Farmers Union on the question of cereal surpluses in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: My colleagues and I frequently meet members of the National Farmers Union and discuss a wide range of issues, including cereals surpluses.

Fish Farms

37. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department is in a position to estimate the annual production figures for fish farms over the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The development of fish farm output must depend upon market conditions. However, we estimate that annual production from the farming of fish (principally salmon and trout) in the United Kingdom could rise by about 10,000 tonnes a year, exceeding 60,000 tonnes by 1990. Most of the increase will be in salmon production.

58. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to encourage research and development programmes designed to promote fish farming in species other than salmon, trout and shellfish; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The fisheries Departments and the Sea Fish Industry Authority (with funding from the Highlands and Islands Development Board) are engaged in research into, and development of, the cultivation of other species of fish, particularly halibut and Dover sole.

Skimmed Milk Powder

38. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the present level of skimmed milk powder intervention stocks in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: At 31 October 1987 accepted intervention stocks of skimmed milk powder totalled 5,897 tonnes. At the same date in 1986 the equivalent figure was 34,119 tonnes.

Tied Accommodation

39. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has figures for the numbers of agricultural workers in tied accommodation for the last three years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Proportions of hired adult workers working full-time in agriculture in England and Wales with a tied house or cottage are estimated to be as follows for the latest three years.

	Percentages
	Men	Women
1984	44·7	13·6
1985	43·4	9·7
1986	42·5	14·8

Agricultural Production

41. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the reduction in agricultural production which will result from the proposals so far published by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: A number of my recent proposals have implications for land use and the level of production on farms. The farm woodland scheme, for which powers are being sought in the Farm Land and Rural Development Bill at present before Parliament, and the extensification scheme, on which I published a consultation document on 8 December, will both provide opportunities for farmers to reorientate their businesses to reduce production. Information on which to base estimates of the actual effects on production will not be available until we know the number of farmers willing to take part in the schemes and the area and productive potential of the farmland concerned. I shall be studying this as part of ongoing monitoring of the schemes when they are being implemented in practice.

Intervention Stocks

42. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the present level of butter and beef intervention stocks in the United Kingdom.

49. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much beef was in intervention stores in the United Kingdom at the latest available date.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A note setting out the volume of intervention stocks in the United Kingdom on the latest available dates, which includes figures for butter and beef, is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly.

Mr. Madel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of grain currently held in intervention in the United Kingdom; and what is his estimate of what it will be by 30 June 1988.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A note setting out the volume of intervention stocks in the United Kingdom on the latest available dates, which includes figures for cereals, is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly. It is not possible to make a precise estimate of the intervention stocks of cereals at 30 June 1988 but they are likely to be substantially below their level at the start of this season.

Milk Output

43. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to have discussions about milk output with the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister gave to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Jones) today.

Creameries (Milk Supplies)

44. Mr. McLeish: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions officials of his Department have recently held with the National Farmers Union, the National Farmers Union (Scotland) and cheese producers regarding the adequacy of supplies of milk to creameries throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Officials of my Department and the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland have been in close touch with the respective Milk Marketing Boards, cheese producers and the National Farmers Union of Scotland about the milk supply situation.

56. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has had any discussions with the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board about any new arrangements to supply milk to cheese-making plants presently without supplies.

Mr. McGregor: As I said during the debate on the common agricultural policy on 24 November, my noble Friend Lord Sanderson and I have discussed this issue with individual marketing boards to see whether a solution can be found and I am now hopeful of the outcome.

Wheat

45. Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate of the United Kingdom wheat harvest for 1987.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department now estimates the 1987 wheat harvest in the United Kingdom to be 12 million tonnes.

Budgetary Stabilisers

46. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in implementing the European Commission's proposals for budgetary stabilisers in further commodity regimes.

54. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Council of Ministers will next consider the implementation of budgetary stabilisers recommended by the European Commission.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave today to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms. Quin).

66. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on implications for less-favoured areas of the stabiliser agreements now being sought within the European Economic Community.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Commission's proposals on agricultural stabilisers do not differentiate between less-favoured areas and other parts of the European Community. The strengthening of budgetary discipline in the CAP is in the interests of farmers generally.

70. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated saving to the European Economic Community budget in 1988-89 of the agriculture stabilisers package.

Mr. MacGregor: The intention of stabilisers is to strengthen budgetary discipline in the agricultural sector. In general, the proposals involve price cuts or other adjustments to the support arrangements linked to increased levels of production or intervention. Negotiations on the details of the stabiliser arrangements, for example the production levels at which action would be triggered, are still continuing and therefore it is not possible to say at this stage what the effects of the stabilisers will be. The Government's aim in the negotiations is to agree measures which will genuinely restrain expenditure and produce substantial savings in spending.

Wheat, Barley and Oats

48. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the level of wheat, barley and oats production he projects for the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Given the significance of the weather for cereals yields, it is not possible to produce a reliable forecast of United Kingdom cereals production before the harvest.

Dairy Industry

50. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet representatives of the farming unions to discuss the state of the dairy industry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have frequent meetings with representatives of farming organisations, although at present I have no plans to discuss this specific topic with them.

62. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has recently received concerning the future of the dairy industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I receive numerous representations on this topic.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will detail the assistance given to dairy farmers since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government's policy has been to provide the industry with a firmer long-term foundation by matching production more closely with the needs of the market. This is, of course, particularly true in the dairy sector, where the surplus problem has been the most serious.

Massive resources were devoted to the allocation of quotas and to cushioning the effects on the most vulnerable producers—for example by means of a £50 million outgoers scheme, and the restoration of quota cutbacks to those with low levels of production. In Community negotiations the Government secured and have successfully fought to maintain flexibility through the formula B system and regional compensation. The reductions in quota agreed last December were accompanied by generous compensation to producers. At this year's price fixing the Government secured the continuation of quota leasing.

At a domestic level ADAS has helped farmers develop production and business management strategies to meet the reduced output requirements under quotas. The Government are supporting a number of projects in research centres which are of direct relevance to the problems of the dairy industry, and efforts have been made to maximise the clarity and flexibility of the mechanisms for the transfer of milk quotas. Dairy products are among those promoted by Food from Britain and my Department is currently considering with the industry a diary product programme under EC regulation 355/77.

Details of the current level of public spending on support of the dairy industry will be set out in the annual review White Paper to be published shortly. In 1986/7, spending on direct market support in the dairy sector represented nearly £100 per cow.

The dairy industry's own enterprise, and the Government's commitment to it, have contributed to improved farm incomes in real terms over the last two years.

Food (Colouring Matter)

52. Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Food Advisory Committee's final report on the colouring matter in foods regulations 1979.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Regulations were laid before Parliament on 3 December (SI 1987/1987) implementing the Food Advisory Committee's recommendations to ban the use of any added colours (except three vitamin sources) in foods prepared specially for babies and young children, to delete yellow 2G from the permitted list of colours and to prohibit the use of methyl violet for marking rinds of citrus fruits.

We are still considering the other recommendations in the report in the light of public comments received on them. I shall make a further announcement when we have come to a conclusion on this.

NFU (Derbyshire)

57. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to meet representatives of Derbyshire National Farmers Union.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My noble Friend Baroness Trumpington has recently accepted an invitation to visit members of the Derbyshire National Farmers Union.

Farm Workers (Wages)

59. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is yet in a position to provide the information requested by the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 24 November, Official Report, column 225, relating to the powers of agriculture wages boards to require employers to pay contributions towards the pensions of farm workers as part of the minimum wages conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I wrote to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 10 December 1987.

Matters concerning the Agricultural Wages Board for Scotland are for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. The Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales has the powers to set such terms and conditions of employment as it thinks fit which, I am advised, could include the setting up of a pension fund. However, the exercise of its discretionary powers is entirely a matter for the board itself. The Government have no statutory powers of direction over its activities.

Share Fishermen

60. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from share fishermen on their net income levels.

Mr. Gummer: In 1984 my Department received correspondence about share fishermen and the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) instigated an Adjournment debate on July 1984, at columns 852-60. There have been no recent representations.

Light Dues

65. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of light dues on the fishing industry.

Mr. Gummer: Further to the reply I gave my hon. Friend on Thursday 2 July, at column 156, the extension of the liability to pay light dues to fishing vessels will ensure the maintenance of the Racal Decca navigator system, which is so important to skippers, not only as a navigational aid but also in locating the fishing grounds. And fishermen will save money because the cost of navigator receivers, which were previously only available for hire, has been reduced substantially this year.

Food Industry (Internal Market)

67. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the implications for the British food industry of the completion of the internal market.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The United Kingdom food and drink industries keep me regularly informed of their views on all aspects of the food law harmonisation issues arising from the EC proposals for completing the internal market by 1992.

Food Labelling

69. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the Food Advisory Committee report on the review of labelling claims on food products.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Food Advisory Committee is not carrying out any general review of labelling claims on food products. I have recently received advice on the use of the word "natural" and other similar claims in food labelling and I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for York (Mr. Gregory). The Food Advisory Committee is also considering whether there should be further controls over nutrition claims in food labelling and I hope to receive its advice shortly.

Council of Ministers

71. Mr. Wray: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last attended a meeting of the European Community's Council of Fisheries Ministers; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell).

Fish

72. Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is in a position to estimate the level of the human consumption of fresh fish and frozen fish-products over the next two years in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Data from the Sea Fish Industry Authority show that overall demand for fresh fish and processed fish products is generally buoyant, and is likely to remain so.

Single European Market

74. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements he is making within the areas of his responsibility in preparation for the advent of the single European market in 1992.

Mr. MacGregor: Ministers and officials of my Department are constantly in touch with the agriculture, fisheries and food industries on topics of current concern and on prospective future developments, including the progressive removal of remaining trade barriers within the Community. On 24 November at column 152, my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade announced plans for a campaign to increase awareness of the implications of the single market. This campaign will be aimed at all relevant sectors of British business, including those for which I am responsible.

ALURE

79. Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Association of District Councils about encouraging the ALURE package.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State met the Association of District Councils yesterday to discuss the farm woodland scheme. We have also involved the association and some individual district councils in the consultations we have undertaken on the various ALURE initiatives.

Caterers

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what responses he has had to the draft advice for caterers issued by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The draft guidelines for caterers referred to by my hon. Friend are intended to encourage caterers to provide information to assist consumers follow the recommendations of the COMA report to reduce consumption of fat. Four responses have been received to date. We shall be following up these proposals with the organisations concerned.

Straw Burning

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on straw burning by farmers during the 1987 harvest season.

Mr. Gummer: Fewer incidents of careless or inconsiderate burning of straw and stubble were reported to my Department following this year's harvest than in 1986. I welcome this further improvement, which suggests that most farmers have observed the local byelaws and the NFU code of practice to which my Department has drawn attention in successive publicity campaigns.

I am also encouraged by the results of this year's straw survey which have just emerged. These show that much less straw is now disposed of by burning compared to the position in the early 1980s and confirm the trend towards incorporation.

Waste Straw

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on current developments in the utilisation of waste straw for industrial purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My Department takes a keen interest in the prospects for the increased utilisation of surplus straw as a fuel and in the manufacture of compost, animal feed and straw board, where significant quantities are already used. We are also interested in the possible development of new outlets such as paper manufacture.

In order to encourage investment in these areas my Department has asked the EC Commission to consider their inclusion within the cereals programme for England and Wales under regulation 355/77, which provides for FEOGA grants for marketing and processing projects.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The latest figures for estimated advertising expenditure by my Department in 1987-88 are as follows:

Television	nil
Radio	nil
Newspapers	12,000
Other
ADAS exhibition/ video	267,000
Campaigns	368,000

As regards 1988-89, detailed decisions on expenditure by media have not yet been taken but we expect the overall publicity figure to be about £800,000.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Based on the latest MINIM returns, estimated expenditure by my Department on press liaison and information policy will be £700,000 in 1987-88. A similar sum is likely to be required in 1988-89.

Sheep

14. Mr. Allen MacKay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has as to whether sheep with radioactivity levels above the level of 1,000 bq/kg entered the food chain from north Yorkshire following the Chernobyl accident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am satisfied from the monitoring that we have done both in 1986 and more recently that it is extremely unlikely that any sheep showing radioactivity above 1,000 bq/kg has entered the food chain.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many (a) ewes and (b) lambs in the restricted area of Cumbria, were monitored and released unmarked each month since the apricot marking scheme was introduced;

(2) how many (a) ewes and (b) lambs in the restricted area of Cumbria, were marked apricot and released for each month since the initiation of the new scheme;

(3) how many (a) ewes and (b) lambs in the restricted area of Cumbria, were green-sprayed in each month since the introduction of the new scheme in the current year;

(4) how many monitored lambs were blue-painted and released during each calendar month in the restricted area of Cumbria from 18 August 1986;

(5) how many non-monitored lambs were blue-painted and released during each calendar month in the restricted area of Cumbria from 18 August 1986;

(6) how many non-monitored sheep, in the restricted area of Cumbria other than lambs, were blue-painted and released for (a) further fattening and (b) breeding, broken down into categories of ewe, shearling and tup;

(7) how many monitored sheep, in the restricted area of Cumbria, other than lambs, were blue-painted and released for (a) further fattening and (b) breeding, broken down into categories of ewe, shearing and tup;

(8) how many non-monitored gimmer lambs in the restricted area of Cumbria were red-painted for away wintering to return for breeding;

(9) how many monitored gimmer lambs in the restricted area of Cumbria were red-painted for away wintering to return for breeding;

(10) how many non-monitored sheep, in the restricted area of Cumbria, other than gimmers, were red-painted and released for (a) fattening or (b) breeding, broken down into categories of ewe, shearling or tup;

(11) how many monitored sheep, in the restricted area of Cumbria, other than gimmers, were red-painted and released for (a) fattening or (b) breeding, broken down into categories of ewe, shearling or tup;

(12) how many sheep were monitored for radioactivity under the mark and release scheme in England in each month since 1 September 1986;

(13) how many sheep were monitored for radioactivity and sprayed green in England in each month since 1 September 1986;

(14) how many sheep were monitored for radioactivity and not marked and thus released in England in each month since 1 September 1986;

(15) how many red an blue-marked sheep were released for slaughter into the food chain in England during each week of January, February and March;

(16) how many apricot-marked sheep were released for slaughter into the food chain each month after 25 May in England.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information sought is not always available in the manner requested. Relevant information in my Department's possession is set out in the table.

(a) Ewes and lambs monitored and released unmarked from Cumbria restricted area since apricot marking scheme introduced on 22 December 1986:

[1] All remaining blue marked sheep released from slaughter restrictions on 27 February 1987.—is not possible to say how many of these will have been in England.

(p) Apricot marked sheep released for slaughter into food chain in England from 25 May 1987.

No apricot-marked sheep were re-monitored and identified as eligible for slaughter by Ministry ear-tag in England but all apricot marked sheep were released from slaughter restrictions on 28 September 1987. It is not possible to say how many of these will have been in England.

Note: Some of the dates given in the above tables are those when the information was recorded centrally and may not accord exactly with the date when the animals were monitored or moved.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep were monitored for radioactivity in each month in England since 1 September 1986 for experimental purposes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There is a flock of some 100 sheep in Cumbria which we have monitored continuously for experimental purposes to detect any month by month variations in levels of radiocaesium. In addition, under contract to us, both the National Radiological Protection Board and the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology have carried out similar activity on several other smaller groups of sheep.

Milk

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise in the Council of Agriculture Ministers the question of milk quotas with a view to (a) releasing the Scottish Milk Marketing Board area from the 5·5 per cent. temporary suspension of milk quota, (b) the introduction of a temporary measure to effect a small re-allocation of United Kingdom milk quota to the Scottish Milk Marketing Board area and (c) the release of part of the European Economic Community reserve milk quota, on a non-intervention basis, to the cheese producers of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The shortages of milk for cheesemaking which have occurred in parts of the United Kingdom primarily reflect problems relating to pricing, marketing and distribution rather than to quota levels. I and my noble Friend Lord Sanderson have discussed this issue with individual marketing boards and I am now hopeful of the outcome.

Dolphins and Pilot Whales

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will consider imposing trade sanctions against Denmark in protest at the slaughter of dolphins and pilot whales in the Faroe Islands;

(2) if he will make representations to the Danish Government regarding the slaughter of pilot whales and dolphins in the Faroe Islands.

Mr. Gummer: The Danish Government are fully aware of the United Kingdom's view on this issue, after my statement of our view on whaling at the International whaling Commission's annual conference in June. At meetings of the IWC the United Kingdom has already taken the lead, with the support of other countries, in securing the detailed examination by the commission's working group on humane killing of the conditions under which the Faroese pilot whale hunt is conducted. As a result of the United Kingdom initiative the commission agreed a statement urging Denmark, which has responsibility for the international relations of the Faroe Islands, to encourage the Faroese authorities to modify those hunt practices giving rise to particular concern and to adopt more humane procedures. At the most recent IWC meeting in June, we registered our continuing concern and the IWC formulated a further statement calling for action by the Danes. A response is awaited. I raised this matter direct with the Danish Fisheries Minister when I saw him in Copenhagen last month.

The Government do not consider that trade sanctions would be an appropriate means of influencing the Faroese attitude on this matter. We shall continue to work with like-minded countries through the IWC as the most appropriate forum through which to seek progress.

Green Pound

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to the effect on (a) the beef sector, (b) the dairy sector and (c) the sheep sector of devaluations in the green pound and interest rate changes since December 1986.

Mr. MacGregor: Since December 1986, green pound devaluations have raised basic support prices by 11·8 per cent. in the beef sector, 4·7 per cent. in the dairy sector and 2·7 per cent. in the sheep sector. The effect on agricultural sectors of the 2½ per cent. decline in interest rates compared with December 1986 will be generally beneficial, but the effect on individual farmers will depend on their particular circumstances.

Beef

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will detail measures taken by Her Majesty's Government to assist the beef sector since 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: At successive price fixings, in the face of almost unanimous opposition from the member states and the European Commission, we have successfully defended the beef variable premium scheme, which is currently worth £120 million per year to United Kingdom producers. At the December 1986 Council we secured the premium for a further two years, as well as taking steps to restrict intervention. Successive devaluations of the green pound have increased the value of the maximum rate of variable premium from 8·74p per live kg in December 1984 to 10·04p per live kg now and thus improved producers' returns.

The specialist beef sector has been further helped by increases in the suckler cow premium. This was doubled in 1984 from £12·37 to £24·74 a head, and was increased by a further 35 per cent. to £33·40 earlier this year, the maximum permitted under Community rules for the current year. It is now worth £37 million per year.

The annual value of hill livestock compensatory allowances paid to beef producers in the United Kingdom's less favoured areas increased from £38·9 million in 1984 to some £50 million this year. Beef enterprises also benefited by about £11 million from the special aid paid out in 1985 to help those livestock producers most seriously affected by the exceptionally bad weather.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Charles Morrison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has received from the Farm Animal Welfare Council on the welfare implications of using bovine somatotropin to increase milk production.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The chairman of the council, Professor Sir Richard Harrison, wrote the following letter to my right hon. Friend the Minister on 26 October:

Dear Minister

Mr. Jopling wrote to me on 27 April requesting the Council's advice by the end of September on the welfare implications of using bovine somatotropin to increase milk production.

The investigation was undertaken by a small Working Group of members whose recommendations have been endorsed by the full Council. As Mr. Jopling recognised the time available to us was limited and I must point out that it has not proved possible to carry out as searching and wide-ranging an investigation as we would have wished. Those whom we consulted were under similar constraints due to the tight timetable.

Before drawing up our recommendations, we considered confidential data from the pharmaceutical companies actively engaged in work on BST. We also received written submissions from the Farmers Unions, MMB, BVA and RCVS and animal welfare organisations. Oral evidence was taken from researchers who are conducting trials on the use of BST and from representatives of the National Office of Animal Health (NOAH). The Group also visited two farms where BST is being tested under commercial conditions, and had discussions with the farmers and their respective veterinary surgeons.

The following factors were examined: metabolic stress; administration of BST and its consequences; the occurrence and frequency of disease; reproductive efficiency; and ways in which husbandry might have to be modified, including nutritional implications.

We have concluded that, on the basis of the existing experimental work, including the continuing trials being carried out at the AFRC Institute for Grassland and Animal Production (IGAP) and on the farms visited, there is, at present, no evidence of any welfare problems arising from the use of BST in the short term. There are, however, areas of uncertainty which could have welfare implications where additional scientific information may be required in order to take a more considered opinion.

These areas are as follows:

(a) the time of administration to high yielding cows;

(b) the effect of BST on long-term reproductive efficiency;

(c) responses of cows differing in body composition and on differing levels of energy and protein nutrition, to BST;

(d) the effect of BST on potential skeletal problems in heifers;
(e) all aspects of performance of calves born from treated animals;
(f) the effect which exogenous growth hormone may have on the ability of the animal to produce endogenous growth hormone, and thus on subsequent unsupplemented performance;
(g) the use of BST over a number of lactations in the same animal.

The Council believes that results of such research work will need to be carefully considered before the longer term effects of using BST can be properly evaluated.

If this further research provides satisfactory answers to these questions then there would be no fundamental objections on welfare grounds to the use of BST. However, if it shows that there is a genuine welfare problem, the Government will need to consider making regulations under the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968.

In addition there appear to be a number of potential welfare abuses which could arise from:

(a) use of BST to exploit over-stretched cull cows by extending lactation;
(b) lack of appropriate facilities for injection on some farms;
(c) administration of BST without adequate veterinary supervision;
(d) administration of BST to cows whose milk yield was depressed by reason of undiagnosed disease or metabolic disorders;
(e) inadequacy of nutritional levels in some systems.

The Council therefore recommends that guidelines for the commercial administration of BST, including monitoring of herd performance and health, should be drawn up in conjunction with the RCVS and that its use should be subject to veterinary supervision. This of course assumes that no welfare problems are revealed which necessitate more fundamental controls.

I am copying this letter to the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales.

Yours sincerely
Richard Harrison

Lamb Exports

Mr. Charles Morrison: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what decisions have been reached on the exemption from the European Community clawback tax on British exports of lamb to third countries.

Mr. MacGregor: I am pleased to report that, following the representations we have been making on behalf of the industry, the Community has adopted a new regulation, recently published in the Official Journal, which extends the exemption on clawback of variable premium on Great Britain exports for a further year from 4 January 1988. This is an important measure which will help maintain and expand our lamb and mutton exports.

The picture on exports is encouraging all round. Taking third country and Community markets together, we now export over 20 per cent. of our lamb and mutton production, worth some £133 million in 1986. An increase is forecast for 1987.

I attach high priority to ensuring that we sustain and improve further our exports.

Equines (Tethering)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have to introduce restrictions on the tethering of horses, ponies and donkeys.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

There are no such plans. It is already an offence under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 to cause unnecessary suffering to a domestic or captive animal. It is also an offence under the Abandonment of Animals Act 1960 to abandon a domestic or captive animal in circumstances likely to cause unnecessary suffering.

TRANSPORT

Sprinter Trains

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to whether any losses arising from the most recent contract for sprinter trains awarded by British Rail will be taken into account when the contract for the sale of British Rail Engineering workshops is negotiated or finalised.

Mr. David Mitchell: The British Railways Board does not expect BREL to make a loss on this order.

Lorries (Noise)

Mr. Boswell To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what current regulations apply to noise emission by heavy lorries; what changes are planned; and whether he will make a statement on current compliance and available technology to meet these requirements.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The noise limit for the heaviest lorries first used since 1 October 1983 is 88dB(A). A new limit for these vehicles of 84dB(A) will apply to all lorries type approved on or after 1 October 1989, and to all lorries first used on or after 1 April 1991. To aid the development of lorries capable of meeting the new limit, the Government and industry have collaborated on a programme of research and development (QHV90) which is due to be completed next year.

Greater Manchester Light Rapid Transit System

Mr. Alfred Morris To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if a decision has now been reached on the financing of a light rapid transit system for Greater Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I am considering a report by the Department's financial advisers and comments from the passenger transport authority and passenger transport executive. I shall advise the House of my decision as soon as possible.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Mr. Channon: The number of staff currently employed in press and public relations in the Department of Transport is 17.

The number planned to be employed at this point in 1988 is 18.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Mr. Channon: The estimated spending by the Department of Transport for 1987-88 is as follows:

	£ million
Television advertising	2·31
Radio advertising	0·05
Press advertising	0·14
other promotional material	3·01
Total	5·51

Detailed decisions have not yet been taken on expenditure by media for 1988-89, but the overall publicity figure is expected to be £5 million.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Channon: The latest estimate for expenditure on press and public relations for 1987-88 is £373,000. The planned level of expenditure for next year is £400,000 at current prices. These figures cover the overall cost of running the press office function calculated using Her Majesty's Treasury ready reckoner for staff and other costs.

London Underground (Safety)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many statutory notices the railways inspectorate has issued to London Underground under the Health and Safey etc. Act 1974, and any other legislation, respectively, in the current year and the two preceding years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The only statutory notices served have been under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act. The figures are 1987 — 1; 1986 — Nil; 1985 — 1. In addition, a notice was served in 1985 to a contractor working at an underground station.

Public Transport (London)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times, in an official capacity, he has (a) travelled on and (b) visited the buildings of (i) London Underground and (ii) London Buses.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend and I make such visits from time to time as the occasion demands.

Road Accident Reporting

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will report the results of the review of the road accident reporting system (STATS 19).

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The report of the review is now complete and is being released as a statistical bulletin. A copy is in the Library.

The main findings are as follows:

(i) The present STATS 19 system (revised in 1979) should be retained. Modern database systems should be used as far as possible in order that any future changes can be more readily implemented.

(ii) A new return should be introduced, which would record the registration number of vehicles involved in personal injury accidents. These vehicle registration numbers would be matched with vehicle records held at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre (DVLC) and relevant information about the vehicle would be copied to the STATS 19 files. Information from the enhanced database would be used to assess the safety of different types of vehicle in various circumstances, including the effects on occupants and pedestrians.

(iii) Details of the new return and the date for its implementation should be determined as a result of discussions with the police and local authorities at the Standing Committee on Road Accident Statistics.

(iv) Following recommendation (ii), consideration should be given to dropping those data items on the STATS 19 form, which will be obtainable from the vehicle records at DVLC.

Following these recommendations—discussions are in progress with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the local authority associations — our objective is to ensure that we are fully equipped with the right statistics to support our efforts to cut road casualties.

Road Accident Statistics

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, for each year commencing with the year preceding that in which the breathalyser test was first in force, the number of persons killed in road accidents when in charge of a motor vehicle, classified according to appropriate levels of their blood alcohol count.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Sample data available from coroners (England and Wales) and procurators fiscal (Scotland) are given in the table:

Air Safety

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer given in the Official Report on 8 December, at column 65, on the Manchester airport tragedy, if he will outline the recommendations made between September and December 1985 inclusive by the air accident investigation branch concerning the safety of passengers.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The following safety recommendations have been made by the inspector of accidents conducting the investigation into the Boeing 737 accident at Manchester airport which occurred in August 1985:

1. On 19 September 1985. Recommended that the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) urgently review the approval of the cabin configuration as it existed on G-BGJL, assuming that it conformed to a CAA format. In particular, it is strongly recommended that you consider the removal of all row 10 seats to afford reasonable identification of, and unrestricted access to, the overwing exits. Further, if access to the overwing exits on other types is similarly impaired, we recommend that those types be included in the above review.

2. On 14 October 1985. It is recommended that consideration be given to revising the evacuation drill and — or providing an alternative tailored to the Manchester type of incident. It is further recommended that the drills of other 737 operators and where appropriate the drills on other types be reviewed in the light of the Manchester experience.

3. On 4 December 1985. Recommended that the CAA reconsider the approval of the public address (PA) system which allows a single engine failure to dramatically reduce its usefulness and to review other aircraft types with a view to discovering if any other PA system would suffer in a similar way due to any single failure.

Further it is recommended that consideration be given to a requirement that the high gain setting be manually selectable so that it would be available for an emergency situation whatever the engine aircraft system conditions.

4. On 23 December 1985. It is strongly recommended that the Civil Aviation Authority urgently give serious consideration to the early formulation of a smoke hood — mask requirement such that an effective level of protection is afforded to passengers under such conditions. It is additionally recommended that the Civil Aviation Authority endeavour to convince the Federal Aviation Administration of the continuing pressing need for such a requirement, which that body had the foresight to recognise in their associated notice of proposed rule making in 1969.

Pedestrian Crossing (Milton Ernest)

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to place a pedestrian crossing over the A6 at Milton Ernest, in view of the speed and volume of traffic passing through the village.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no present proposals for a crossing.

Driving Test

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to have completed consultations with driving instructors' organisations so as to be in a position to announce his decision on the review of the driving test.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have asked for considered views by February. We shall decide how to proceed after that.

Merchant Navy Reserve

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Her Majesty's Government's plans for establishing a Merchant Navy reserve include the appointment of a director general to head the reserve; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Powers to establish the Merchant Navy reserve are contained in the Merchant Shipping Bill at present in the other place. My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping, outlined the main features of the reserve at Second Reading. Arrangements for its administration are under consideration.

British Rail (Season Ticket Holders)

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the level and quality of services for British Rail annual season ticket holders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I receive on average about 3,000 representations a year from MPs, their constituents, and directly from members of the travelling public, about the quality of BR's service to commuters.

Severe Weather (Communications)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information is available to him about the equipment held by local authorities to enable them to keep lines of communication open during severe weather.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department provides all the vehicles and equipment for the winter maintenance of motorways in England. It has a fleet of 258 purpose-built Foden snowplough-spreader vehicles and 21 Rolba snowblowers. In emergencies these vehicles can be hired by local authorities for use on other roads provided they are not needed on the motorways.

Winter maintenance of all-purpose trunk roads is carried out by local highway authorities acting as our agents. They are also responsible for dealing with local roads. The Department does not keep records of all the equipment held by them for these purposes, although a code of practice lays down the standards to be met in maintaining trunk roads in accordance with agency agreements.

Ice Warnings

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his procedures for relaying ice warnings to local authorities.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Local authorities obtain forecasts of road weather conditions from their local meteorological weather centre. The Meteorological Office has introduced an "open road" service for local authorities which incorporates ice prediction and thermal mapping techniques which the Department has been promoting. This service is tailored to suit the need of individual authorities and includes a 24-hour forecast, a two-to-five day forecast, weather charts of key trends, ice prediction, a 24-hour consultancy, and regular updates. The Department shares the cost of the service with local authorities acting as its motorway-trunk road agents.

The Department encourages local authorities to install their own ice prediction systems and to have their roads thermally mapped. It has issued advice notices on these and will pay a share of the costs to cover motorways and other trunk roads. The Department has also drawn up a specification for a national ice prediction network. Ice prediction systems serve as a source of extra information to aid local meteorological offices in making more accurae forecasts of road conditions.

Road Salting

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what monitoring is carried out by his Department to ensure that local authorities have adequate supplies of salt, and the necessary equipment to assess the amount of salt already on the roads, and to carry out salting operations.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department lays down standards of salting for trunk roads. We do not monitor the salt supplies held by local authorities for use on these or local roads. Their normal practice is to order salt supplies in the spring-summer sufficient to cover a normal winter. They will order extra supplies during the winter if their stocks run low in the event of an unusually severe winter. ICI hold a large stockpile at their Cheshire mines as a reserve supply and for this winter are putting more emergency stockpiles at strategic points around the country to avoid any possible transport problems.

The Department expects local authorities to have sufficient equipment to carry out salting operations on all-purpose trunk roads and local roads. For motorways, the Department has a fleet of 258 purpose-built snowplough-spreader vehicles which are garaged at 98 motorway compounds strategically placed along the motorway network. The salt for motorway use is stored at these compounds, usually in salt barns, and all the necessary equipment for loading the salt into the vehicles is provided there as well. Equipment is available which measures residual salinity on roads, but its accuracy is questionable. The Department does not use this equipment on its roads.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities have adequate financial resources to carry out the necessary salting of roads in severe weather.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department provides funding to local authorities acting as its motorway-trunk road agents for the winter maintenance of these roads. For this winter, the Department has made a provision of £15 million. In the event of a severe winter, the Department will make extra funding available to its agents who incur extra costs in carrying out the winter maintenance of these roads.

Local authority expenditure on winter maintenance of the roads for which they are responsible is supported by block grant, which is apportioned to grant-related expenditure. There is a GRE component for winter maintenance which is based on the average number of days of air frost and snow coverage for an authority, multiplied by road lengths.

Vehicle Excise Tax Evasion

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluations he has made of the recent campaign against vehicle excise tax evasion in south Wales.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The campaign covered the whole of Wales. A total of 1,568 cases of evasion of vehicle excise duty are being investigated and 1,177 have so far been referred for prosecution.

The cost-effectiveness of this campaign cannot be calculated until the full results are available. In previous campaigns income from fines, back duty and costs, plus the extra licences bought as a result of campaign publicity has, on average, been over 20 times greater than the Department's costs. I will write to the hon. Member early in the new year with further details for the south Wales area.

Road Traffic Law Review

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the names of the members of the Road Traffic Law Review and their terms of reference.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The members are:

Dr. Peter North (Chairman)—Principal, Jesus College, Oxford

Professor Richard Alsop — Professor of Transport Studies, University College, London

G. L. Angel—Home Office

S. Davidson—Home Office

D. M. Smith—Department of Transport

T. W. Hall—Lately Department of Transport.

Their terms of reference are:

To consider what improvements might be made to the following aspects of road traffic law, particularly in respect of simplification, effectiveness and acceptability, taking account of their relationship with other aspects of road traffic law:

(a) the structure of and penalties for the offences in sections 1-3 of the Road Traffic Act 1972: causing death by reckless driving; reckless driving, and careless driving;

(b) whether the present penalty points system needs any amendment and, in particular, whether offences which are endorsable with penalty points can be divided into "points" and "no points" offences;

(c) the structure of and penalties for offences relating to:

(i) driver licensing,

(ii) construction and use and
(iii) failure to comply with traffic signs;

(d) whether new types of penalty for traffic offences would be appropriate in place of or in addition to existing types of penalty, in particular the possible wider application of statutory driving tests for certain types of offences or in certain circumstances.

In August 1986 the terms of reference were extended to include consideration of:

(e) whether vehicle removal, impounding and wheel clamping would be appropriate, effective and acceptable means of dealing with a wider range of offences involving vehicles.

DEFENCE

Effluent Treatment (Cardiff)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the levels of (a) beryllium and (b) natural or depleted uranium in the effluent discharges from Atomic Weapons Establishment Cardiff, formerly Royal Ordnance Factory, in the years between 1962 and 1987; and if he will publish an estimate of the likely discharge levels of these materials following the commissioning of the new effluent treatment plant.

Mr. Sainsbury: I shall write to the Hon. member.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the reasons for installing an improved effluent treatment plant at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen, Cardiff; when he expects the new plant to be commissioned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The existing effluent treatment plant at the atomic weapons establishment, Cardiff, reduces the beryllium waste content to a consistently low level. It continues to operate effectively and there is no reason for its immediate replacement. Like most items of plant, however, the costs of maintenance increase with time and there are therefore plans to reduce the existing effluent treatment plant in due course by plant of at least equal efficacy.

Auxiliary Oiler Replenishment Vessel

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects to arrange a decision on the placing of an order for AOR 2; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I am pleased to be able to announce that agreement has been reached with Swan Hunter Shipbuilders on a contract for the second auxiliary oiler replenishment vessel. This follows the preferential opportunity given to the company to bid for this order as announced by my right hon. Friend in the House on 24 April 1986 at column 434. Construction is expected to begin next year.

AWRE Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contracting-out of processing and handling work at AWRE Aldermaston.

Mr. Sainsbury: There has been no contracting-out of any part of the manufacturing process at the atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston. Contractors are, however, involved in the provision of services and construction of facilities at the establishment.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has of the annual cost of (a) paying and (b) equipping the forces stationed in the Falkland Islands; what estimate he has of annual transport costs; and what estimate he has of the cost in the current financial year of (i) new building and equipment, (ii) maintenance and (ii) staffing on Ascension Island.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The additional cost to the Defence budget of maintaining a garrison in the Falkland Islands in 1987-88 is £141 million. This includes all extra costs relating to the Falklands garrison, whether the costs are incurred on the islands themselves or elsewhere, such as Ascension. It excludes those personnel, equipment and other costs which would be incurred in the absence of the Falklands commitment; these are not identifiable without disproportionate cost and effort.

RAF Bases (Alert States)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions (a) RAF Molesworth, (b) RAF Greenham common and (c) all RAF bases have been in each of the categories of alert over the past year.

Mr. Ian Stewart: For security reasons, it is not our normal practice to give details of alert states.

French Defence Minister

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of his recent discussion with the French Defence Minister, with particular reference to the possible joint development or purchase of an air-launched stand-off nuclear missile to replace free-fall bombs.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend met his French colleague, M. Giraud, in London on 14 December as part of the normal series of exchanges between the two countries. They discussed a wide range of defence issues. Their talks included consideration of each country's requirements for an air-launched stand off missile. It was agreed that further studies should be undertaken to identify where the British and French requirements were similar and assess what merit there might be in collaboration.

The procurement of a replacement for Britain's current theatre nuclear weapon, the free-fall bomb, is a long-term undertaking. A number of options are open to us and no decisions have yet been taken.

Surplus Firearms

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why pistols sold to QED by his Department and shown in the appropriation accounts for 1982-83 as being the subject of a £450,000 settlement, were not subject to the nationally agreed policy referred to in the reply of 14 December, Official Report, column 346, relating to the disposal of surplus firearms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The contract for the sale of pistols to QED (Design and Development) Ltd. pre-dated the current policy. The settlement arose from the cancellation of the contract in the light of the change of policy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Strangers Gallery

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Lord Privy Seal if he will bring forward proposals to allow note-taking in the Strangers Gallery by members of the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: No. Visitors attend the Strangers' Gallery in order to listen and observe proceedings of the House. In accordance with the resolution of the Services Committee, 21 January 1981, I do not believe that it would be appropriate to allow note-taking when records of our proceedings are widely available, both in Hansard and in the national press.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Vietnam

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how Her Majesty's Government will respond to the request by the Government of Vietnam for humanitarian assistance for the victims of Typhoon Mary No. 6.

Mr. Chris Patten: We shall not be making a bilateral contribution in response to the request. The European Community would, however, be prepared to consider providing humanitarian assistance through non-governmental organisations.

Ethiopia

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the recent $22 million Ethiopian emergency appeal made by UNICEF.

Mr. Chris Patten: We shall consider the UNICEF appeal against other emergency needs in Ethiopia.

Famine Relief

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to ensure that the recent £2 million contribution to the Disasters Emergency Committee will be spent on famine relief to benefit starving people, especially women and children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Her Majesty's Government's contribution to this appeal is being used to respond to specific requests from the charities represented on the committee: the British Red Cross Society, CAFOD, Christian Aid, Oxfam, and the Save the Children Fund. In considering such requests we are concerned to ensure that the aid provided will benefit those most in need, half of whom are children.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to release grain and other surplus food from European Community intervention stores for dispatch to Ethiopia to alleviate the famine there.

Mr. Chris Patten: European surpluses are being used to help meet famine needs in Ethiopia. This year the European Community has pledged 154,000 tonnes of cereals, mostly from within Europe, for this purpose. In addition, from our own bilateral food aid programme, Britain is providing 37,000 tonnes of cereals, of which 30,500 tonnes are being purchased within Europe.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the likely effect of the recent efficiency unit proposals on his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The efficiency unit's report on improving management in Government is still being considered by Ministers.

Rural Postal Services

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Post Office to discuss rural postal services.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster meets the chairman of the Post Office from time to time to discuss matters of current interest but has no specific plans to discuss rural postal services.

Kingrosia Park, Clydach

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will now reply to the letter sent to him by the hon. Member for Gower relating to the problems experienced by the residents of Kingrosia park, Clydach, following a company going into liquidation.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I greatly regret that the letter which the hon. Member for Gower sent in May has been lost. It was not clear at that time which Department should answer and the letter appears to have been lost in transit. If the hon. Member writes to me again, I shall ensure that he receives a prompt reply from the right Department.

Northumberland (Rural Post Offices)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, when he next meets the chairman of the Post Office, he will discuss with him the consequences of the proposed downgrading of Northumberland's rural post offices to community offices.

Mr. Butcher: The introduction of community offices in Northumberland is an operational matter for the Post Office Board, and I am asking the chairman to write to my hon. Friend about this.

ERG Group (Takeover)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will refer the proposed takeover by Granada of the ERG Group, including Servicescope, to the Monopolies and Merger Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The proposed acquisition by Granada of the ERG Group is currently being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading. My right hon. and noble Friend will make his decision whether to refer the proposal to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in the light of the director general's advice.

Racal-Vodaphone

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he proposes to reclaim for the purposes of reallocation the 40 GSM channels granted on a temporary basis to Racal-Vodaphone; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: All the channels in question have now been released by Racal-Vodafone.

British Steel Corporation

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to include in any legislation for the privatisation of the British Steel Corporation a provision precluding the purchase of the corporation by foreign buyers; what consideration he has given to the position of the corporation's subsidiary Universe Engineers Steels in this regard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: We shall consider whether there is a case for restricting ownership in relation to BSC, but no decisions have yet been taken. The ownership of private sector firms in which BSC has holdings is a matter for the shareholders.

National Girobank

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he intends to offer National Girobank for sale as a share issue open to the general public; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he expects to raise any money from the sale of Girobank in any of the next three financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 December at column 335.

Inner-city Initiative

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the estimated outturn expenditure figures for 1987-88 for each of the inner-city initiatives announced by he Government since 1983.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department's budget provides finance for the special budgets of the city action teams and for the top-up funds of the inner-city task forces. Provision for the special budgets of the CATs is £5 million in 1987-88. I expect this to be fully committed to projects in the city areas they cover. The top-up budget of the inner-city initiative is £14 million this year, and I expect a substantial proportion of it to be spent on or committed to projects in the 16 task force areas. It is too soon to estimate the outturn of expenditure but I expect that not all available top-up funds will actually be spent in 1987-88 because half of the task forces have only started work during 1987 and we need to be sure that the money is committed to projects addressing the employment and enterprise aims of the initiative. The flow of programmes and approval is now speeding up rapidly and we are entering into substantial future commitments. The hon. Member may wish to ask similar questions of my colleagues with urban policy responsibilities about the budgets for their Department's programmes.

British Steel

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has on the amount spent by British Steel in advertising in 1986-87 and the projected spend in 1987-88, and what plans he has to use public money to advertise British Steel in the current or in the next financial year.

Mr. Atkins: Expenditure on advertising by the British Steel Corporation about its products or activities is a matter for the board. No decisions have yet been taken on the funding of advertising relating to the corporation's privatisation.

Postal Services

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of the Post Office about the future of postal services.

Mr. Butcher: I have had discussions in recent weeks with the chairman of the Post Office about various matters concerning the future of postal services.

Patent Office

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will consider Sheffield for the relocation of the Patent Office.

Mr. Butcher: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Members for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) and for Harrogate (Mr. Banks) on 10 December 1987 at column 239.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Registered Homes Tribunal

Ms. Harman: To ask the Attorney-General if he will give the names of the chairs of the Registered Homes Tribunal.

The Attorney-General: The chairmen of the Registered Homes Tribunal are:

His Honour B. H. Gerrard
W. Morris Jones
J. C. R. Fieldsend
G. F. Harwood
R. H.Christie
Mrs. M. Rutherford

Mr. Jeremy Warner

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received from the International Press Institute about the Law Lords' decision that Jeremy Warner, business correspondent of The Independent, must disclose confidential sources of information.

The Attorney-General: I have received a letter from the director of the International Press Institute about the recent House of Lords decision which concerned Mr. Warner. In that letter he protested over what he said was governmental interference with the free press. Such an allegation is unfounded. Mr. Warner was asked, by independent inspectors appointed under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 to carry out investigations into possible offences under the insider dealing legislation, to identify his source of information for two articles which he had published. His refusal to answer those questions was referred by the inspectors to the court for the court to inquire into the refusal under section 178 of that Act. The court is empowered to punish someone who so refuses as if he were in contempt of court unless he has a reasonable excuse. The House of Lords held that Mr. Warner did not have a reasonable excuse in this case, essentially on the ground that the information which the inspectors required from him was necessary for the prevention of crime.

Kimberley Carlile

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Attorney-General what action the Director of Public Prosecutions is taking concerning a recommendation of the report of the commission of inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Kimberley Carlile that an inquiry should be set up as to why the prosecution of Mr. Hall and Mrs. Carlile was so long delayed.

The Attorney-General: Notwithstanding the recommendation in its report, the commission did not itself inquire into the reasons for the delay which it alleged. The Crown prosecution service was not represented at the inquiry; it was given no notice that this matter was in issue, nor was it afforded any opportunity to comment on any of the conclusions or recommendations in the report before it was published.

The Director of Public Prosecutions has inquired into the sequence of events, which was as follows. The defendants were charged with murder on 10 June 1986, two days after Kimberley's death. Mrs. Carlile's legal advisers did not agree to a formal committal for trial, but exercised their right to make legal submissions on 15 September 1986 when both defendants were committed for trial to the Central Criminal Court. In November 1986 the court itself fixed 5 May 1987 for the start of the trial. In the meantime, the London borough of Greenwich had begun wardship proceedings, and the question arose whether those proceedings should be heard before or after the trial; Mr. Justice Wood later ruled that they should be heard after the trial. It was plainly desirable that the trial should take place as soon as possible. Accordingly, on 26 January 1987 prosecuting councel instructed by the Crown prosecution service applied to the Common Serjeant to bring the date of trial forward. This application was refused on the grounds that a vital prosecution witness was unavailable to give evidence in parts of March and April and no court could be found for the trial at any other time before 5 May. The trial did begin on 5 May and concluded on 15 May 1987.

The director is satisfied that in all the circumstances the Crown prosecution service was in no way to blame for the lapse of time between the charging of the defendants and their trial.

ENERGY

Electricity Requirement

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the projected electricity requirement in 1977 for the 10-year period 1977-1987; and what have been the actual usage figures during the past 10 years.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the Electricity Council. I shall ask the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Domestic Fuel Charges

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made in equalising the burden of domestic electricity charges as between different regions; if he will tabulate information available to him on the changes in prices in each board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the Electricity Council and I shall ask the chairman to reply to the hon. Member.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list in the Official Report the names of his advisory committees, together with an indication of those whose members are required to sign a declaration under, or who have otherwise had drawn to their attention, the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Parkinson: My Departmental advisory bodies are:

The Advisory Council on Research and Development for Fuel and Power;
The Offshore Energy Technology Board;
The Offshore Industry Liaison Committee;
The Offshore Safety and Technology Board; and
The Renewable Energy Advisory Committee.

These bodies may generally be expected to have access to official information: where relevant, their members therefore either have their attention drawn to the provisions of the Official Secrets Act, or are asked to make an appropriate declaration.

Central Electricity Generating Board

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to how many people work in the generation development and construction division of the Central Electricity Generating Board; and at what locations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board, and I shall ask the chairman to reply to the hon. Member.

Electricity Supply

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department has made any studies or employed any external consultants, or has any plans to do so, to assess the economic and technical feasibility of linking the United Kingdom national electricity distribution grid to Iceland via cables, for the import of electricity generated in Iceland for use in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The supply of electricity in bulk is the responsibility of the electricity generating boards. I understand that, at present, the Central Electricity Generating Board has no plans to commission any feasibility studies.

Mr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to meet the general manager of the Icelandic Power Company, Mr. Halloor Jonatansson, to discuss the prospects of a power cable link-up between Iceland and the national grid, for the import of power generated in Iceland to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The supply of electricity in bulk is the responsibility of the electricity generating boards. I understand that representatives of the Icelandic Power Company have had informal discussions with the Central Electricity Generating Board. The board is keeping the possibility of a cable link under review.

Electricity Supply Industry (Revenue Collection)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has received the third response by the electricity supply industry to the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the revenue collection systems of four area boards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have now received from the Electricity Council, on behalf of all area boards, its third response to the report of the MMC published in January 1985 on the revenue collection systems of the East Midlands, South Eastern, North Eastern and South Western area electricity boards (Cmnd. 9427). I am placing copies of the response in the Library of the House.

This final response notes the progress made and the conclusions reached in reviewing the MMC's recommendations since my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) announced receipt of the second response on 29 July 1986, at columns 361-62. In particular,

—each area board has now set itself targets for reducing meter reading, billing and collection costs. Progress in achieving the targets is monitored regularly as is performance between boards;

—a detailed study indentifying 'best practices' in revenue collection procedures has been completed and all boards are responding positively to its conclusions;

—detailed methods of allocating revenue collection costs based on national accounting guidelines are operated for the purposes of both management cost control and inter-board comparisons. All boards have reviewed their allocation practices to ensure that they comply with these guidelines.

The industry is continuing to keep revenue collection practices under review and the response concludes by noting that privatisation may bring about further changes in these.

The MMC's report and the response of the industry to its recommendations have been a valuable contribution to improving efficiency.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will announce the level of student grants for the year 1988-89.

Mr. Jackson: Subject to Parliament's approval of the necessary regulations, the main rates of student grant will be increased by 4 per cent. in the 1988-89 academic year. In England and Wales the new rates will be as follows (rates for 1987-88 are show in brackets):

	Undergraduate (£)	Postgraduate (£)
Hall or lodgings
(i) London	2,425 (2,330)	3,630 (3,492)
(ii) Elsewhere	2,050 (1,972)	2,975 (2,859)
Parental home	1,630 (1,567)	2,160 (2,070)

The threshold for parental contributions, and the points on the contribution scale at which the rate of contribution changes, will be uprated on average by about 6·5 per cent. Parents whose residual income is below £9,900 will not be assessed for a contribution. The minimum contribution will be increased from £40 to £50 and the maximum, which in general applies only to parents with more than one child in receipt of grant, will rise from £4,600 to £4,900.

The full parental contribution scale for 1988-89 will be as follows:

Residual income £	Contribution £
9,900	50
10,000	64
11,000	207
12,000	350
12,600	435
12,700	455
12,800	475
12,900	495
13,000	515
14,000	715
15,000	915
16,000	1,115
17,000	1,315
18,000	1,515
18,400	1,595
18,500	1,620
19,000	1,745
20,000	1,995
21,000	2,245
22,000	2,495
23,000	2,745
24,000	2,995
25,000	3,245
26,000	3,495
27,000	3,745
28,000	3,995
29,000	4,245
30,000	4,495
31,000	4,745
31,620	[1]4,900

[1] Maximum.

Notes:

1. For 1988-89 the level of contribution will be assessed at £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £9,900 to £12,600; then £1 in £5 to £18,400; and £1 in £4 thereafter. (In 1987-88 it is assessed at £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £9,300 to £11,800; then £1 in £5 to £17,300; and £1 in £4 thereafter.

2. The contribution payable may be less than the amounts shown on the scale, particularly at its top end and where the contribution is in respect of one award-holder only. This will depend on the amount of grant against which the contribution has to be set and whether any of the assessed contribution is offset by alowances for other dependent children.

Primary Schools

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to respond to the Third Report on the Select Committee on Education, Science and Arts on achievement in primary schools, Session 1985-86, H.C. 40-I.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 16 December at column 517.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is (a) the number of primary schools in England and Wales, and (b) the number of children of primary school age in England and Wales.

Mr. Dunn: The number of maintained primary schools in England in January 1987 was 19,432 and the number of children of primary school age was 3,389,261.

The corresponding figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average number of computers in primary schools in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are, on average, two microcomputers in each primary school in England and Wales.

Science Teachers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many additional science teachers are estimated to be required, if his plans for city technical colleges and the core curriculum go ahead in their present form.

Mrs. Rumbold: The establishment of city technology colleges will lead to a small increase in demand for teachers of science, mathematics and CDT. But once established their success may well attract back into the profession science teachers who have left, while also stimulating new entrants. It is too early to give a precise estimate of the demand for additional science teachers generated by our proposals for the national curriculum. We are already planning for the national curriculum to be introduced within an overall pupil to teacher ratio at its lowest ever level of 17:1 by 1989. Within that context, schools and local authorities must ensure that they make the best use of the skills and specialisms of the existing teacher force. For our part, the Department will be monitoring likely demands closely so as to arrange future intitial teacher training allocations on the basis of satisfying the needs of the national curriculum.

Student Statistics

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students are in the final year of a science degree in the current year; what proportion that figure is of the total number of students in their final year; and what is his best estimate of the total number of students over the next three years.

Mr. Jackson: In 1986-87 it is estimated that there were 24,200 final year full-time and sandwich students in Great Britain on science first-degree courses, 21 per cent. of all final year first-degree students.

Projections of fiscal year students are not available. The total number of science graduates, including those from part-time courses, in Great Britain in 1985-86 was 24,800, 21 per cent. of all first-degree graduates, and is projected to increase to 25,800, 26,800 and 26,100 in 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 respectively.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much money he has allocated for investment in city technology colleges in accordance with clause 80 of the Education Reform Bill; and what is the maximum percentage of the capital and current expenditure that his Department is prepared to pay.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government's plans allow for public expenditure on the CTC programme, both current and capital, of £4 million in 1987-88 rising to £33 million in 1989-90. My right hon. Friend expects a substantial proportion of capital costs to be met by th private sector. He will provide an annual per capita grant to each CTC in line with costs in an LEA maintained school in similar circumstances.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the estimated outturn expenditure on city technology colleges for 1987-88, and what was the outturn for 1986-87.

Mrs. Rumbold: There was no expenditure provision for city technology colleges in 1986-87. For 1987-88 provision has been set at £4 million, including running costs within the Department. Final outturn will be within this figure but will depend on progress with building work in the first two CTCs and it is too early to make any estimate.

Epilepsy

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of the progress to date of the recommendations relevant to his Department contained within the report of the working group on services for people with epilepsy.

Mr. Dunn: A joint circular was published by DES and DHSS in July 1986 which drew the attention of education, health and social services authorities to this report. The recommendations on educational matters are directed not at my right hon. Friend, but at local education authorities. It is for individal LEAs to consider the recommendations of the report.

Consultative Documents (Responses)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the names of local authorities and representative bodies concerned with education and other institutions from whom he has received representations in response to his consultative documets entitled (a) "Admission of Pupils to Maintained Schools", (b) "Financial Delegation to Schools", (c) "Collective Worship in Schools", (d) "Academic Tenure and Related Matters", (e) "The National Curriculum 5-16", (f) "Maintained Further Education: Financing, Governance and Law", (g) "The Organisation of Education in Inner London", (h) "Regulations on the Keeping and Disclosure of Pupil Records", (i) "Accounting and Auditing in Higher Education" and (j) "Grant Maintained Schools".

Mr. Kenneth Baker: We have had some 20,000 responses to the main consultation papers. These include responses from 82 local education authorities and from a very wide range of representative bodies, including all the main teachers' associations, the National Confederation of Parent-Teacher Associations, the National Association of Governors and Managers and Church bodies. We have also received responses from some 400 school governing bodies and in relation to some of the consultation papers from more than this number. To list all these responses in the form requested by the hon. Member could be done only at disproportionate cost. My Department has, however, placed in the Libraries of the House copies of all responses to the consultation papers other than those from individuals.

Capital Programmes

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decisions he has now made in respect of the capital programmes of local education authorities for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) on 19 November at column 611.

Local Education Authorities

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each local education authority in England (i) the pupil to teacher ratios, (ii) per capita expenditure and (iii) O and A-level pass rates, for each of the years 1974 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the names of his advisory committees, together with an indication of those whose members are required to sign a declaration under, or who have otherwise had drawn to their attention, the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mrs. Rumbold: The following bodies act as advisory committees to the Secretary of State for Education and Science:

Advisory Board for the Research Councils (ABRC)
Computer Board for Universities and Research Councils
Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education
Interim Advisory Committee on Teachers Pay
National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education
Open University Visiting Committee
University Grants Committee
Visiting Committee for Cranfield Institute of Technology
Visiting Committee for the Royal College of Art
Voluntary Sector Consultative Council
Schools Curriculum Working Groups (Science, English, Maths)
National Advisory Council for the Youth Service.

Of these bodies, only the ABRC requires members to sign a declaration that their attention has been drawn to the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was (a) Government and (b) local authority spending on education, including higher education, expressed per household for 1979 and for 1986-87 at (i) current prices, (ii) 1979 prices and (iii) 1987 prices.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is as follows:

Expenditure (£) per household[1]

	Cash terms	1978-79 prices[2]	1986-87 prices[2]
1978-79 expenditure
—by Central Government[3]	53	53	103
—by Local Authorities[4]	391	391	761
1986-87 expenditure
—by Central Government[3]	104	54	104
—by Local Authorities[4]	754	388	754

During this period the relevant number of households increased from 16·8 million to 17·9 million.
[1] Estimated mid-year count of households in England.
[2] Cash terms have been converted into 1978-79 and 1986-87 prices using the Gross Domestic Product (Market Prices) Deflators.

[4] Total Department of Education and Science local authority current and capital spending (from Public Expenditure White Paper).

Sir David Phillips

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will seek to obtain a transcript of the speech to the Parliamentary and Scientific Committee by Sir David Phillips FRS, relating to the funding of university research.

Mr. Jackson: Sir David Phillips has sent my right hon. Friend the text of his speech, and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library.

University Research

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he hopes to make a statement on the funding of university research.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend announced on 3 December the Government's revised expenditure plans for universities and the science budget. He is currently considering advice from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils on the allocation of the science budget and he will make a statement on that as soon as possible.

The Government are also considering the recommendations in the ABRC's discussion document "A Strategy for the Science Base" and the many comments on them received during the recently concluded consultative exercise. My right hon. Friend will announce the Government's conclusions on policy for the science base in 1988.

Co-ordinating Committee on Marine Science and Technology

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will now set out the composition and terms of reference of the Co-ordinating Committee on Marine Science and Technology, announced in Cmnd. 9861.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The new Co-ordinating Committee on Marine Science and Technology will include representatives of relevant Government Departments, research councils and independent members reflecting the broad range of activities the committee will address.

The chairman will be Sir John Mason, CB, Dsc, FRS.

Other members from outside Government will be:

Admiral Sir Lindsay Bryson, FRSE, FEng. — Chairman, Marine Technology Directorate Ltd.

Dr. D. L. Georgala, CBE — Industrial Consultant, Laboratory of the Government Chemist.

Mr. D. E. Lennard — Managing Director, Ocean Thermal Conversion Systems Ltd.

Prof. Tom Patten, CBE, FEng, FI Mech E, FRSE— Chairman, Seaboard Lloyd Ltd.

Prof. Ernest Naylor DSc., FIBiol — Lloyd Roberts Professor of Zoology, University College of North Wales, Bangor.

Sir David Smith, FRS — Vice Chancellor of Edinburgh University.

One further member, from an industrial background, is to be appointed later.

Departmental members will be drawn from the Department of Trade and Industry, Energy, Environment, Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, Transport; and the Ministries of Agriculture, Food and Fisheries, and of Defence.

The committee will have assessors from the Department of Education and Science, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Cabinet Office.

The committee's terms of reference will be:

To co-ordinate Government-funded and related activities in marine science and technology, advising and reporting to the Government through the Secretary of State for Education and Science, and in particular to:

i. develop a national strategic framework, having regard to available resources and taking full account of the responsibility of Departments, research councils and industry in developing their own strategies;

ii. draw attention to areas, or potential areas, of duplication, overlap or omission;

iii. identify and consider the relative priority of fields of major scientific, technological or economic promise;

iv. promote the role of the United Kingdom in the European Community and other international collaboration; and

v. monitor progress within the national strategic framework.

The Committee is expected to meet for the first time in January 1988.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the amount available for capital expenditure on schools and further education establishments in 1988-89, including the voluntary aided sector.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Local education authorities have today been informed of their allocations of prescribed expenditure for 1988-89, and of the allocations for capital spending by the governors of voluntary aided and special agreement schools in their area. The allocations, which include an element of £55 million for new school improvement projects, are as follows:

[1] Expenditure for 1988-89 is included in the Governors column of the main list.

Capital Allocation (Calderdale)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decision he has reached now that he has received Calderdale's bid for capital allocation for 1988-89, concerning the £1·2 million needed to implement the Commission for Racial Equality's proposals.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry).

Calderdale's allocation for 1988-89 is 92 per cent. higher than its original allocation for 1987-88.

Alllocations in respect of prescribed expenditure are unhypothecated and it is up to Calderdale local education authority to decide how to use the resources available.

Higher Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will announce his decisions on provision for polytechnics and colleges in 1987-88 and on the distribution of the advanced further education pool and voluntary sector quantum for 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have today written to the chairman of the committee of the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education (NAB) in response to the committee's advice on the disposition of student numbers in polytechnics and colleges in 1988-89, and on the basis for distributing the advanced further education quantum of £781 million and the voluntary sector quantum of £56·7 million which I announced in the House on 3 November and the direct grant agricultural colleges quantum of £3·87 million. I have accepted that advice in full.

Following my announcement that the resources available for polytechnics and colleges in 1988-89 would be 9 per cent. up on the current year, NAB recommends that student access should be further expanded. The plans for 1988-89 provide for over 7,000 more places and an increase in recruitment of over 3 per cent. compared to the targets set in 1987-88. That is fully adequate to meet known demand. Within the total, the targets allow for further increases in enrolments in the priority areas of science, engineering, technology and design.

As in previous years, the greater parts of the advanced further education quantum and of the voluntary sector and direct grant agricultural colleges quantums are being allocated in relation to target student numbers. The allocations make allowance for the differential costs of provision between subjects. They supplement the level of funding per student in respect of those institutions where higher education exceeds a quarter of total provision. This is in recognition of the greater costs associated with a concentration of higher education.

The allocations announced today include just under £25 million for a range of selective initiatives in areas of high priority and institutions of recognised strength. This expenditure supports the following purposes:

—£1·91 million to meet the recurrent costs of the continuing participation by eight polytechnics in phase 2 of the engineering and technology programme;

—£9·81 million to fund applied research of relevance to industry;

—£1·05 million to support the launch of new courses in manufacturing systems engineering;

—£4·89 million to continue the funding of new courses in science and engineering, particularly conversion courses which will equip those with non-science backgrounds to enter advanced courses in the technologies, and for the development of new courses of teacher training in shortage subjects for non-traditional students;

—£2·27 million to provide for an increase in technicians in support of high technology courses;

—£4·17 million to maintain the expansion of continuing education and professional updating (PICKUP);

—£560,000 to provide continuing support for research in the biotechnology field;

—£250,000 to support course development in selected centres of hotel and catering work.

£300,000 is also being allocated to support selective work in the voluntary colleges in the teacher training field and £50,000 is being allocated to the direct grant agricultural colleges to support PICKUP.

Letters are today being sent to local education authorities with copies for their institutions notifying them of my decisions. Copies of my letter to the NAB committee chairman, and of a note explaining the method by which the three quantums for 1987-88 are being distributed, together with full details of the allocations, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Inner London Education Authority

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decision he has taken on the application from the Inner London education authority for re-determination of the expenditure level for 1988-89 which he set in July; and what maximum he proposes to prescribe for the Inner London education authority's precept in that year.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Having considered the Inner London education authority's application, I have decided to re-determine the expenditure level for 1988-89 at £970 million, £15 million higher than the level I set in July. The addition is specifically to assist the authority to meet the one-off costs of making the substantial reduction in its spending which is urgently needed. I have therefore, following consultation with the authority, imposed a requirement that the additional £15 million should be used only for the purpose of meeting obligations to staff who leave the authority by reason of redundancy or in the effective discharge or efficient exercise of the authority's functions. I have today notified the authority of these decisions. I have also notified it of my proposal to prescribe a maximum precept for 1988-89 of 80·56p, which would on the latest information available enable the authority to raise £970 million. The proposed precept maximum is 0·8p more than the current year's precept, an increase of 1 per cent. I have given the authority until 12 January to inform me whether it accepts the proposal.

Teachers (Training)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what support he will provide for the in-service training of teachers in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I announced on 7 August my intention of making available grant of £119 million in 1988-89 to support local education authorities' expenditure in-service training for teachers and certain other groups in the education service. Authorities have responded with proposals for expenditure of £290 million, compared to £265 million this year; a 9 per cent. increase. They have also made proposals for further developing their arrangements for managing training, so that training can be increasingly accurately matched to staff development needs.

I have decided to confirm the grant to be made available at the levels provisionally indicated to local education authorities in August, with some minor adjustments in the light of later indications of authorities' intentions for certain categories. I have taken no decision, however, in respect of one authority, Tameside, which has yet to submit full proposals. In two cases, Haringey and Liverpool, I am not satisfied with progress with the development of arrangements for managing training, and I am therefore attaching specific conditions to their grant.

Teachers (Pensions)

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he proposes to make any changes to the arrangements whereby teachers can cover for pension purposes periods when they are on strike.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: At present teachers who go on strike can safeguard their pensions using arrangements designed to protect teachers whose pensionable employment is interrupted for other reasons. They can elect under what are known as "current added years" arrangements to maintain pension cover during their absence by paying the employer's and employee's contributions which would have been paid if pensionable employment had continued — at present 15·45 per cent. of salary. The cost of pensions increase (index-linking) is borne by the Exchequer. I have come to the conclusion that teachers who decide to withdraw their services by striking should no longer be able to take advantage of these arrangements. Under amendment regulations which I have today issued for consultation to representatives of the local authorities, and teachers, I propose to restrict the opportunities that teachers who go on strike will in future have for covering their absences for pension purposes.

The effect of the amendments I am introducing will not prevent teachers altogether from covering these absences. To do so, however, they will need to meet the full cost (including pensions increase) under what are known as "past added years" arrangements. The regulations specify a minimum period of 30 days which may be covered in this way, except at the point of retirement when teachers will be able to cover any period by deduction of contributions from their lump sums.

Governors

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he intends to take in preparing to select governors for the polytechnics and other colleges of higher education to be transferred from local authority control under part II of the Education Reform Bill.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Subject to the successful passage of the Education Reform Bill, I would wish to appoint the new boards of governors as soon as possible after Royal Assent, so that they have time to make preparations before assuming full responsibility for the conduct of their institutions. I shall look to a number of sources for suggestions for the independent lay members; other members will be nominated by the bodies identified in the Bill. The director or principal is also to be a member.

It is in the general interest that the transfer is as smooth as possible. Preparations are needed on a contingency basis before the Bill is passed. I am therefore taking steps to establish a small, informal group for each institution to help with identification of possible governors and to offer advice to the institution as it prepares for incorporation. Each group might have about five to six members, plus the director or principal. It would be desirable to include some members of the existing governing bodies. We are writing to chairman of the present governing bodies, and to the directors or principals of the institutions concerned, seeking their help in identifying suitable people.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from the high commissioner regarding the actions of Greek Cypriot women who recently crossed into the Turkish occupied area of Cyprus to express their opposition to the division still existing in the island of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The High Commission has sent a full report on the demonstration that took place on 22 November. We understand that about 150 women, and some men, crossed the United Nations' buffer zone and reached the Turkish-Cypriot controlled area of Cyprus where they sat down and spent some hours, before being persuaded to return voluntarily by members of the United Nations' Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP).

Member's Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now reply to the letter sent to him on 5 October by the hon. Member for Gower, regarding problems relating to a constituent residing in Langland, Swansea.

Mr. Eggar: A reply was despatched on 13 November. A copy will be sent to the hon. Member.

Middle East

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Israeli Government about the implications for the peace process in the middle east and observance of human rights of the recent disturbances on the West Bank and in Gaza, and the temporary closure of Bethlehem university; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We take every appropriate opportunity to stress to the Israelis the importance of respecting human rights in the occupied territories.

Food (Radiation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent European Community agreement on radiation levels in food in an emergency.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, West (Mr. Spicer) on 16 December, at column 575.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to receive all members of representive delegations from Hong Kong on future visits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The reception of a delegation by ministerial colleagues is a matter for consideration on a case by case basis in the light of the composition of the delegation and its purpose.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with the Hong Kong Government concerning direct elections in 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the principle of direct elections in Hong Kong commencing in 1988;

(3) if he will make a statement on the progress of political reform in Hong Kong.

Mr. Eggar: Development in representative government in Hong Kong, including the question of the possible introduction of direct elections to the Legislative Council, is at present under review by the Hong Kong Government on the basis of an extensive survey of local opinion. The outcome of the review will be recorded in a Hong Kong Government White Paper following consultation between ourselves and the Hong Kong Government.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will meet a delegation from Hong Kong in 1988 to discuss direct elections and political reform; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the results of recent opinion polls conducted in Hong Kong on the Sino-British agreement to return Hong Kong to Chinese sovereignty.

Mr. Eggar: A recent opinion poll in Hong Kong on attitudes to the joint declaration recorded that 28 per cent. of respondents considered it very good or quite good for the people of Hong Kong, while 45 per cent. considered it good in some ways and not so good in others.

Uranium (Pakistan)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he possesses on the capability of Pakistan to produce weapons-grade enriched uranium at Golra.

Mr. Mellor: We have seen a press report on this subject and remain concerned at claims that Pakistan can produce weapons-grade enriched uranium at any site in Pakistan. However, we lack the evidence to be able to confirm or deny such reports. The Government of Pakistan have repeatedly assured us that their nuclear programme is purely for peaceful purposes. We have consistently urged Pakistan in turn to sign the NPT.

Mr. Mordecai Vanunu (Trial)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there has been any request by defence or prosecuting counsel for any official representations to be deposited on behalf of Her Majesty's Government in relation to, and if any member of the British embassy staff in Israel has been present at, the trial of Mordecai Vanunu.

Mr. Mellor: We have received no such request, nor has any member of Her Majesty's embassy in Tel-Aviv attended Mr. Vanunu's trial.

TRANSPORT

Passenger Transport Authorities

Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the final expenditure levels and the proposed maximum precepts for the joint board passenger transport authorities for 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I am today formally notifying the passenger transport authorities (PTAs) of the maximum precept levels I propose to prescribe in 1988-89, and of my decisions on applications for redetermination of expenditure levels where these were submitted.

Following my determination of expenditure levels (ELs) for each PTA on 23 July, five of the six authorities, the exception being South Yorkshire, submitted applications for redetermination under section 3(4) of the Rates Act 1984. My decisions on redetermination have been in the light of those applications and of further information provided by the PTAs.

I have decided not to increase the expenditure levels for the Greater Manchester and the Tyne and Wear PTAs, but that the expenditure levels of the Merseyside, West Midlands and West Yorkshire PTAs should be redetermined at a greater amount. In the case of Merseyside, the figure also takes account of my decision that the current power to capitalise interest charges on the Mersey tunnel debt, which expires on 31 March 1988, should be extended for only six months to 30 September 1988. The expenditure levels as now determined and the maximum precept limits which I propose for each authority are:

	Expenditure level £ million	Proposed precept limit Pence
Greater Manchester	80·0	15·58
Merseyside	64·1	26·50
South Yorkshire	41·5	30·35
Tyne and Wear	53·5	9·58
West Midlands	65·0	10·74
West Yorkshire	59·1	24·82

I have asked the authorities to inform me by 15 January 1988 whether they accept the proposed maximum precept levels.

London Stations (Escalators)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why prohibition notices were posted by the Railways Inspectorate on 10 escalators at four London stations in the first week of December.

Mr. David Mitchell: A delayed prohibition notice was served on London Underground Ltd. on 10 December in respect of escalator machine rooms at four stations. This was because work requested by an inspector had not been completed to the inspector's satisfaction.

Notting Hill Gate (Fire)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report from the management of London Regional Transport as to why no member of the London Underground staff alerted the fire brigade to a fire at Notting Hill Gate station on 10 December.

Mr. David Mitchell: Two incidents occurred at Notting Hill Gate station on 10 December 1987, neither of which was reportable to the Department. In the first a train arrived at the station with a dragging brake. The passengers were detrained and the train departed empty. A member of the public had meanwhile telephoned the fire brigade, which arrived but was not required. In the second a passenger reported smoke at the station but nothing was found and the brigade was not called.

King's Cross (Fire)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the full terms of reference of the King's Cross inquiry.

Mr. David Mitchell: The investigation is being held under section 7 of the Regulation of Railways Act 1871 which sets out its terms of reference.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report the names of his advisory committees, together with an indication of those whose members are required to sign a declaration under, or who have otherwise had drawn to their attention, the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Channon: The advisory committees for which I am responsible are:

Advisory Committee on Historic Wreck Sites
Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee
Landscape Advisory Committee
Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk road Assessment

The members of the standing advisory committee on the carriage of dangerous goods in ships are required to sign a declaration under the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Motor Cyclists (Leg Protection)

Mr. Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for how long his Department has been carrying out research into leg protection for riders and passengers of two-wheel vehicles; what is the amount of time expended on such research in man hours; and what is the cumulative cost so far of this research.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The estimated cost of leg injuries from motor cycle accidents is some £186 million per year.

The Transport and Road Research Laboratory carried out the first accident studies relating to motor cycles in 1970. These showed the need for leg protectors and a prototype design of protectors was exhibited as part of the first experimental safety motor cycle in 1979. The present in-depth study of leg protection began in 1982. Some of the work has been contracted out to Brunel university and to industry.

The research time spent specifically on leg protection has been 8½ man years (13,000 man hrs) at TRRL and 3½ man years (5,000 man hrs) at Brunel. The engineering support for this research has been considerable and the cumulative cost of all the work is about £1·25 million at 1987 prices.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to initiate the process of raising tolls on the Severn bridge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have not taken any decisions about increasing the tolls.

M1 (Repairs)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the total expenditure at constant prices on repairs to the M1 motorway for each year from 1970.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is not available for years before 1979. Figures for expenditure, at constant prices, on structural repairs to the M1 from 1979 onwards are as follows:

Financial Year	Expenditure £ million (GDP at 1985/86 prices)
1979-80	10·9
1980-81	14·7
1981-82	21·6
1982-83	32·4
1983-84	31·4
1984-85	29·0
1985-86	20·4

Final figures for 1986-87 are not yet available.

National Bus Company

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish full details of each National Bus Company subsidiary disposed of to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Fifty five National Bus Company subsidiaries have been sold since sales began in July 1986, 31 to their own managements or employees. The details are as follows:

Management/employee buy-outs
Badgerline Ltd.

The National Bus Company in its annual report and accounts published on 27 October forecast that sale of all 72 subsidiaries will be completed before the statutory deadline and that total proceeds will exceed the book value of assets. A report will be made to the House in due course on the aggregate proceeds of sale.

London Underground (Fires)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fires occurred on London Transport Underground which had some effect on passenger service in each of the years 1957 to 1975; and if he will give details of where and when these occurred.

Mr. David Mitchell: Details of all serious fires on London Underground during the period quoted are given in published reports, copies of which are in the Library. Lists of minor fires, in the detail requested, are being compiled and will be made available to the formal investigation into the King's Cross fire. It will be the responsibility of the investigation to establish the cause of the accident and the circumstances surrounding it.

Airports (Rateable Values)

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on (a) the rateable values and (b) the rates payable of airports within the British Airports Authority and Manchester airport in each year since 1983.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The full information requested is not held systematically by the Department of Transport. In particular no data are available on rateable values of the airports concerned. However, the prospectus for the offer for sale of BAA plc stated that rents and rates paid in respect of BAA airports for the years 1983-87 were as shown, and that rates accounted for about 95 per cent. of these sums.

	£ million
1983	17
1984	19
1985	20
1986	22
1987	23

Figures in respect of rates paid by Manchester international airport are available only for the years ended 31 March 1984 and 31 March 1985: £2,538,000 and £2,836,000 respectively.

I suggest that the hon. Member contacts the airports concerned direct for the remaining information he has sought.

Air Transport (Smoke Hoods)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Civil Aviation Authority has now announced the results of its consideration about the provision of passenger smoke hoods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) chairman announced on 16 December that the authority has decided that it should not at present make smoke hoods a mandatory requirement for British airlines and that the issue will be kept under active review. Civil aviation safety regulation is the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority.

A19

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in view of the continuing high accident rate on the A19 in the Easington district council area, he will bring forward his plans to install crash barriers so that such work can begin immediately.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Two contracts for the provision of central reserve safety fencing on the A19 in Easington district have been let. Work is expected to commence in January 1988.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received asking for the dismissal of the chairman of London Regional Transport.

Mr. David Mitchell: None, apart from the hon. Gentleman's.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will dismiss the chairman of London Regional Transport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Certainly not.

Secondhand Cars

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to combat the sale of unroadworthy secondhand cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Together with my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for corporate and consumer affairs, I had a useful discussion on 15 December with the Director General of Fair Trading and a range of local authority, motor trade and consumer organisations about this problem.

We agreed the desirability of amending section 60 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 to make it easier for trading standards officers to deal with sellers of unroadworthy vehicles. We are also exploring further the possible extension of trading standards officers' powers to inspect cars on garage forecourts.

Buyers of second-hand cars would be well advised to arrange a pre-sale inspection. An up-to-date MOT certificate is a guide to the condition of the main safety features such as brakes, steering and lighting.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the external financing limit for the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The external financing limit for the CAA for 1987-88 has been reduced from £15·3 million to £1 million. This reduction is made possible by extra receipts accruing on en route navigation charges mainly due to higher traffic levels than forecast.

Direction Signs

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the report on the review of direction signs will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The report on the review of direction signs is being published today and I have placed a copy in the Library, together with a copy of a letter which is being sent to those who commented. The report concludes that our present system of directional traffic signs is basically sound and still applicable to today's traffic conditions. However, it considers that there is scope for improving the application of current principles to ensure that signs are properly sited and there is continuity and consistency of information on them. We accept these conclusions of the report, and have already begun revising the traffic signs manual and related advice. In addition, arrangements are being made for a demonstration project at Guildford. I consider that good, clear signing is essential for road safety as well as making journeys easier for travellers.

The report makes a number of recommendations for change. Those for a system of tourist attractions are already being implemented and I am pleased with the progress being made. In addition, it recommends elimination of the confusing distinction between signs on non-primary routes and those on local routes by using only signs with black borders in both cases. These and other changes will be considered in the context of current revision of the traffic signs regulations.

The report also recommends development of standards for variable traffic signs so that the potential of these can be fully exploited in today's conditions. We accept this recommendation.

I would like to make it clear that the report does not recommend the replacement of traditional fingerpost signs on minor rural roads where traffic is light and speeds are low. These and other similar historic signs can be a valuable enhancement of the local environment where they are compatible with modern traffic conditions.

We consider that the improvements and changes needed can be implemented without imposing an undue burden on local authorities if phased in with other expenditure which will be needed anyway to establish and renew signs. The report envisages a 10-year programme of implementation involving about £1 million a year extra expenditure by local authorities but at this stage we consider it premature to specify a timetable for completion of the action arising.

We will be happy to consider any comments which anyone may have on the outstanding recommendations of the report and the views of the local authority associations on cost implications will be particularly welcome. It would be helpful if these could be submitted by Monday 29 February 1988.

PRIME MINISTER

Lawyers (Civil Service)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she is taking to ensure that Government lawyers are included in key policy-making decisions.

The Prime Minister: It is for Ministers to seek legal advice from within the Government legal service on these matters.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister how many vacancies for qualified lawyers have arisen in the Civil Service over the past year; how many have been filled; and what information she has on the reasons for the shortfall.

The Prime Minister: In the period 1 January 1987 to 30 November 1987, 104 vacancies for lawyers arose in the Government legal service and appointments were offered to 49 applicants.

The position in the Crown prosecution service is more complex, as the total complement of lawyers was increased during the relevant period. On 1 December 1986 there were 363 vacancies. In the period ending 30 November 1987 a further 306 vacancies arose, of which 178 were newly created posts and 128 resulted from retirements, resignations and deaths. In the same period, 180 vacant posts were filled, leaving 489 vacant on 30 November 1987.

Increasing demand for the services of lawyers has stimulated competition for lawyers of the quality required by the Government legal service and the Crown prosecution service.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the effects on the work of Government Departments of unfilled vacancies among lawyers in Government service.

The Prime Minister: Unfilled vacancies result in increased work loads for members of the Government legal service, and it is the Government's policy to fill these vacancies as soon as possible.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she received from the recent delegation from Hong Kong concerning direct elections and the joint declaration; what response she has made; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a letter from the recent delegation from Hong Kong and a reply will be sent in due course.

Civil Servants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the extent of the loss of confidence and self-respect amongst civil servants, referred to in the speech by Sir Robert Armstrong at the recent seminar organised by the Royal Institute of Public Administration; to what factors she attributes this lack of confidence and self-respect; what steps are being taken to alleviate the problem; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Sir Robert Armstrong's remarks were made in a talk in which his main concern was to describe all that has been achieved in terms of improvements of management and efficiency in the Civil Service, and to praise the dedication and loyalty with which these changes have been carried through. As he said, there is and always will be more to do, as needs change and systems develop. But I warmly endorse his statement that we have in this country a Civil Service which is second to none in professionalism and integrity, and which, by virtue of accepting and giving effect to these changes, is entitled to the recognition that it is also a Civil Service second to none in efficiency and effectiveness.

Earl of Leven

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will advise Her Majesty The Queen to terminate the appointment of the Earl of Leven as Lord Lieutenant of Nairnshire.

The Prime Minister: The nature of the communication between the Prime Minister and the Sovereign on such matters is confidential and is never disclosed.

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Industry

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has regarding the state of the construction industry in the first nine months of 1987.

Mr. Trippier: Output and new order figures for the first three quarters of 1987 indicate a healthy trend of strong growth, spearheaded by the private industrial and commercial sectors. For the third quarter of 1987, output figures of £6,321 million, 9 per cent. up on the same period in 1986, were the highest for 10 years. Total new orders, in the third quarter of 1987, stood at £5,574 million, 47 per cent. higher than the same quarter in 1986. Evidence of skills training and material shortages indicates that the industry is still adjusting to the higher levels of demand.

Bruntlandt Commission

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response Her Majesty's Government are making to the World Commission on Environment and Development report "Our Common Future," chaired by Mrs. Bruntlandt.

Mr. Moynihan: When the report, "Our Common Future", was launched in London in April, the Government immediately praised its forthright message that there would have to be a new era of economic growth if the world's environment was to be safeguarded. The Government's positive response to the report was summarised in greater detail by our permanent representative to the United Nations during a general assembly debate in October. I am arranging for copies of this speech to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Rating Reform

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received regarding the liability of full-time volunteers for the community charge; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy that full-time volunteers, such as community service volunteers, who have only a subsistence income and are not entitled to supplementary benefit, will not have to pay the full community charge.

Mr. Howard: I have received a number of representations about the liability of full-time volunteers for the community charge. Full-time volunteers will be eligible to apply for rebates of up to 80 per cent. of their community charge. Those with incomes equal to or below the level of income support will receive the maximum rebate.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish, for every London borough, metropolitan district and non-metropolitan district, the proportion of income which would be taken by the community charge in 1987-88 consistent with his figures of 17 November for community charges with no safety net, Official Report, column 484, single person with a gross income of (a) £3,000, (b) £4,000, (c) £5,000, (d) £7,500, (e) £10,000, (f) £15,000, (g) £20,000, (h) £30,000, (i) £50,000, and (j) £100,000, on the assumption in each case that the individual was not entitled to any social security support.

Mr. Howard: The proportion of gross income which would be taken, in each case, would be the community charge divided by gross income.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish, for every London borough, metropolitan district and non-metropolitan district, the proportion of income which would be taken by community charge in 1987-88 consistent with his figures of 17 November for community charges with no safety net, Official Report, column 454, for a married couple whose joint gross income was (a) £4,000, (b) £5,000, (c) £7,500, (d) £10,000, (e) £15,000, (f) £20,000, (g) £30,000, (h) £50,000, and (i) £100,000, on the assumption in each case that the couple were not entitled to any social security support.

Mr. Howard: The proportion of gross income which would be taken, in each case, would be two times the community charge divided by joint gross income.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the effect of a banded community charge for people with moderate incomes, as compared with a local income tax and Her Majesty's Government's proposal for a flat-rate community charge.

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the pay, the banded charge bill, and the range of the Government's community charge for a third-year student nurse, a newly qualified nurse, a teacher with five years' experience, and an experienced police constable, with 15 years' experience respectively, in Cambridgeshire.

Mr. Howard: In moving Second Reading of the Local Government Finance Bill, my right hon. Friend set out the drawbacks we see in a banded community charge — including the likely effect on those on moderate incomes.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how his proposals to replace the commercial rate with a unified business rate will affect payments from the landlords of holiday flatlets.

Mr. Howard: Holiday flatlets are likely to be regarded as domestic property under clause 50 of the Local Government Finance Bill, which provides that property is domestic if it is used wholly for the purposes of living accommodation. They would not therefore be rated. Instead it is likely that the standard community charge would be payable under clause 3 of the Bill.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the recent letter from the Data Protection Registrar concerning the community charge, and his response.

Mr. Howard: I have today placed in the Library copies of the Registrar's letter of 17 November and my response of 4 December.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what advice he will be giving to prisoners just before their release as to their responsibility to pay the community charge from their first day of freedom;

(2) what advice he will be giving to homeless persons which describes their responsibility to pay the community charge.

Mr. Howard: There will be widespread publicity about the responsibility of every adult to register and pay for the community charge. We shall be considering with the local authority associations what advice needs to be given to specific groups of people about their liability.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he is having with leaders of London borough councils to reduce the number of people from their area who are at present living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Roe: It is for local authorities to decide how to meet their duties under part III of the Housing Act 1985. Additional resources of £13·6 million were recently allocated to London authorities to help them reduce their recourse to bed and breakfast.

Housing Revenue Accounts

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list in rank order the deficits or balances for the housing revenue account of each English local authority for each of the last five years for which figures are available, together with the percentage of each council's housing revenue account which these figures represent;

(2) if he will list the total rent arrears accruing to the housing revenue account of each English local authority in each of the past five years for which figures are available, together with the percentage of the total rent bill which these figures represent, and the council's position in rank order of all English authorities.

Mrs. Roe: I regret that the information is not available in the form required. I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of homes owned by each English district council which have been empty for (a) up to two months, (b) two to four months, (c) four to six months, (d) six to nine months, (e) nine months to one year, (f) one year to two years and (g) two years or more, in each of the last five years for which figures are available, and the percentage of each council's housing stock these figures represent.

Mrs. Roe: Local authorities report the numbers of their empty council dwellings in their annual housing investment programme returns. These figures appear in the columns listed below of the "HIP1 All items prints", which are available in the Library.

I shall write to my hon. Friend providing the corresponding percentages of the authorities' stock as soon as possible.

Homelessness

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much of the special £25 million allocation for homelessness has been given to Waltham Forest; how many homeless people there are in Waltham Forest; what criteria were used in the distribution of this money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The extra resources were targeted to reduce homelessness and in particular recourse to bed-and-breakfast accommodation. In the third quarter of 1987 Waltham Forest LBC accommodated 190 homeless households. At the end of that quarter it had no one in bed and breakfast. None of the extra resources were allocated to Waltham Forest LBC.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the numbers of people who will be homeless during the fortnight of 18 December to 1 January.

Mr. Waldegrave: No estimate is made of future homelessness acceptances by local authorities under the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of persons in board-and-lodging accommodation.

Mr. Waldegrave: At 30 September 1987 there were an estimated 11,240 households temporarily accommodated in bed and breakfast by English local authorities under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest available figures for the number of people who are homeless.

Mr. Waldegrave: In the third quarter of 1987 local authorities in England accommodated an estimated 28,700 households under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985.

LDDC (Arts Centre)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the details of the consultancy remit from the London Docklands development corporation to Mr. Jeremy Wallington concerning a potential arts centre in the royal docks, together with a copy of his report and a statement of the cost to the London Docklands development corporation.

Mr. Trippier: The LDDC appointed Mr. Jeremy Wallington as a consultant on 1 May 1987 to explore the possible development of the K-S warehouses in the royal docks including their use for leisure, community and cultural purposes. The warehouses are owned by the corporation. The consultancy contract cost £13,000 plus the usual expenses. The consultant's report to the corporation contains commercially confidential information provided by the private sector and it would therefore be inappropriate to place the report in the Library.

Inner Cities

Mr. Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure that the inner-city initiatives Her Majesty's Government undertake reflect fully the potential for involving the construction industry in the manufacture, distribution and installation of energy-efficient equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 27 November 1987 at column 357. The Government's inner-cities initiatives provides the construction industry with a range of new opportunities.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the names of his advisory committees, together with an indication of those whose members are required to sign a declaration under, or who have otherwise had drawn to their attention, the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Ridley: The following are described as advisory bodies to my Department in the HMSO annual publication "Public Bodies 1987".

Black Country Limestone Advisory Panel
Building Regulations Advisory Committee
Inland Waterways Amenity Advisory Council
Local Government Boundary Commission for England
London and Metropolitan Government Staff Commission
New Towns Staff Commission
Property Advisory Group
Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee
Regional Councils for Sport and Recreation
Royal Fine Art Commission

Members of the Property Advisory Group have the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act drawn to their attention.

Housing Subsidy

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the housing subsidy figures for urban programme areas in England for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mrs. Roe: Payments of housing subsidy to urban programme authorities in respect of 1985-86 and 1986-87 are as follows:

	Housing subsidy 1985-86 £	Housing subsidy 1986-87 £

Block Grant

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the estimated outturn block grant figures for 1987-88.

Mr. Chope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the estimated outturn figures for urban development corporation spending for 1987-88.

Mr. Trippier: The estimated outturn public expenditure by English urban development corporations for 1987-88 is £133·4 million.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the cost of enterprise zones; and if he will show separately his estimate of the cost of (a) rate relief and (b) other tax reliefs.

Mr. Trippier: The latest estimate of the cost of enterprise zones will be available shortly with the publication of both the report by consultants and also the annual monitoring report.

Council Houses

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total number of local authority dwellings (a) which were vacant and available for letting, (b) which come into management through new buildings, (c) which come into management through acquisition or following modernisation or conversion and (d) which became available for letting for other reasons (i) in Greater London, (ii) in metropolitan areas outside London, (iii) in non-metropolitan areas in the south-east, (iv) in English non-metropolitan areas and (v) in English local authority areas, for each year from 1 April 1981.

Mrs. Roe: Following are estimates derived from local authorities' annual housing investment programme returns:

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the building of new local authority dwellings for rent.

Mrs. Roe: There should no longer be a presumption that local authorities themselves should take direct action to meet new or increasing demands for housing. The future role of local authorities will essentially be a strategic one identifying housing needs and demands, encouraging innovative methods of provision by other bodies to meet such needs, maximising the use of private finance, and encouraging interest in the revival of the independent rented sector.

Housing (Homeless Persons) Act

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to repeal the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act.

Mrs. Roe: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Derbyshire County Council

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the numbers employed by Derbyshire county council in each year from 1979, up to the present year.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Planning

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require every planning applicant to advertise at his cost the planning proposal on site.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Apart from statutory requirements for notification and publicity, I believe that it is best left to local planning authorities to decide the extent of local publicity which is desirable in the individual case.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he proposes that he, his planning inspectorate and local planning authorities, when assessing the impact of proposed retail developments, should take account of effects on a significant part, although not all, of a city centre, in the context of his recently circulated draft guidance which refers to assessing impact on town or city centres as a whole.

Mr. Waldegrave: New retail development can influence patterns of shopping and other activities throughout a city or town centre; it would be of doubtful utility to attempt to assess the possible effects on one area within such a centre.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what data and criteria considering planning applications and planning appeals use, where the impact of major retail development proposals on existing shopping centres has to be taken into account; and what action he is taking to ensure that up-to-date and suitable data are available.

Mr. Waldegrave: The relevant considerations are set out in a statement by the then Secretary of State on 5 July 1985, at columns 277-8, and quoted in the consultation paper on major retail development that I issued on 17 September. I understand that local authority representatives are preparing a paper for this Department on the need for further data on retailing.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he will give and what action he will take to deal with competing speculative proposals for major retail developments in an area which artificially raises site values, so preventing their redevelopment for other uses which do not command the same land values.

Mr. Waldegrave: I do not intend to interfere with the ability of developers and others to acquire land on such terms as they consider satisfactory.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take to ensure consistency in the treatment of all major retail developments proposals, so that they follow planning guidance, whether they are located in an enterprise zone, simplified planning zone or an area covered by a normal planning regime.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is inherent in the concepts of enterprise zones (EZ) and simplified planning zones (SPZ) that they are subject to different planning regimes from that which applies elsewhere. Whether a particular EZ or SPZ scheme grants permission for major retail development depends on the precise terms in which the scheme is framed.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he takes of the knowledge and advice of such bodies as Age Concern, the Disability Alliance and the National Consumer Council, in determining the needs of the less mobile so as to ensure that these are adequately represented and safeguarded in his planning guidance on major retail developments to local authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave: The draft planning guidance that we issued on 17 September drew attention to the needs of less mobile people for access to shopping facilities. Sections 29A and 29B of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 impose a duty on local planning authorities to draw applicants' attention to their responsibilities under legislation relating to disabled persons when granting permission for retail and other types of development.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that his planning guidance to local authorities on major retail developments is sufficiently up to date; and what steps he will be taking to ensure that that guidance is updated to take account of changing circumstances and retail pressures.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 17 September we issued a consultation paper seeking comments on a proposed new statement of planning policy on major retail development. We are now considering the comments received, with a view to publishing the final version shortly. Planning guidance is revised as necessary.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to change the present systems of control over imported hazardous wastes in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moynihan: The present system, which requires pre-notification of the movement of special wastes to be sent to the appropriate waste disposal authority, will be extended as part of the implication of EC directive 84/631 on the transfrontier shipment of hazardous waste. We intend to implement the directive as soon as possible.

Easington

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Easington of 11 November regarding grant-related expenditure allocations and safety nets relating to Easington district council.

Mr. Chope: I have written to the hon. Member today.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will make the allocations to local authorities for their housing investment programme in 1988-89.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend announced on 3 November 1987 that gross provision for capital expenditure by local authorities on housing in 1988-89 will be £3,048 million—£313 million higher than previous plans. This increase, which will enable local authorities to spend more on renovating their existing stock, has been made possible by the continuing success of the right to buy which has provided local authorities with a growing source of spending power to supplement their capital borrowing.

The gross expenditure provision allows for a total housing investment programmes (HIP) allocation of £1,150 million. This represents new borrowing consents for local authorities. Each housing authority is today being informed of its initial HIP allocation for 1988-89. Copies of the letters to local authorities and the schedule of initial allocations have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

The local authority associations have been consulted about the distribution of HIP allocations. After considering their comments, and bearing in mind his obligation to make allocations in relation to need, my right hon. Friend has decided to make the distribution on the following basis:

— £1,118·5 million is available for main HIP allocations. Every authority will receive at least 75 per cent. of its corresponding allocation for the current year.

— £11·5 million is available for the homes insulation scheme of which £8 million will be distributed with the main HIP allocations. £2·5 million will be reserved for further allocations under the scheme in accordance with demand and the remaining £1 million will be used to defray local authorities' administrative costs.

— £20 million is being reserved for additional allocations at a later date to authorities which face particular difficulties in meeting their obligations under the housing defects legislation.

Special provision has also been made, within the gross expenditure total, for additional allocations totalling £140 million under the estate action scheme. This represents an increase of 87 per cent. over provision for the current year, and reflects the early successes of estate action in assisting authorities to bring new life to run-down estates.

Only the initial allocations are being made today. The letters being sent to local housing authorities describe the procedure under which they can apply for additional allocations.

Housing Costs

Mr. Neillist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish figures showing the total United Kingdom costs of Government support for housing costs, at 1987 prices, in each year since 1979, distinguishing between (i) assistance to supplementary benefit recipients, (ii) rent rebates and allowances, (iii) rate rebates, (iv) mortgage interest relief, (v) improvement and thermal insulation grants, (vi) central Government subsidies to local authority and new town housing, and (vii) rate fund contributions to local authority housing; and what is the total charge since the financial year 1979-80 in real terms.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 14 December 1987]: The available estimates of central Government support for housing costs in the United Kingdom for the years 1979-80 to 1986-87 (at 1986-87 prices), including items (i) to (vi), are set out in the table. Revenue transfers between the general rate fund and housing revenue accounts (rate fund contributions) are at the discretion of the local authorities concerned. In England and Wales such transfers are taken into account in the calculation of block grant, which is paid on authorities' revenue spending generally and is not hypothecated individual items of expenditure. In Scotland transfers are similarly taken into account in the determination of housing support grat for each authority. There are no rate fund contributions in Northern Ireland.

There was an increase in real terms of just under 70 per cent. in the total of Government support for housing costs between 1979-80 and 1986-87 (excluding items for which no information is available in the relevant years—see table and notes as follows).

Notes:

[1] Using GDP deflator.

[2] n/a = information not available for that year.

[3] Includes figures for housing requirements in supplementary benefit, housing benefit supplement and water charges paid with housing benefit. Data for housing requirements in supplementary benefit are derived from SB assessments (which may be higher than amounts paid). Figures for this element are annualised from caseload samples in a particular week. Figures for other elements are from local authority claims data. Figures for supplementary benefit are not yet available for 1986-87, so this element has been excluded from the overall change figure given in the answer.

[4] Prior to 1982-83 help with rent and rates for supplementary benefit claimants was included in their benefit assessment.

[5] Information on the level of rate rebates in Northern Ireland is not available for the years 1979-80 to 1982-83. This element has been excluded from the overall change figure given in the answer.

[6] Option mortgage subsidy absorbed into mortgage interest tax relief (MIRAS) from April 1983. Does not include the cost of interest relief for landlords.

[7] Figures are outturn as published in appropriation accounts. Excludes voted expenditure in Scotland prior to 1982-83 because estimates and appropriation accounts were in a different format and comparable figures cannot be provided other than at disproportionate cost. Figures for voted expenditure in Scotland have been excluded from the overall change figure given in the answer. Outturn in 1986-87 is net of appropriations in aid (£43 million to the vote in England). There were no appropriations in aid in earlier years.

[8] Excludes the small amount of voted expenditure on housing schemes under the urban programme.

[9] Figures in the table may not sum due to rounding.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89;

(2) what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The latest estimate of expenditure for paid publicity and the associated staff costs, for my Department, including PSA, for 1987-88 is £4·6 million. Figures giving a breakdown between advertising and promotional material are no longer kept separately. Provision for 1988-89 has not yet been set.

Acid Rain

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's latest assessment of the effect of acid rain on Britain's trees.

Mr. Moynihan [pursuant to his reply, 7 December 1987, c. 16]: My Department is considering closely the results of the Forestry Commission's 1987 survey of United Kingdom tree health. The survey alone does not provide direct evidence for a role for acid deposition in tree health. However, the reported reduction in crown density of coniferous species and the condition of deciduous species underlines the continued need for studies aimed at identifying possible damage mechanisms as well as continuing the surveys to improve understanding of the trends in tree health. The Forestry Commission will be carrying out further analyses early next year. My Department is consulting scientists, including those engaged in the Department's research programme, and my noble Friend the Minister for Environment, Countryside and Water will be chairing a meeting to discuss the 1987 survey with a number of interested organisations in January.

THE ARTS

Mansfield Society of Artists

Mr. Meale: To ask the Minister for the Arts if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Mansfield Society of Artists to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Luce: I understand that, under under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 21 to 25 March 1988.

Yorkshire Watercolour Society

Sir Marcus Fox: To ask the Minister for the Arts if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Yorkshire Watercolour Society to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 1 to 5 February 1988.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Wind Power

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what experiments in wind power have been carried out in Northern Ireland; and to what factors he attributes the absence of wind power generating units in the Province.

Mr. Viggers: Northern Ireland Electricity is presently undertaking a study of the benefits of wind-powered electricity generation but there have been no practical experiments.

The Industrial Development Board has provided a research and development grant to a Northern Ireland company to manufacture a wind turbine for installation elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

The absence of wind-power generating units is largely attributable to the need to be satisfied on the long term reliability and economics of such installations.

Southern Education and Library Board

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish the names of the Southern education and library board's select list of contractors;

(2) how many building contractors have been added to the Southern education and library board's select list; and how many have been removed in each of the years from 1980 to 1987; and if he will name them;

(3) how often the select list of contractors has been reviewed by the Southern education and library board's selective tendering panel in each of the years from 1980 to 1987;

(4) if he will publish the names of the Southern education and library board's selective tendering panel;

(5) if he will publish the names and qualifications of the consultants who have advised the Southern education and library board's selective tendering panel in the last five years;

(6) if the Southern education and library board's selective tendering panel will, in future, advise contractors why they have been excluded from the select list;

(7) if he will publish the names of the firms of architects and designers employed by the Southern education and library board in the last five years;

(8) what criteria are used by the Southern education and library board's selective tendering procedure in (a) selecting contractors and (b) excluding contractors from the select list.

Dr. Mawhinney: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Joint Consultative Committee for Building

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who are the members of the Joint Consultative Committee for Building (NI).

Mr. Needham: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Belfast Area Plan

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will meet alliance party councillors to discuss the Belfast area plan; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, in the light of the failure of some councils to agree their conclusions within the time limits, he will accept submissions from individual parties on the Belfast area plan;

(3) if he will postpone the deadline for council submissions on the Belfast area plan, in the light of delays caused by the Enniskillen bombing incident and the Christmas holiday.

Mr. Needham: I will write to the hon. Member.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate the numbers in receipt of education maintenance allowances in each education and library board area in each year since 1980.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is as follows:

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	[1]1987
Belfast	167	235	271	244	221	229	230	200
North-Eastern	248	360	397	432	491	206	218	209
Southern	693	920	1,002	924	717	482	389	370
South-Eastern	208	247	291	238	190	155	140	130
Western	887	1,024	1,083	1,036	750	630	568	580

[1] Estimated.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what information is available to indicate the value of education maintenance allowances in each year since 1980;

(2) what information is available to indicate the assessment thresholds for education maintenance allowance in each year since 1980;

(3) what figures are available to indicate the real value of education maintenance allowance in each year since 1980 as a percentage of its value in (a) 1980, (b) 1983 and (c) 1987;

(4) if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy in relation to education maintenance allowance.

Dr. Mawhinney: The maximum payable by way of educational maintenance was £510 per annum in 1980, increasing to £570 in 1981 and to £595 in 1982.

In 1983 the maximum level was changed to £494 in recognition of the fact that supplementary benefit payments were automatically reduced by a sum equal to the amount by which educational maintenance exceeded that figure. The maximum level remains at £494.

The assessment threshold for education maintenance was £3,470 in 1980, rising to £3,970 in 1981 to £4,325 in 1982 and to £4,645 in 1983 at which level it remains.

The following are the comparative values of the years since 1980, expressed in percentage terms, with a value of 100 given to 1980, 1983 and 1987 respectively:

	1980 Per cent.	1983 Per cent.	1987 Per cent.
1980	100	103	103
1981	94	115	116
1982	90	121	121
1983	70	100	100
1984	67	96	100
1985	64	92	100
1986	60	86	100
1987	58	84	100

The future of the scheme in Northern Ireland is under review and I will make a statement when this has been completed.

Single Payments

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate the time taken to process claims for different categories of single payments in each of the social security offices in Northern Ireland at present.

Mr. Needham: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Staffing and Overtime Payments (Social Security Offices)

Mr Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration he is giving to making extra staff or overtime available to social security offices where pressure of work is adding delays to the processing of cases.

Mr. Needham: The position on workloads generally, including those in the social security offices, is monitored on a continuous basis and resources are deployed accordingly. Consideration is being given as to what extra resources may be needed to deal with the most recent increase in single payment claims in the social security offices.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate the number of people receiving invalid care allowance in Northern Ireland, the number of married women in Northern Ireland now receiving the allowance, the number of those who have received payments for arrears of benefit and the number of claims still to be processed.

Mr. Needham: At 15 December 1987 the number of people receiving invalid care allowance was 3,297, of whom 2,598 were married. Some 1,307 claims had still to be processed at that date. Information about the number of married woman who received arrears of benefit is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what staffing arrangements were made to accommodate invalid care allowance claims from married women; and whether such arrangements have any effect on the processing of attendance allowance claims.

Mr. Needham: Attendance allowance and invalid care allowance (ICA) are independent benefits and are administered together by the attendance allowance branch of DHSS. Since August 1986, the staff complement of the branch has been increaed by 34 staff, of which 22 were allocated to deal with the influx of claims for ICA from married women and 12 to cope with the continuing increase in attendance allowance claims. The substantial increase in the volume of claims together with the inexperience of additional staff had an adverse effect initially on the time taken to process attendance allowance cases. While the position has now shown a marked improvement the provision of additional resources is being considered in order to ensure the further improvement of clearance times for both benefits.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what figures are available to indicate the number of claimants, by benefit, who have deductions made from their benefit in respect of their spouse's receipt of invalid care allowance;

(2) what figures are available to indicate the number of married women claiming invalid care allowance who received no actual payments, or reduced payments, in respect of arrears for invalid care allowance claims due to their husband's receipt of other benefits over the period for which arrears would otherwise have been paid.

Mr. Needham: This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Allowances (Claims)

wMr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate the length of time taken to process claims for (a) attendance allowance, including cases which go to appeal and (b) invalid care allowance in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The average times taken to process attendance allowance and invalid care allowance claims are at present 14·4 weeks and 10·5 weeks respectively.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in any negotiations with leaders of political parties in Northern Ireland, he will make it his policy to consider proposals for a demonstrably better and more widely acceptable arrangement for ordering the structures of government in Northern Ireland and relationships with the Republic of Ireland, in place of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Tom King: The Government remain committed to the Anglo-Irish Agreement. At the same time, I have made clear that we are very ready to consider constructive proposals which can command widespread support. Our policy is to seek an agreed basis on which greater responsibility can be devolved to elected representatives in Northern Ireland.

Police Forces (Army Uniforms)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the answer of 15 December, if he will specify, in relation to the purchase by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland of British-style military uniforms (a) the number of invoices, (b) the date of each invoice, (c) the means by which each was paid and (d) the means and in whose property the items were transported to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I will write to the hon. Member.

Arterial Drainage Schemes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Government will extend to the drainage division of the Department of Agriculture, Northern Ireland, the policy adopted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in 1985 of publishing details of the methodology for the cost-benefit appraisal of arterial land drainage schemes, and the requirement for arterial drainage authorities to make available summary details of cost-benefit appraisals of arterial drainage schemes to the public on request.

Mr. Viggers: Details of the methodology now used for the cost benefit appraisal of arterial drainage schemes will be published by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland early in 1988. The methodology is broadly similar to that already published by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and deposited in the House of Commons Library on 9 July 1985. Summary details of cost benefit appraisals of future arterial drainage schemes will be made available to the public on request.

Mr. Chan Hok Chun

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Mr. Chan Hok Chun was deported from the United Kingdom; how many times he was interviewed by police officers in relation to allegations made against Royal Ulster Constabulary officers and others in Belfast; and if Mr. Chan Hok Chun has been asked to supply any further information since he was deported.

Mr. Stanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the investigations or allegations against the Royal Ulster Constabulary, about which he last wrote to the hon. Member for Bradford, West on 23 June, to be concluded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I will write to the hon. Member.

Remand and Bail Statistics

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average number of days on remand for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together and the total number of persons remanded in custody before trial for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together; and what was number of bail applications refused for (a) scheduled offences, (b) non-scheduled offences and (c) both together in the first half of 1987.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 11 December 1987]: In the first six months of 1987, 874 persons were remanded in custody, 235 bail applications were refused in respect of persons charged with scheduled offences, and 110 in respect of persons charged with non-scheduled offences. The average length of time spent on custodial remand for those who were tried in the period and who were in custody at the date of the trial was 122 days.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were remanded in custody before trial for (a) scheduled offences, (b) non-scheduled offences and (c) both together in the first half of 1987.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 11 December 1987]: Eight hundred and seventy-four persons were remanded in custody during the period, 501 of whom were charged with scheduled offences and 373 with non-scheduled offences.

Firearms (Deaths)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many persons in Northern Ireland have been killed by firearms in each of the last five years to the current year at the latest available date; of these, how many were killed by (i) legally held weapons, (ii) illegally held weapons and (iii) legally held weapons stolen from their owners; and for each year and category of weapons, how many persons died as a result of action taken by (a) the Army, (b) the Ulster Defence Regiment, (c) the Royal Ulster Constabulary and its reserves, (d) the Irish National Liberation Army, (e) the Provisional Irish Republican Army, (f) the Official Irish Republican Army, (g) the Ulster Volunteer Force, (h) the Ulster Defence Association, (i) other Republican terrorist organisations and (j) other Loyalist terrorist or paramilitary organisations.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 15 December 1987]: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many firearms certificates have been (a) renewed, (b) refused on application for renewal, (c) new applications refused and (d) new applications granted in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland; and in each case and year what types of firearms were listed on the applications for firearms certificates.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 15 December 1987]: The information is as follows:

	1883	1984	1985	1986	1987 (to end November
Renewals granted	17,016	30,066	22,463	17,933	25,814
Renewals refused	79	88	61	43	47
New applications refused	336	313	326	308	263
New applications granted	3,714	4,011	4,222	3,895	3,211

Information as to the type of firearm requested on each application is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Royal Ulster Constabulary officers and of what ranks and at what annual costs for (a) salary, (b) overtime and (c) other costs attributable to their duties are engaged at Royal Ulster Constabulary headquarters on the processing of firearms certificates at the present time; and what were the comparable numbers and costs five years ago.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 15 December 1987]: Five Royal Ulster Constabulary officers are engaged at RUC headquarters on processing firearms certificates. Their ranks are superintendent, chief inspector, inspector, sergeant and constable. The same number and ranks of officers were engaged in this work five years ago. The total annual cost for salaries, including allowances and overtime, in 1986-87, was £115,700. Additional costs for superannuation, accommodation and allied services were £41,900. The corresponding costs in 1981-82 were £84,800 and £20,500.

Students (Republic of Ireland)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by how much the allocation of funds to the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund has increased as a result of the obligation to meet the costs of educating students from the Republic of Ireland; and under what subhead these funds are listed in the Northern Ireland Estimates.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 15 December 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students from the Republic of Ireland are at present attending degree granting courses in Northern Ireland; how many of these have the costs of their education course met in whole or in part from United Kingdom funds; and what assessment he has made of the impact of this influx on the number of (a) Northern Ireland and (b) other United Kingdom students attending such courses.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 15 December 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest figure for the number of staff presently employed in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the number planned to be employed at this point in 1988.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The number of staff currently employed in the information service is as follows:

	Northern Ireland Office (London)	Northern Ireland Office (Belfast) and Northern Ireland Departments
Information Officer Grades	3	16
Clerical and Secretarial Support Staff	3	15

There are no plans at present for change in staff levels.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest figure for the estimated spending in 1987-88 by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material; and what are the estimated expenditures in each area for 1988-89.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The total figures for all forms of advertising in the Northern Ireland Departments in 1987-88 is estimated at £3,373,848. For 1988-89 estimated spending, detailed decisions on expenditure by media have not yet been taken but we expect the overall publicity figure to be £3,616,000.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest figure for the estimated expenditure by his Department on press and public relations for (a) 1987-88 and (b) 1988-89.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 17 December 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Rating Reform

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table to show for Northern Ireland as a whole the level of community charge which would raise sums equal to that raised by rates in each of the last five years.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" proposals do not apply to Northern Ireland. We have decided to monitor the development of the proposals in England and Wales before deciding whether or to what extent they should be applied in Northern Ireland. The monitoring exercise has not involved the calculation of the equivalent community charges and thus the figures requested are not available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Council Districts (Valuations)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table to show the net annual valuation of each of the council districts in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 17 December 1987]: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Ratepayers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table to show how many ratepayers there are in each council district in Northern Ireland and how many electors there were in each such district in each of the last five years;

(2) if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show sums raised from (a) local rates and (b) regional rates in each of the council districts in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 17 December 1987]: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Battery Hens

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report the changes from current regulations which will arise as a result of the application of the statutory rule 1987 No. 425 Welfare of Battery Hens Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1987; and if he will indicate the consultations that have taken place with the industry concerned before their introduction and what effect the application of these regulations will have on the number of battery hens kept in Northern Ireland at the present time and on the profitability of battery hens.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The principal change is the setting of minimum space requirements for battery hens effective for new cage installations from 1 January 1988 and for existing cage installations from 1 January 1995. All other requirements set by the regulations were already the subject of welfare codes and the Welfare of Livestock (Intensive Units) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1978 SR No. 360.

The industry was consulted at various stages of the basic European Community draft legislation and subsequently on the preparation of the Northern Ireland subordinate legislation.

The immediate impact on numbers and profitability of battery hens is negligible. As the standards required apply to the entire community there should not be any adverse effect peculiar to Northern Ireland.

Explosive Devices

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) on how many occasions anti-terrorist officer teams from the Republic of Ireland have dealt with explosive devices in Northern Ireland in (a) 1985, (b) 1986 and (c) 1987 to date;

(2) on how many occasions anti-terrorist officer teams from the United Kingdom have dealt with explosive devices in the Republic of Ireland in (a) 1985, (b) 1986 and (c) 1987 to date.

Mr. Stanley [holding answer 17 December 1987]: Procedures exist whereby in the course of clearing suspected or actual explosive devices on or near the border ammunition technical officers from the British and Irish armies may by invitation cross the border to facilitate their duties. These procedures have been highly useful and have been operated, but it would not be in the interests of security to give further details of incidents.

WALES

History Curriculum

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whom he intends to consult outside his Department in the preparation of a history curriculum for schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We expect to consult widely. The Education Reform Bill proposes that we should be required to consult the new Curriculum Council for Wales and any other person with whom consultation appears to me to be desirable.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to the document submitted by the English Historical Association on 2 February containing a proposed history curriculum for Britain; and what representations he has received about this document.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Historical Association's proposals were addressed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, but I understand they were subsequently withdrawn in view of the national curriculum provisions of the Education Reform Bill.

Nevertheless, we have received one representation about the Historical Association's document from the Association of History Teachers in Wales.

Urban Aid

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the schemes within the Dyfed county council area which have been granted urban aid in each of the past five years and in 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Walker: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Patent Office

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had regarding the possible transfer of the Patent Office to Swansea.

Mr. Peter Walker: None. I have, however, offered all assistance to my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, who is seeking suitable accommodation for the Patent Office in or near Cardiff.

Agriculture (Assistance)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has as to the amount of Government, European Community and other sources of finance and assistance made available for agriculture in (a) Wales and (b) Dyfed, in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Walker: Agricultural grants and subsidies paid in Wales in each of the past three financial years are estimated as follows:

	£ million
1984-85	103·9
1985-86	109·7
1986-87	121·3

Note: These figures exclude some items of expenditure which benefit farmers, such as expenditures on animal disease, research, advice and education.

Corresponding figures are not readily available for Dyfed.

Housing Revenue Account

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in rank order the deficits or balances for the housing revenue account of each Welsh district for each of the last five years for which figures are available, together with the percentage of each council's housing revenue account which these figures represent.

Mr. Grist: Local authorities are prevented from recording a deficit on the housing revenue account (HRA) by schedule 14, part IV (paragraph 4) of the Housing Act 1985. However, contributions are made from the rate fund (RFC) to the HRA, primarily to prevent a shortfall between income and expenditure on the HRA. Details of these contributions are as follows:

Empty Houses

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of housing properties owned by each Welsh district council which have been empty for (a) two months, (b) four months, (c) six months, (d) nine months, (e) one year and (f) two years or more in each of the last five years for which figures are available and the percentage of each council's housing stock these figures represent.

Mr. Grist: The information is only available for dwellings vacant for six months or more. The figures are given in the tables.

Pupil Costs

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much each education authority in Wales spends per pupil per year on (a) textbooks, (b) materials and supplies, (d) computers, (d) video recorders, (e) video cameras, (f) television sets and (g) papers and reprographics.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information in the form requested is not available. However, provisional information on the cost per primary and secondary pupils combined on text and library books together with educational equipment, stationery and material in respect of 1986-87 is as follows:

	At outturn prices £
Clwyd	34·6
Dyfed	31·8
Gwent	37·6
Gwynedd	43·4
Mid Glamorgan	39·2
Powys	40·7
South Glamorgan	38·5
West Glamorgan	44·5

Housing Revenue Accounts

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total rent arrears accruing to the housing revenue account of each Welsh district authority, in each of the last five years for which figures are available, together with the percentage of the total rent bill which these figures represemt and the council's position in rank order of all Welsh authorities.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Education Authorities

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all local education authorities in Wales in rank order of expenditure per secondary pupil per year, starting with the highest spending authority, together with their position in the table of examination results for school leavers achieving five or more O-levels at grades A to C or CSE grade 1 in the latest year for which both sets of figures are available.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information for 1985-86 is as follows:

	Expenditure per pupil[1]	School leavers examination results[2]
West Glamorgan	1,301	25·5
Powys	1,235	25·7
Gwent	1,203	22·9
Clwyd	1,131	27·1
Gwynedd	1,125	25·6
Dyfed	1,124	32·5
Mid Glamorgan	1,120	20·5
South Glamorgan	1,092	28·0

[1] Net institutional recurrent expenditure for secondary schools at outturn prices.
[2] Percentage of all leavers from maintained schools who attained 5 or more O levels (grades A to C) or CSE Grade 1.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide pancreatic enzyme replacement therapy free of charge for cystic fibrosis sufferers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The majority of cystic fibrosis sufferers are children aged under 16 years who are exempt from prescription charges. Some older patients may qualify for exemption under arrangements set out in the leaflet P11 available from post offices, chemists and DHSS offices. National Health Service prepayment certificates are also available to anyone who is not exempt from charges and these can lead to considerable savings.

Road Safety

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has, following the fatal accident involving a schoolboy at Queensferry, to improve road safety on the A494-A550 dual carriageway Ewloe to Shotwick.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Proposals currently programmed to improve pedestrian safety on the A494-A550 Ewloe to Shotwick trunk road comprise:

(1) Improved pedestrian crossing facilities at Plough lane overbridge and the closure of all gaps in the central reservation between Ewloe and Queensferry.
(2) A new pedestrian crossing facility near Sealand RAF camp.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve road safety at the junction of the A55 expressway, Hawarden bypass, and the A494 following the death of a cyclist in November; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The most recent recorded fatal accident involving a cyclist at this location was in April 1987.

Measures to improve safety for cyclists at this busy interchange are currently being considered.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, in the light of recent fatal and other accidents on the B5127 Mold Ewloe road, he will review all aspects of safety with a view to reclassifying this road as a trunk road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Clwyd county council has responsibility for all matters relating to the B5127 Mold to Ewloe road. The volume and type of traffic carried would not justify trunk road status.

Land Authority for Wales

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much land is owned by the Land Authority for Wales in each district authority area in Wales.

Mr. Grist: I have asked the chairman of the Land Authority for Wales to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the Land Authority for Wales has owned any land outside Wales at any time since its establishment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The authority's statutory functions relate only to the acquisition of land in Wales.

Epilepsy

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the progress to date on each of the recommendations relevant to his Department contained within the report of the working group on services for people with epilepsy.

Mr. Grist: The report of the working group was issued in Wales in November 1985 for consultation to health, social services and education authorities and to a wide variety of other bodies. Generally, it is for health and local authorities to consider what scope there may be for taking forward the working group's recommendations, but we are considering whether any further action could usefully be taken at the all-Wales level.

Post-Chernobyl Emergency

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the report he has received from the Welsh branches of the Country Landowners Association on his Department's handling of the post-Chernobyl emergency.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. The publication and distribution of the report is a matter for the Country Landowners Association.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report the names of his advisory committees, together with an indication of those whose members are required to sign a declaration under, or who have otherwise had drawn to their attention, the provisions of section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Peter Walker: The advisory committees which report to me are:

Agricultural Dwelling House Advisory Committees
Agriculture Advisory Panel for Wales
All Wales Advisory Panel on Development of Services for Mentally Handicapped People
All Wales Committee on Drug Misuse
Ancient Monuments Board for Wales
Committee for the Welsh Scheme for the Development of Health and Social Research Committee on Opportunities for Volunteering
Committee for Under Fives Initiative
Hill Farming Sub Committee for Wales
Historic Buildings Council for Wales
Housing Management Advisory Panel for Wales
Library and Information Services Council (Wales)
Local Government Boundary Commission
Place Names Advisory Committee
Wales Advisory Body for Local Authority Higher Education
Welsh Committee for Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education
Welsh Committee for Postgraduate Pharmaceutical Education
Welsh Dental Committee
Welsh Industrial Development Advisory Board
Welsh Medical Committee
Welsh Nursing and Midwifery Committee
Welsh Optical Committee
Welsh Pharmaceutical Committee
Welsh Scientific Advisory Committee.

Of these advisory committees only the members of the Welsh Industrial Development Advisory Board are required to sign a declaration under the Official Secrets Act.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are unemployed in (a) Ynys Môn, (b) Gwynedd and (c) Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: At 12 Novevember 1987, there were 4,254: 13,232 and 145,455 unemployed claimants respectively in Ynys Môn, Gwynedd and Wales.

Weighbridge, Deeside

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessments he has made of the impact upon road safety of the construction of a public weighbridge, off the B5127 Mold-Ewloe road, adjacent to the A494 roundabout at Ewloe, Deeside, and the consequent presence of heavy lorries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

The weighbridge site at Ewloe roundabout is one of the network of sites that the Department is developing on the major road network and at the main ferry ports to enforce the United Kingdom legislation of vehicle weights. Sites are selected in consultation with the local planning and highway authorities and police so that all the relevant considerations such as road safety can be taken into account.

Drug Advisory Committees

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much each of the drug advisory committees received in the last financial year.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: Central funding for projects to combat drug misuse is made available both to district health authorities and voluntary organisations. The sums approved for 1987-88 are as follows:

Clwyd Council for Drug Abuse	3,867
Dyfed Council on Alcoholism and Drugs	8,360
Gwynedd Drugs Council	7,838
Ogwr DASH	5,225
The Children's Society	14,075
SWAPA	30,255
Youth Link Wales	19,400
CWVYS	15,150
Clwyd Health Authority	129,348
East Dyfed Health Authority	73,224
Gwent Health Authority	116,764
Gwynedd Health Authority	78,285
Mid Glamorgan Health Authority	112,342
Powys Health Authority	30,675
South Glamorgan Health Authority	131,901
West Glamorgan Health Authority	51,577
Total	828,286

Drug Advisiory Committees (New Projects)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give extra cash for new projects in Wales as bid for by the drug advisory committees additional to recurrent expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: Our officials have these bids under consideration and decisions on applications will be made public early in the new year.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will grant £60,000 for new anti-drug projects to the Clwyd drug advisory committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: Clwyd health authority has bid for £43,600 for new projects and the merit of this bid is being considered along with the others received from district health authorities and voluntary organisations in Wales.

Nursery Schools

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the total public expenditure on local authority day nurseries, local authority playgroups and grants to the voluntary sector for provision for under-fives for each year from 1975 to 1985 and (b) the total public expenditure on these services as a percentage of gross domestic product for each of these years.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: I shall write to the hon. Lady and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what account he takes of a person's attitude towards the privatisation of the Health Service when considering appointments to the membership of health authorities in Wales; and whether knowledge of a person's attitude to this matter, or their general political attitude, is sought by his Department before it makes such appointments.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: Most members of health authorities are appointed directly by county and district councils or by my right hon. Friend after formal consultation with professional and other organisations connected with the Health Service. Our aim in filling the remaining generalist places is to achieve a balanced membership which will act corporately and responsibly to ensure that an authority's actions will be in the best interests of the people of the district it exists to serve.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what clarification or discussion he has had with Deloitte Haskins and Sells management consultants with regard to paragraph 53 of its final report on the financial position of Gwynedd health authority on the authority's financial position over the past two years and the underfunding of pay awards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 17 December 1987]: The factorss identified in the paragraph referred to have applied to other health authorities in Wales and there is no evidence therefore that the authority has been unfairly treated. Gwynedd health authority has benefited from the second highest rate of revenue growth of all Welsh health authorities—37 per cent. in real terms—since 1978-79, and has thus been better placed than most to meet demographic and inflationary pressures. Authorities must budget for such pressures within available resources and therefore any increases in pay and prices above their expectations must have consequences for the level of patient activity that can be afforded. Authorities participate in the Whitley pay bargaining machinery and cannot be insulated from the effects of pay settlements they have negotiated.

As far as the review body awards are concerned, the Government have in past years contributed to the excess cost of these awards over the allowance for inflation in authorities' allocations. This year, Gwynedd benefited from a contribution of £1·3 million towards the cost of these awards which, together with the allowance for inflation in the authority's allocation means that 96·7 per cent. of the cost of the awards has been met from specific funding.

Welsh Language (Ministerial Broadcast)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the interview broadcast by BBC Radio Cymru with the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Conwy (Mr. Roberts) on Sunday 13 December at 1 pm, on the subject of a new Welsh Language Act, represented Government policy.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [holding answer 17 December 1987]: My comments simply sought to amplify the reply given by my right hon. Friend to the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Raffan) on 10 December, at column 215.

SCOTLAND

Post Mortems

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the cost in (a) fees to consultants and (b) payments to health boards for post mortems done under fiscal licence in National Health Service hospitals for each year since 1980.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I regret that the information is not available.

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list the items of personal data that a community charge officer will need to hold in order to compile the community charges register.

Mr. Lang: The community charges register in Scotland will contain the names, addresses and dates of birth of people liable to pay the community charges, the dates from which they are liable, the names and addresses of responsible persons in terms of section 17(6) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, and certain further details relating to students. In addition, the community charges registration officer will need to make inquiries about residents who will shortly attain the age of 18, and about people who may be exempt from personal community charge liability, though these details will not appear on the register.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he will decide on eligibility for home improvement grants when, with the abolition of domestic rates, there will be no rateable valuations of domestic properties.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987 provides for the construction, from 1 April 1989, of references in enactments to the rateable value of domestic subjects. For the longer term, the improvement and repairs grant system in Scotland will be reformed as outlined in the White Paper "Housing: The Government's Proposals for Scotland" (Cm. 242), published on 11 November 1987. Under that reform, the present eligibility test based on rateable value will be replaced by a straightforward test of household resources.

Free Food

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland have received during the last 12 months free food distributed from surpluses which the Council of Ministers approved for such release.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information in the form requested is not available, but some 2,000 tonnes of butter and a similar quantity of cheese, 96 tonnes of beef, 1·4 million litres of milk and a small quantity of concentrated butter was distributed to needy people in Scotland under the previous EC scheme.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) which organisations in Scotland are in charge of future free food distribution following the permanent scheme for food surpluses recently approved in the European Community by the Council of Ministers;

(2) how many people in Scotland he estimates will receive free food in 1988, according to the recently approved permanent scheme for food surpluses in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The implications of the scheme recently adopted by the Council of Ministers are being carefully considered by the Government in consultation with the main charitable organisations. A financial ceiling of £69 million for the Community as a whole in 1988 will limit the quantities distributed and hence the numbers of recipients.

Bus Services

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received since deregulation was introduced about the quality of bus services in (a) Scotland and (b) Glasgow; and how many of them referred to (i) the frequency of the service for any specific line, (ii) the frequency of the service in general, (iii) price increases and (iv) the problems of elderly people in rural areas.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following table shows the number of representations received by the Scottish Development Department since deregulation day 26 October 1986 about the quality of bus services generally and by category.

Representations about the quality of bus services	Number
All Scotland	135
Glasgow	20
Representations referring to:
i. frequency of the service for any specific line (including withdrawals)	64
ii. frequency of the service in general (including withdrawals)	23
iii. price increases	6
iv. problems of elderly people in rural areas	2

Four petitions about specific routes and about the effects of deregulation in general have also been received.

Epilepsy

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to take any action in relation to services for people with epilepsy, in the light of the report of the working group on services for people with epilepsy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The working group's report was prepared for DHSS and the Welsh Office in 1984 and related to services in England and Wales only. Services in Scotland for people with epilepsy are provided by health boards and social work and education authorities as appropriate.

Anaesthetists

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the shortage of anaesthetists and the availability of epidural anaesthetics.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The provision of anaesthetic services is a matter for health boards taking into account local needs and priorities. The number of consultant anaesthetists in Scotland has risen from 216 in 1979 to 270 in 1986, an increase of 25 per cent. I am not aware of difficulties in the recruitment of anaesthetists.

Advice on the provision of epidural analgesia was contained in a report by the National Medical Consultative Committee on Obstetric Anaesthesia and Analgesia in Scotland which was issued to health boards in 1985.
